

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

PREFACE

The statutes collected in this Supplement connect, without break or duplication, with those contained in the 1919 Supplement. They are the general, permanent, and public acts passed by Congress between January 1, 1920, and December 21, 1920. These acts are classified according to the scheme of titles in the main work, and in using this Supplement the reader should examine the corresponding title to locate the late, amendatory, or repealing legislation on the topic under consideration.

The latter part of the volume is devoted to the supplemental notes. These supplemental notes connect directly with and continue those in the 1919 Supplement, and present all the subsequent decisions construing the statutes contained in the prior volumes. The arrangement is by title, volume, page, and section as the statutes are found in preceding volumes, and the investigator has merely to turn to the corresponding title, volume, page and section as shown by the captions in this Supplement to find the late cases. The omission of a title or of page and section captions implies that no new cases have been found.

Tables of titles, Revised Statutes sections, and statutes chronologically arranged are included, together with a table connecting the notes with the first edition and supplements thereto.

The Nineteenth Amendment and supplemental notes to the Constitution are included in this volume.

[SEC. 1.] [Farm Loan Board — appointments — registrars — appraisers — examiners — sec. 3 of Farm Loan Act amended.] That the seventh paragraph of section 3 be amended by adding after the word "Act" the words "and may appoint a deputy registrar who shall during the unavoidable absence or disability of the registrar perform the duties of that office" and also by adding after "registrars," in the sixth line of said paragraph the words "deputy registrars," so that the paragraph as amended will read:

"The Federal Farm Loan Board shall appoint a farm loan registrar in each land bank district to receive applications for issues of farm loan bonds and to perform such other services as are prescribed by this Act, and may appoint a deputy registrar who shall during the unavoidable absence or disability of the registrar perform the duties of that office. It shall also appoint one or more land bank appraisers for each land bank district and as many land bank examiners as it shall deem necessary. Farm loan registrars, deputy registrars, land bank appraisers, and land bank examiners appointed under this section shall be public officials and shall, during their continuance in office, have no connection with or interest in any other institution, association, or partnership engaged in banking or in the business of making land mortgage loans or selling land mortgages: Provided, That this limitation shall not apply to persons employed by the board temporarily to do special work." [41 Stat. L. 570.]

For sec. 3, here amended, see 1918 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. 14.

SEC. 2. [Application for farm loan — appraisal by loan committee — report — sec. 10 of Farm Loan Act amended.] That the first paragraph of section 10 be amended to read as follows:

"That whenever an application for a mortgage loan is made through a national farm loan association, the loan committee provided for in section 7 of this Act, shall forthwith make, or cause to be made, such investigation as it may deem necessary as to the character and solvency of the applicant, and the sufficiency of the security offered, and cause written report to be made of the result of such investigation, and shall, if it concurs in such report, approve the same in writing. No loan shall be made unless the report is favorable, and the loan committee is unanimous in its approval thereof.

"The written report required in the preceding paragraph shall be submitted to the Federal land bank, together with the application for the loan, and the directors of said land bank shall examine said written report when they pass on the loan application which it accompanies, but they shall not be bound by said appraisal." [41 Stat. L. 570.]

For sec. 10, here amended, see 1918 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. 24.

SEC. 3. [Powers of farm loan associations — sec. 11 of Farm Loan Act amended.] That the third paragraph of section 11 be amended to read as follows:

"Third. To fix reasonable initial charges to be made against applicants for loans and to borrowers in order to meet the necessary expenses of the association: Provided, That such charges shall not exceed amounts to be fixed by the Farm Loan Board, and shall in no case exceed 1 per centum of the amount of the loan applied for; to acquire and dispose of property, real and personal, that may be necessary or convenient for the transaction of its business." "Every such mortgage shall contain an agreement providing for the repayment of the loan on an amortization plan by means of a fixed number of annual or semiannual installments sufficient to cover, first, a charge on the loan at a rate not exceeding the interest rate in the last series of farm-loan bonds issued by the land bank making the loan; second, a charge for administration and profits at a rate not exceeding 1 per centum per annum on the unpaid principal, said two rates combined constituting the interest rate on the mortgage; and, third, such amounts to be applied on the principal as will extinguish the debt within an agreed period, not less than five years nor more than forty years: Provided, That after five years from the date upon which a loan is made the mortgagor may, upon any regular installment date, make, in advance, any number of payments or any portion thereof on account of the principal of his loan as provided by his contract or pay the entire principal of such loan, under the rules and regulations of the Federal Farm Loan Board: And provided further, That before the first issues of farm-loan bonds by any land bank the interest rate on mortgages may be determined in the discretion of said land bank, subject to the provisions and limitations of this Act."

"Any joint-stock land bank organized and doing business under the provisions of this Act may go into voluntary liquidation by making provision, to be approved by the Federal Farm Loan Board, for the payment of its liabilities: Provided, That such method of liquidation shall have been duly authorized by a vote of at least two-thirds of the shareholders of such joint-stock land bank at a regular meeting, or at a special meeting called for that purpose, of which at least ten days' notice in writing shall have been given to stockholder.

"For the purpose of assisting in any such liquidation duly authorized as in the preceding paragraph provided, any Federal land bank may, with the approval of the Federal Farm Loan Board, acquire the assets and assume the liabilities of any joint stock land bank, and in such transaction may waive the provisions of this Act requiring such land bank to acquire its loans only through national farm loan associations, or agents, and those relating to status of borrower, purposes of loan, and also the limitation as to the amount of individual loans.

"No Federal land bank shall assume the obligations of any joint-stock land bank, in such manner as to make its outstanding obligations more than twenty times its capital stock, except by the creation of a special reserve equal to one-twentieth of the amount of such additional obligations assumed." The term "basic salary, pay, or compensation" wherever used in this Act shall be so construed as to exclude from the operation of the Act all bonuses, allowances, overtime pay, or salary, pay, or compensation given in addition to the base pay of the positions as fixed by law or regulation. [41 Stat. L. 614.]

SEC. 3. [Period of service — computation — election to receive pension or insurance.] That for the purposes of this Act and subject to the provisions of section 10 hereof, the period of service shall be computed from the date of original employment, whether as a classified or unclassified employee in the civil service of the United States, and shall include periods of service at different times and services in one or more departments, branches, or independent offices of the Government, and shall also include service performed under authority of the United States beyond seas, and honorable service in the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, or Coast Guard of the United States: Provided, That in the case of an employee who is eligible for and elects to receive a pension under any law, or compensation under the War Risk Insurance Act, the period of his or her military or naval service upon which such pension or compensation is based shall not be included for the purpose of assignment to classes defined in section 2 hereof, but nothing contained in this Act shall be so construed as to affect in any manner his or her right to a pension, or to compensation under the War Risk Insurance Act, in addition to the annuity herein provided.

It is further provided that in computing length of service for the purposes of this Act all periods of separation from the service and so much of any period of leave of absence as may exceed six months shall be excluded, and that in the case of substitutes in the Postal Service only periods of active employment shall be included. [41 Stat. L. 615.]

SEC. 4. [Commissioner of Pensions — rules and regulations — orders — appeals.] That for the purpose of administration, except as otherwise provided herein, the Commissioner of Pensions, under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, be, and is hereby, authorized and directed to perform, or cause to be performed, any and all acts and to make such rules and regulations as may be necessary and proper for the purpose of carrying the provisions of this Act into full force and effect. An appeal to the Secretary of the Interior shall lie from the final action or order of the Commissioner of Pensions affecting the rights or interests of any person or of the United States under this Act, the procedure on appeal to be as prescribed by the Commissioner of Pensions, with the approval of the Secretary of the Interior. [41 Stat. L. 616.]

SEC. 5. [Employees disabled before reaching retirement age — medical examinations — fees — traveling expenses — discontinuance of annuities.] That any employee to whom this Act applies who shall have served for a total period of not less than fifteen years, and who, before reaching the retirement age as fixed in section 1 hereof, becomes totally disabled for useful and efficient service by reason of disease or injury not due to vicious habits, intemperance, or willful misconduct on the part of the employee, shall upon his or her own application or upon the request or order of the head of the department, branch, or independent office concerned, be retired on an annuity under the provisions of section 2 hereof: Provided, however, That no employee shall be retired under the provisions of this section until examined by a medical officer of the United States or a duly qualified physician or surgeon or board of physicians or surgeons designated by the Commissioner of Pensions for that purpose and found to be disabled in the degree and in the manner specified herein.

Every annuitant retired under the provisions of this section, unless the disability for which retired is permanent in character, shall, at the expiration of one year from the date of such retirement and annually thereafter until reaching the retirement age as defined in section 1 hereof, be examined under direction of the Commissioner of Pensions by a medical officer of the United States, or a duly qualified physician or surgeon or board of physicians or surgeons designated by the Commissioner of Pensions for that purpose, in order to ascertain the nature and degree of the annuitant's disability, if any; if the annuitant recovers and is restored to his or her former earning capacity before reaching the retirement age, payment of the annuity shall be discontinued from the date of the medical examination showing such recovery; if the annuitant fails to appear for examination as required under this section, payment of the annuity shall be suspended until continuance of the disability has been satisfactorily established. The Commissioner of Pensions is hereby authorized to order or direct at any time such medical or other examination as he shall deem necessary to determine the facts relative to the nature and degree of disability of any employee retired on an annuity under this section.

Fees for examinations made under the provisions of this section by physicians or surgeons who are not medical officers of the United States shall be fixed by the Commissioner of Pensions, and such fees, together with the employee's reasonable traveling and other expenses incurred in order to submit to such examinations, shall be paid out of the appropriations for the cost of administering this Act.

In all cases where the annuity is discontinued under the provisions of this section before the annuitant has received a sum equal to the total amount of his or her contributions with accrued interest, the difference shall be paid to the retired employee, or to his or her estate, upon application therefor in such form and manner as the Commissioner of Pensions may direct.

No person shall be entitled to receive an annuity under the provisions of this Act, and compensation under the provisions of the Act of September 7, 1916, entitled "An Act to provide compensation for employees of the United States suffering injuries while in the performance of their duties, and for other purposes," covering the same period of time; but this provision shall not be so construed as to bar the right of any claimant to the greater benefit conferred by either Act for any part of the same period of time. [41 Stat. L. 616.]

For Act of Sept. 7, 1916, mentioned in the text, see 1918 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. 429.

SEC. 6. [Employees subject to retirement—separation from service—continuance in service.] That all employees to whom this Act applies shall, upon the expiration of ninety days next succeeding its passage, if of retirement age, or thereafter on arriving at retirement age as defined in section 1 hereof, be automatically separated from the service, and all salary, pay, or compensation shall cease from that date, and it shall be the duty of the head of each department, branch, or independent office of the Government to notify such employees under his direction of the date of such separation from the service at least sixty days in advance thereof: Provided, That no person employed in the executive departments within the District of Columbia, retired under the provisions of this Act during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1921, shall be replaced by additional employees, but if the exigencies of the service so require, places made vacant by such retirement may be filled by promotion or transfer of eligible employees already in the service: Provided, That if within sixty days after the passage of this Act or not less than thirty days before the arrival of an employee at the age of retirement, the head of the department, branch, or independent office of the Government in which he or she is employed certifies to the Civil Service Commission that by reason of his or her efficiency and willingness to remain in the civil service of the United States the continuance of such employee therein would be advantageous to the public service, such employee may be retained for a term not exceeding two years upon approval and certification by the Civil Service Commission, and at the end of the two years he or she may, by similar approval and certification, be continued for an additional term not exceeding two years, and so on: Provided, however, That at the end of ten years after this Act becomes effective no employee shall be continued in civil service of the United States beyond the age of retirement defined in section 1 hereof for more than four years. [41 Stat. L. 617.]

SEC. 7. [Applications for annuities — adjudication of claim — commencement of annuities.] That every employee who is or hereafter becomes eligible for retirement because of age as provided in this Act, shall, within sixty days after its passage or thirty days before reaching the retirement age, or at any time thereafter, file with the Commissioner of Pensions, in such form as he may prescribe, an application for an annuity, supported by a certificate from the head of the department, branch, or independent office of the Government in which the applicant has been employed, stating the age and period or periods of service of the applicant and salary, pay, or compensation received during such periods, as shown by the official records: Provided, however, That in the case of an employee who is to be continued in the civil service of the United States beyond the retirement age as provided in section 6 hereof, he or she may make application for retirement at any time within such period of continuance in the service; but nothing contained in this Act shall be construed to prevent the compulsory retirement of such employee when in the judgment of the head of the department, branch, or independent office in which he or she is employed such retirement would promote the best interests of the service.

Upon receipt of satisfactory evidence the Commissioner of Pensions shall forthwith adjudicate the claim of the applicant, and if title to annuity be established, a proper certificate shall be issued to the annuitant under the seal of the Department of the Interior.

Annuities granted under this Act for retirement on account of age shall commence from the date of separation from the service on or after the date this Act shall take effect, and shall continue during the life of the annuitant. Annuities granted for disability under the provisions of section 5 hereof shall be subject to the limitations specified in said section. [41 Stat. L. 617.]

SEC. 8. [Civil service retirement and disability fund — deductions from salary — investment — supplemental contributions.] That beginning on the first day of the third month next following the passage of this Act and monthly thereafter there shall be deducted and withheld from the basic salary, pay, or compensation of each employee to whom this Act applies a sum equal to 2½ per centum of such employee's basic salary, pay, or compensation. The Secretary of the Treasury shall cause the said deductions to be withheld from all specific appropriations for the particular salaries or compensation from which the deductions are made and from all allotments out of lump-sum appropriations for payments of such salaries or compensation for each fiscal year, and said sums shall be transferred on the books of the Treasury Department to the credit of a special fund to be known as "the civil-service retirement and disability fund," and said fund is hereby appropriated for the payment of annuities, refunds, and allowances as provided in this Act.

The Secretary of the Treasury is hereby directed to invest from time to time, in interest-bearing securities of the United States, such portions of the "civil-service retirement and disability fund" hereby created as in his judgment may not be immediately required for the payment of annuities, refunds, and allowances as herein provided, and the income derived from such investments shall constitute a part of said fund for the purpose of paying annuities and of carrying out the provisions of section 11 of this Act.

The Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and empowered in carrying out the provisions of this Act to supplement the individual contributions of employees with moneys received in the form of donations, gifts, legacies, bequests, or otherwise, and to receive, invest, and disburse for the purposes of this Act all moneys which may be contributed by private individuals or corporations or organizations for the benefit of civil-service employees generally or any special class of employees. [41 Stat. L. 618.]

SEC. 9. [Deductions from salaries — presumption as to employees' consent.] That every employee coming within the provisions of this Act shall be deemed to consent and agree to the deductions from salary, pay, or compensation as provided in section 8 hereof, and payment less such deductions shall be a full and complete discharge and acquittance of all claims and demands whatsoever for all regular services rendered by such employee during the period covered by such payment, except the right to the benefits to which he or she shall be entitled under the provisions of this Act, notwithstanding the provisions of sections 167, 168, and 169 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, and of any other law, rule, or regulation affecting the salary, pay, or compensation of any person or persons employed in the civil service to whom this Act applies. [41 Stat. L. 618.]

For R. S. secs. 167–169, mentioned in the text, see 2 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 148.

SEC. 10. [Transfer or reinstatement of employees — credit for past service.] That upon the transfer of any employee from an unclassified to a classified status, or upon the reinstatement of a former employee, credit for past service rendered subsequent to the date this Act shall take effect, or for any part thereof, shall be granted only upon deposit with the Treasurer of the United States of the amount of such deductions with interest as provided in this Act as would have been made for the periods of actual service, or part thereof, for which credit is to be given, but such interest shall not be computed for periods of separation from the service: Provided, That failure to make such deposit shall not deprive the employee of credit for any past service rendered prior to the date this Act shall become operative, and to which he or she would otherwise be entitled. [41 Stat. L. 618.]

SEC. 11. [Deductions from salaries — return — redeposit — payment — to whom made.] That in the case of an employee in the classified civil service of the United States who shall be transferred to an unclassified position, and in the case of any employee to whom this Act applies who shall become absolutely separated from the service before becoming eligible for retirement on an annuity, the total amount of deductions of salary, pay, or compensation with accrued interest computed at the rate of 4 per centum per annum, compounded on June 30 of each fiscal year, shall, upon application, be returned to such employee: Provided, That all money so returned to an employee must be redeposited with interest before such employee may derive any benefit under the provisions of this Act, upon reinstatement or retransfer to a classified position; and in case an annuitant shall die without having received in annuities an amount equal to the total amount of the deductions from his or her salary, pay, or compensation, together with interest thereon at 4 per centum per annum compounded as herein provided up to the time of his or her death, the excess of the said accumulated deductions over the said annuity payments shall be paid in one sum to his or her legal representatives upon the establishment of a valid claim therefor; and in case an employee shall die without having reached the retirement age or without having established a valid claim for annuity, the total amount of deductions with accrued interest as herein provided shall be paid to the legal representatives of such employee: Provided, That if in case of death the amount of deductions to be paid under the provisions of this section does not exceed $300, and if there has been no demand upon the Commissioner of Pensions by a duly appointed executor or administrator, the payment may be made, after the expiration of three months from date of death, to such person or persons as may appear in the judgment of the Commissioner of Pensions to be legally entitled to the proceeds of the estate, and such payment shall be a bar to recovery by any other person. [41 Stat. L. 619.]

SEC. 12. [Payment of annuities — time — method.] That annuities granted under the terms of this Act shall be due and payable monthly on the first business day of the month following the month or other period for which the annuity shall have accrued, and payment of all annuities, refunds, and allowances granted hereunder shall be made by checks drawn and issued by the disbursing clerk for the payment of pensions in such form and manner and with such safeguards as shall be prescribed by the Secretary of the Interior in accordance with the laws, rules, and regulations governing accounting that may be found applicable to such payments. [41 Stat. L. 619.]

SEC. 13. [Reports of heads of executive departments — records of Civil Service Commission — annual report of Commissioner of Pensions.] That it shall be the duty of the head of each executive department and the head of each independent establishment of the Government not within the jurisdiction of any executive department to report to the Civil Service Commission in such manner as said commission may prescribe, the name and grade of each employee to whom this Act applies in or under said department or establishment who shall be at any time in a nonpay status, showing the dates such employee was in a nonpay status, and the amount of salary, pay, or compensation lost by the employee by reason of such absence. The Civil Service Commission shall keep a record of appointments, transfers, changes in grade, separations from the service, reinstatements, loss of pay, and such other information concerning individual service as may be deemed essential to a proper determination of rights under this Act, and shall furnish the Commissioner of Pensions such reports therefrom as he shall from time to time request as necessary to the proper adjustment of any claim hereunder, and shall prepare and keep all needful tables and records required for carrying out the provisions of this Act, including data showing the mortality experience of the employees in the service and the percentage of withdrawal from such service, and any other information that may serve as a guide for future valuations and adjustments of the plan for the retirement of employees under this Act.

The Commissioner of Pensions shall make a detailed comparative report annually showing all receipts and disbursements on account of refunds, allowances, and annuities, together with the total number of persons receiving annuities and the amounts paid them. [41 Stat. L. 619.]

SEC. 14. [Annuities — assignment — attachment, etc.] That none of the moneys mentioned in this Act shall be assignable, either in law or equity, or be subject to execution, levy, or attachment, garnishment, or other legal process. [41 Stat. L. 620.]

SEC. 15. [Appropriation for expenses, etc — annual estimates.] That there is hereby authorized to be appropriated, from any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $100,000 for salaries and for clerical and other services, the purchase of books, office equipment, stationery, and other supplies, and all other expenses necessary in carrying out the provisions of this Act, including traveling expenses and expenses of medical and other examinations as provided in section 5 hereof.

The Secretary of the Interior shall submit annually to the Secretary of the Treasury estimates of the appropriations necessary to continue this Act in full force and effect. [41 Stat. L. 620.]

SEC. 16. [Actuaries — selection — duties — compensation.] That the Commissioner of Pensions, with the approval of the Secretary of the Interior, is hereby authorized and directed to select three actuaries, one of whom shall be the Government actuary, to be known as the Board of Actuaries, whose duty it shall be to annually report upon the actual operations of this Act, with authority to recommend to the Commissioner of Pensions such changes as in its judgment may be deemed necessary to protect the public interest and maintain the system upon a sound financial basis. It shall be the duty of the Commissioner of Pensions to submit with his annual report to Congress the recommendations of the Board of Actuaries. It shall be the duty of the Board of Actuaries to make a valuation of the "civil-service retirement and disability fund" at the end of the first year following the passage of this Act and at intervals of every five years thereafter, or oftener, if deemed necessary by the Commissioner of Pensions. The compensation of the members of the Board of Actuaries, exclusive of the Government actuary, shall be fixed by the Commissioner of Pensions with the approval of the Secretary of the Interior. [41 Stat. L. 620.]

Railway operating income or any deficit therein for the period of Federal control shall be computed in a manner similar to that provided in section 209 with respect to such income or deficit for the guaranty period; and Railway operating income or any deficit therein for the test period shall be computed in the manner provided in section 1 of the Federal Control Act.

(c) As soon as practicable after March 1, 1920, the Commission shall ascertain for every carrier, for every month of the period of Federal control during which its railroad or system of transportation was not under Federal operation, its deficit in railway operating income, if any, and its railway operating income, if any, (hereinafter called “Federal control return”), and the average of its deficit in railway operating income, if any, and of its railway operating income, if any, for the three corresponding months of the test period taken together, (hereinafter called “test period return”): Provided, That “test period return,” in the case of a carrier which operated its railroad or system of transportation for at least one year during, but not for the whole of, the test period, means its railway operating income, or the deficit therein, for the corresponding month during the test period, or the average thereof for the corresponding months during the test period taken together, during which the carrier operated its railroad or system of transportation.

(d) For every month of the period of Federal control during which the railroad or system of transportation of the carrier was not under Federal operation, the Commission shall then ascertain (1) the difference between its Federal control return, if a deficit, and its test period return, if a smaller deficit, or (2) the difference between its test period return, if an income, and its Federal control return, if a smaller income, or (3) the sum of its Federal control return, if a deficit, plus its test period return, if an income. The sum of such amounts shall be credited to the carrier.

(e) For every such month the Commission shall then ascertain (1) the difference between the carrier’s Federal control return, if an income, and its test period return, if a smaller income, or (2) the difference between its test period return, if a deficit, and its Federal control return, if a smaller deficit, or (3) the sum of its Federal control return, if an income, plus its test period return, if a deficit. The sum of such amounts shall be credited to the United States.

(f) If the sum of the amounts so credited to the carrier under subdivision (d) exceeds the sum of the amounts so credited to the United States under subdivision (e), the difference shall be payable to the carrier. In the case of a carrier which operated its railroad or system of transportation for less than a year during, or for none of, the test period, the foregoing computations shall not be used, but there shall be payable to such carrier its deficit in railway operating income for that portion (as a whole) of the period of Federal control during which it operated its own railroad or system of transportation.

(g) The Commission shall promptly certify to the Secretary of the Treasury the several amounts payable to carriers under paragraph (f). The Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and directed thereupon to draw warrants in favor of each such carrier upon the Treasury of the United States for the amount shown in such certificate as payable thereto. An amount sufficient to pay such warrants is hereby appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated. [41 Stat. L. 460.]

This section was affected by a provision of the Deficiency Appropriation Act of May 8, 1920, set out infra, p. 126.

INSPECTION OF CARRIERS' RECORDS.

SEC. 205. [Carriers' property and records as subject to inspection by President — duty of carriers to furnish information.] The President shall have the right, at all reasonable times until the affairs of Federal control are concluded, to inspect the property and records of all carriers whose railroads or systems of transportation were at any time under Federal control, whenever such inspection is necessary or appropriate (1) to protect the interests of the United States, or (2) to supervise matters being handled for the United States by agents of the carriers, or (3) to secure information concerning matters arising during Federal control, and such carriers shall provide all reasonable facilities therefor, including the issuance of free transportation to all agents of the President while traveling on official business for these purposes.

Such carriers shall, at their expense, upon the request of the President, or those duly authorized by him, furnish all necessary and proper information and reports compiled from the records made or kept during the period of Federal control affecting their respective lines, and shall keep and continue such records and furnish like information and reports compiled therefrom.

Any carrier which refuses or obstructs such inspection, or which willfully fails to provide reasonable facilities therefor, or to furnish such information or reports shall be liable to a penalty of $500 for each day of the continuance of such offense, which shall accrue to the United States and may be recovered in a civil action to be brought by the United States. [41 Stat. L. 461.]

CAUSES OF ACTION ARISING OUT OF FEDERAL CONTROL.

SEC. 206. (a) [Actions against agent of President — period of limitation — courts having jurisdiction.] Actions at law, suits in equity and proceedings in admiralty, based on causes of action arising out of the possession, use, or operation by the President of the railroad or system of transportation of any carrier (under the provisions of the Federal Control Act, or of the Act of August 29, 1916) of such character as prior to Federal control could have been brought against such carrier, may, after the termination of Federal control, be brought against an agent designated by the President for such purpose, which agent shall be designated by the President within thirty days after the passage of this Act. Such actions, suits, or proceedings may, within the periods of limitation now prescribed by State or Federal statutes but not later than two years from the date of the passage of this Act, be brought in any court which but for Federal control would have had jurisdiction of the cause of action had it arisen against such carrier. [41 Stat. L. 461.]

For Federal Control Act, mentioned in the text, see 1918 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. 757.

(b) [Process — statement filed by agent of President with clerk of District Court.] Process may be served upon any agent or officer of the carrier operating such railroad or system of transportation, if such agent or officer is authorized by law to be served with process in proceedings brought against such carrier and if a contract has been made with such carrier by or through the President for the conduct of litigation arising out of operation during Federal control. If no such contract has been made process may be served upon such agents or officers as may be designated by or through the President. The agent designated by the President under subdivision (a) shall cause to be filed, upon the termination of Federal control, in the office of the Clerk of each District Court of the United States, a statement naming all carriers with whom he has contracted for the conduct of litigation arising out of operation during Federal control, and a like statement designating the agents or officers upon whom process may be served in actions, suits, and proceedings arising in respect to railroads or systems of transportation with the owner of which no such contract has been made; and such statements shall be supplemented from time to time, if additional contracts are made or other agents or officers appointed. [41 Stat. L. 461.]

(c) [Complaints affecting rates, etc.— filing with Interstate Commerce Commission.] Complaints praying for reparation on account of damage claimed to have been caused by reason of the collection or enforcement by or through the President during the period of Federal control of rates, fares, charges, classifications, regulations, or practices (including those applicable to interstate, foreign, or intrastate traffic) which were unjust, unreasonable, unjustly discriminatory, or unduly or unreasonably prejudicial, or otherwise in violation of the Interstate Commerce Act, may be filed with the Commission, within one year after the termination of Federal control, against the agent designated by the President under subdivision (a), naming in the petition the railroad or system of transportation against which such complaint would have been brought if such railroad or system had not been under Federal control at the time the matter complained of took place. The Commission is hereby given jurisdiction to hear and decide such complaints in the manner provided in the Interstate Commerce Act, and all notices and orders in such proceedings shall be served upon the agent designated by the President under subdivision (a). [41 Stat. L. 462.]

(d) [Abatement of pending actions, etc.— substitution of agent of President.] Actions, suits, proceedings, and reparation claims, of the character above described pending at the termination of Federal control shall not abate by reason of such termination, but may be prosecuted to final judgment, substituting the agent designated by the President under subdivision (a). [41 Stat. L. 462.]

(e) [Judgments, etc., against agent of President — payment.] Final judgments, decrees, and awards in actions, suits, proceedings, or reparation claims, of the character above described, rendered against the agent designated by the President under subdivision (a), shall be promptly paid out of the revolving fund created by section 210. [41 Stat. L. 462.]

(f) [Computing period of limitation of actions—period of Federal control.] The period of Federal control shall not be computed as a part of the periods of limitation in actions against carriers or in claims for reparation to the Commission for causes of action arising prior to Federal control. [41 Stat. L. 462.]

(g) [Levy of execution or process on property of carrier.] No execution or process, other than on a judgment recovered by the United States against a carrier, shall be levied upon the property of any carrier where the cause of action on account of which the judgment was obtained grew out of the possession, use, control, or operation of any railroad or system of transportation by the President under Federal control. [41 Stat. L. 462.]

REFUNDING OF CARRIERS' INDEBTEDNESS TO UNITED STATES.

SEC. 207. (a) [Ascertainment of carriers' indebtedness to United States—set-off.] As soon as practicable after the termination of Federal control the President shall ascertain (1) the amount of the indebtedness of each carrier to the United States, which may exist at the termination of Federal control, incurred for additions and betterments made during Federal control and properly chargeable to capital account; (2) the amount of indebtedness of such carrier to the United States otherwise incurred; and (3) the amount of the indebtedness of the United States to such carrier arising out of Federal control. The amount under clause (3) may be set off against either or both of the amounts under clauses (1) and (2), so far as deemed wise by the President, but only to the extent permitted under any contract now or hereafter made between such carrier and the United States in respect to the matters of Federal control, or, where no such contract exists, to the extent permitted under paragraph (b) of section 7 of the standard contract between the United States and the carriers relative to deductions from compensation: Provided, That such right of set-off shall not be so exercised as to prevent such carrier from having the sums required for interest, taxes, and other corporate charges and expenses referred to in paragraph (b) of section 7 of such standard contract, accruing during Federal control, and also the sums required for dividends declared and paid during Federal control, including, also in addition, a sum equal to that proportion of such last dividend which the period between its payment and the termination of Federal control bears to the last regular dividend period: And provided further, That such right of set-off shall not be exercised unless there shall have first been paid such sums in addition as may be necessary to provide the carrier with working capital in amount not less than one twenty-fourth of its operating expenses for the calendar year 1919. [41 Stat. L. 462.]

(b) [Funding of indebtedness.] Any remaining indebtedness of the carrier to the United States in respect to such additions and betterments shall, at the request of the carrier, be funded for a period of ten years from the termination of Federal control, or a shorter period at the option of the carrier, with interest at the rate of 6 per centum per annum, payable semiannually, subject to the right of such carrier to pay, on any interest-payment day, the whole or any part of such indebtedness. Any carrier obtaining the funding of such indebtedness as aforesaid shall give, in the discretion of the President, such security, in such form and upon such terms, as he may prescribe. [41 Stat. L. 463.]

(c) [Indebtedness incurred for equipment—effect of funding.] If the President and the various carriers, or any of them, shall enter into an agreement for funding, through the medium of car trust certificates, or otherwise, the indebtedness of any such carrier to the United States incurred for equipment ordered for the benefit of such carrier, such indebtedness so funded shall not be refundable under the foregoing provisions. [41 Stat. L. 463.]

(d) [Short term notes evidencing indebtedness.] Any other indebtedness of any such carrier to the United States which may exist after the settlement of accounts between the United States and the carrier and is then due shall be evidenced by notes payable in one year from the termination of Federal control, or a shorter period at the option of the carrier, with interest at the rate of 6 per centum per annum, and secured by such collateral security as the President may deem it advisable to require. [41 Stat. L. 463.]

(e) [Payment of securities — extension of time — exchange.] With respect to any bonds, notes, or other securities, acquired under the provisions of this section or of the Federal Control Act or of the Act entitled “An Act to provide for the reimbursement of the United States for motive power, cars and other equipment ordered for railroads and systems of transportation under Federal control, and for other purposes,” approved November 19, 1919, the President shall have the right to make such arrangements for extension of the time of payment or for the exchange of any of them for other securities, or partly for cash and partly for securities, as may be provided for in any agreement entered into by him or as may in his judgment seem desirable. [41 Stat. L. 463.]

For Federal Control Act, mentioned in the text, see 1918 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. 757.

For Act of Nov. 19, 1919, mentioned in the text, see 1919 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. 337.

(f) [Evidences of indebtedness secured by equipment trust agreements.] Carriers may, by agreement with the President, issue notes or other evidences of indebtedness, secured by equipment trust agreements, for equipment purchased during Federal control by or through the President under section 6 of the Federal Control Act, and allocated to such carriers respectively; and the filing of such equipment trust agreements with the Commission shall constitute notice thereof to all the world. [41 Stat. L. 463.]

(g) [Authorization or approval of evidences of indebtedness.] A carrier may issue evidences of indebtedness pursuant to this section without the authorization or approval of any authority, State or Federal, and without compliance with any requirement, State or Federal, as to notification. [41 Stat. L. 464.]

EXISTING RATES TO CONTINUE IN EFFECT.

SEC. 208. (a) [Rates, etc.—continuance — changes.] All rates, fares, and charges, and all classifications, regulations, and practices, in any wise changing, affecting, or determining, any part or the aggregate of rates, fares, or charges, or the value of the service rendered, which on February 29, 1920, are in effect on the lines of carriers subject to the Interstate Commerce Act, shall continue in force and effect until thereafter changed by State or Federal authority, respectively, or pursuant to authority of law; but prior to September 1, 1920, no such rate, fare, or charge shall be reduced, and no such classification, regulation, or practice shall be changed in such manner as to reduce any such rate, fare, or charge, unless such reduction or change is approved by the Commission. [41 Stat. L. 464.]

(b) [Joint rates, fares, or charges.] All divisions of joint rates, fares, or charges, which on February 29, 1920, are in effect between the lines of carriers subject to the Interstate Commerce Act, shall continue in force and effect until thereafter changed by mutual agreement between the interested carriers or by State or Federal authorities, respectively. [41 Stat. L. 464.]

(c) [Land grant railroads — transportation of property and troops of United States.] Any land grant railroad organized under the Act of July 28, 1866 (chapter 300), shall receive the same compensation for transportation of property and troops of the United States as is paid to land grant railroads organized under the Land Grant Act of March 3, 1863, and the Act of July 27, 1866 (chapter 278). [41 Stat. L. 464.]

GUARANTY TO CARRIERS AFTER TERMINATION OF FEDERAL CONTROL.

SEC. 209. (a) [Terms used in section defined.] When used in this section —

The term "carrier" means (1) a carrier by railroad or partly by railroad and partly by water, whose railroad or system of transportation is under Federal control at the time Federal control terminates, or which has heretofore engaged as a common carrier in general transportation and competed for traffic, or connected, with a railroad at any time under Federal control; and (2) a sleeping car company whose system of transportation is under Federal control at the time Federal control terminates; but does not include a street or interurban electric railway not under Federal control at the time Federal control terminates, which has as its principal source of operating revenue urban, suburban, or interurban passenger traffic or sale of power, heat, and light, or both;

The term "guaranty period" means the six months beginning March 1, 1920.

The term "test period" means the three years ending June 30, 1917; and

The term "railway operating income" and other references to accounts of carriers by railroad shall, in the case of a sleeping car company, be construed as indicating the appropriate corresponding accounts in the accounting system prescribed by the Commission. [41 Stat. L. 464.]

(b) [Statement by carrier accepting provisions of section.] This section shall not be applicable to any carrier which does not on or before March 15, 1920, file with the Commission a written statement that it accepts all the provisions of this section. [41 Stat. L. 464.]

(c) [Guaranty to carriers — determination.] The United States hereby guarantees —

(1) With respect to any carrier with which a contract (exclusive of so-called cooperative contracts or waivers) has been made fixing the amount of just compensation under the Federal Control Act, that the railway operating income of such carrier for the guaranty period as a whole shall not be less than one-half the amount named in such contract as annual compensation, or, where the contract fixed a lump sum as compensation for the whole period of Federal operation, that the railway operating income of such carrier for the guaranty period as a whole shall not be less than an amount which shall bear the same proportion to the lump sum so fixed as six months bears to the number of months during which such carrier was under Federal operation, including in both cases the increases in such compensation provided for in section 4 of the Federal Control Act;

(2) With respect to any carrier entitled to just compensation under the Federal Control Act, with which such a contract has not been made, that the railway operating income of such carrier for the guaranty period as a whole shall not be less than one-half of the annual amount estimated by the President as just compensation for such carrier under the Federal Control Act, including the increases in such compensation provided for in section 4 of the Federal Control Act. If any such carrier does not accept the President's estimate respecting its just compensation, and if in proceedings under section 3 of the Federal Control Act it is determined that a larger or smaller annual amount is due as just compensation, the guaranty under this paragraph shall be increased or decreased accordingly;

(3) With respect to any carrier, whether or not entitled to just compensation under the Federal Control Act, with which such a contract has not been made, and for which no estimate of just compensation is made by the President, and which for the test period as a whole sustained a deficit in railway operating income, the guaranty shall be a sum equal to (a) the amount by which any deficit in its railway operating income for the guaranty period as a whole exceeds one-half of its average annual deficit in railway operating income for the test period, plus (b) an amount equal to one-half the annual sum fixed by the President under section 4 of the Federal Control Act;

(4) With respect to any carrier not entitled to just compensation under the Federal Control Act, which for the test period as a whole had an average annual railway operating income, that the railway operating income of such carrier for the guaranty period as a whole shall not be less than one-half the average annual railway operating income of such carrier during the test period. [41 Stat. L. 464.]

For Federal Control Act, mentioned in the text, see 1918 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. 757.

(d) [Effect of payments in excess of guaranty.] If for the guaranty period as a whole the railway operating income of any carrier entitled to a guaranty under paragraph (1), (2), or (4) of subdivision (c) is in excess of the minimum railway operating income guaranteed in such paragraph, such carrier shall forthwith pay the amount of such excess into the Treasury of the United States. If for the guaranty period as a whole the railway operating income of any carrier entitled to a guaranty under paragraph (3) of subdivision (c) is in excess of one-half of the annual sum fixed by the President with respect to such carrier under section 4 of the Federal Control Act, such carrier shall forthwith pay the amount of such excess into the Treasury of the United States. The amounts so paid into the Treasury of the United States shall be added to the funds made available under section 202 for the purposes indicated in such section. Notwithstanding the provisions of this subdivision, any carrier may retain out of any such excess any amount necessary to enable it to pay its fixed charges accruing during the guaranty period. [41 Stat. L. 465.]

(e) [Manner of computing railway operating income, or deficit therein.] For the purposes of this section railway operating income, or any deficit therein, for the test period shall be computed in the manner provided for in section 1 of the Federal Control Act. [41 Stat. L. 465.]

(f) [Elements considered in computing railway operating income or deficit therein.] In computing railway operating income, or any deficit therein, for the guaranty period for the purposes of this section —

(1) Debits and credits arising from the accounts, called in the monthly reports to the Commission equipment rents and joint facility rents, shall be included, but debits and credits arising from the operation of such street electric passenger railways, including railways commonly called interurbans, as are not under Federal control at the time of termination thereof, shall be excluded;

(2) Proper adjustments shall be made (a) in case any lines which were, during any portion of the period of Federal control, a part of the railroad or system of transportation of the carrier, and whose railway operating income was included in such income of the carrier for the test period, do not continue to be a part of such railroad or system of transportation during the entire guaranty period, and (b) in case of any lines acquired by, leased to, or consolidated with, the railroad or system of transportation of the carrier at any time since the end of the test period and prior to the expiration of the guaranty period, for which separate operating returns to the Commission are not made in respect to the entire portion of the guaranty period;

(3) There shall not be included in operating expenses, for maintenance of way and structures, or for maintenance of equipment, more than an amount fixed by the Commission. In fixing such amount the Commission shall so far as practicable apply the rule set forth in the proviso in paragraph (a) of section 5 of the "standard contract" between the United States and the carriers (whether or not such contract has been entered into with the carrier whose railway operating income is being computed);

(4) There shall not be included any taxes paid under Title I or II of the Revenue Act of 1917, or such portion of the taxes paid under Title II or III of the Revenue Act of 1918 as by the terms of such Act are to be treated as levied by an Act in amendment of Title I or II of the Revenue Act of 1917; and

(5) The Commission shall require the elimination and restatement of the operating expenses and revenues (other than for maintenance of way and structures, or maintenance of equipment) for the guaranty period, to the extent necessary to correct and exclude any disproportionate or unreasonable charge to such expenses or revenues for such period, or any charge to such expenses or revenues for such period which under a proper system of accounting is attributable to another period. [41 Stat. L. 465.]

For Revenue Act of 1917 and 1918, mentioned in the text, see 1918 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. 270 et seq.

(g) [Ascertaining and paying guaranty.] The Commission shall, as soon as practicable after the expiration of the guaranty period, ascertain and certify to the Secretary of the Treasury the several amounts necessary to make good the foregoing guaranty to each carrier. The Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and directed thereupon to draw warrants in favor of each such carrier upon the Treasury of the United States, for the amount shown in such certificate as necessary to make good such guaranty. An amount sufficient to pay such warrants is hereby appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated. [41 Stat. L. 466.]

(h) [Advances to carriers during guaranty period.] Upon application of any carrier to the Commission, asking that during the guaranty period there may be advanced to it from time to time such sums, not in excess of the estimated amount necessary to make good the guaranty, as are necessary to enable it to meet its fixed charges and operating expenses, the Commission may certify to the Secretary of the Treasury the amount of, and times at which, such advances, if any, shall be made. The Secretary of the Treasury, on receipt of such certificate, is authorized and directed to make the advances in the amounts and at the times specified in the certificate, upon the execution by the carrier of a contract, secured in such manner as the Secretary may determine, that upon final determination of the amount of the guaranty provided for by this section such carrier will repay to the United States any amounts which it has received from such advances in excess of the guaranty, with interest at the rate of 6 per centum per annum from the time such excess was paid. There is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, a sum sufficient to enable the Secretary of the Treasury to make the advances referred to in this subdivision. [41 Stat. L. 466.]

(i) [American Railway Express Company — guaranty.] If the American Railway Express Company shall, on or before March 15, 1920, file with the Commission a written statement that it accepts all the provisions of this subdivision, the contract of June 26, 1918, between such company and the Director General of Railroads, as amended and continued by agreement dated November 21, 1918, shall remain in full force and effect during the guaranty period in so far as the same constitutes a guaranty on the part of the United States to such company against a deficit in operating income.

In computing operating income, and any deficit therein, for the guaranty period for the purposes of this subdivision, the Commission shall require the elimination and restatement of the operating expenses and revenues for the guaranty period, to the extent necessary to correct and exclude any disproportionate or unreasonable charge to such expenses or revenues for such period, or any charge to such expenses or revenues for such period which under a proper system of accounting is attributable to another period, and to exclude from operating expenses so much of the charge for payment for express privileges to carriers on whose lines the express traffic is carried as is in excess of 50.25 per centum of gross express revenue.

For the guaranty period the American Railway Express Company shall pay to every carrier which accepts the provisions of this section, as provided in subdivision (b) hereof, 50.25 per centum of the gross revenue earned on the transportation of all its express traffic on the carrier's lines, and every such carrier shall accept from the American Railway Express Company such percentage of the gross revenue as its compensation. In arriving at the gross revenue on through or joint express traffic, the method of dividing the revenue between the carriers shall be that agreed upon between the carriers and such express company and approved by the Commission.

If for the guaranty period as a whole the American Railway Express Company does not have a deficit in operating income, it shall forthwith pay the amount of its operating income for such period into the Treasury of the United States. The amount so paid shall be added to the funds made available under section 202 for the purposes indicated in such section.

The Commission shall, as soon as practicable after the expiration of the guaranty period, certify to the Secretary of the Treasury the amount necessary to make good the foregoing guaranty to the American Railway Express Company. The Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and directed thereupon to draw warrants in favor of such company upon the Treasury of the United States for the amount shown in such certificate as necessary to make good such guaranty. An amount sufficient to pay such warrants is hereby appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

Upon application of the American Railway Express Company to the Commission, asking that during the guaranty period there may be advanced to it from time to time such sums, not in excess of the estimated amount necessary to make good the guaranty, as are necessary to enable it to meet its operating expenses, the Commission may certify to the Secretary of the Treasury the amount of, and times at which, such advances, if any, shall be made. The Secretary of the Treasury, on receipt of such certificate, is authorized and directed to make the advances in the amounts and at the times specified in the certificate, upon the execution by such company of a contract, secured in such manner as the Secretary may determine, that upon final determination of the amount of the guaranty provided for by this subdivision such company will repay to the United States any amounts which it has received from such advances in excess of the guaranty, with interest at the rate of 6 per centum per annum from the time such excess was paid. There is hereby appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated a sum sufficient to enable the Secretary of the Treasury to make the advances referred to in this subdivision. [41 Stat. L. 467.]

NEW LOANS TO RAILROADS.

SEC. 210. (a) [Loans by United States to railroads — application to Interstate Commerce Commission.] For the purpose of enabling carriers by railroad subject to the Interstate Commerce Act properly to serve the public during the transition period immediately following the termination of Federal control, any such carrier may, at any time after the passage of this Act, and before the expiration of two years after the termination of Federal control make application to the commission for a loan from the United States to meet its maturing indebtedness, or to provide itself with equipment or other additions and betterments, setting forth the amount of the loan; the term for which it is desired; the purpose of the loan and the use to which it will be applied; the present and prospective ability of the applicant to repay the loan and meet the requirements of its obligations in that regard; the character and value of the security offered; and the extent to which the public convenience and necessity will be served. The application shall be accompanied by statements showing such facts in detail as the commission may require with respect to the physical situation, ownership, capitalization, indebtedness, contract obligations, operation, and earning power of the applicant, together with such other facts relating to the propriety and expediency of granting the loan applied for, and the ability of the applicant to make good the obligation as the commission may deem pertinent to the inquiry. [41 Stat. L. 468, as amended by 41 Stat. L. 946.]

(b) [Investigation by Commission — certifying findings, etc., to Secretary of Treasury.] If the commission, after such hearing and investigation, with or without notice, as it may direct, finds that the making, in whole or in part, of the proposed loan by the United States, for one or more of the aforesaid purposes, is necessary to enable the applicant properly to meet the transportation needs of the public, and that the prospective earning power of the applicant and the character and value of the security offered are such as to furnish reasonable assurance of the applicant's ability to repay the loan within the time fixed therefor, and to meet its other obligations in connection with such loan the commission shall certify to the Secretary of the Treasury its findings of such facts; also the amount of the loan which is to be made; the time, not exceeding fifteen years from the making thereof, within which it is to be repaid; the terms and conditions of the loan, including the security to be given for repayment; that the prospective earning power of the applicant, together with the character and value of the security offered, furnish, in the opinion of the commission, reasonable assurance of the applicant's ability to repay the loan within the time fixed therefor and reasonable protection to the United States; and that the applicant, in the opinion of the commission, is unable to provide itself with the funds necessary for the aforesaid purposes from other sources. [41 Stat. L. 468, as amended by 41 Stat. L. 946.]

(c) [Loan by Secretary of Treasury on receipt of certificate — terms.] Upon receipt of such certificate from the commission the Secretary of the Treasury shall immediately, or soon as practicable, make a loan of the amount recommended in such certificate out of any funds in the revolving fund provided for in this section and accept the security prescribed therefor by the commission. All such loans shall bear interest at the rate of 6 per centum per annum, payable semiannually, to the Secretary of the Treasury, and to be placed to the credit of said revolving fund. The form of obligation to be entered into shall be prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury, but the time, not exceeding fifteen years from the making thereof, within which such loan is to be repaid, the security which is to be taken therefor, and the terms and the conditions of the loan shall be in accordance with the findings and the certificate of the commission. [41 Stat. L. 468, as amended by 41 Stat. L. 946.]

(d) [Advice and assistance of Federal Reserve Board.] The Commission or the Secretary of the Treasury may call upon the Federal Reserve Board for advice and assistance with respect to any such application or loan. [41 Stat. L. 468.]

(e) [Revolving fund for loan purposes, etc.] There is hereby appropriated out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated the sum of $300,000,000, which shall be used as a revolving fund for the purpose of making the loans provided for in this section, and for paying the judgments, decrees, and awards referred to in subdivision (e) of section 206. [41 Stat. L. 468.]

(f) [Evidences of indebtedness — issuance by carriers.] A carrier may issue evidences of indebtedness to the United States pursuant to this section without the authorization or approval of any authority, State or Federal, and without compliance with any requirement, State or Federal, as to notification. [41 Stat. L. 469.]

Paragraphs (a), (b) and (c) of this section were amended by sec. 5 of the Sundry Civil Appropriation Act of June 5, 1920, ch. 235. In case the appropriate Adjustment Board is not organized under the provisions of section 302, the Labor Board, (1) upon the application of the chief executive of any carrier or organization of employees or subordinate officials whose members are directly interested in the dispute, (2) upon a written petition signed by not less than 100 unorganized employees or subordinate officials directly interested in the dispute, or (3) upon the Labor Board's own motion if it is of the opinion that the dispute is likely substantially to interrupt commerce, shall receive for hearing, and as soon as practicable and with due diligence decide, any dispute involving grievances, rules, or working conditions which is not decided as provided in section 301 and which such Adjustment Board would be required to receive for hearing and decision under the provisions of section 303.

[41 Stat. L. 477.]

[Directions of Commission as to car service by whom carried out — violations by carriers — rights of states with respect to intrastate business.] “(17) The directions of the Commission as to car service and to the matters referred to in paragraphs (15) and (16) may be made through and by such agents or agencies as the Commission shall designate and appoint for that purpose. It shall be the duty of all carriers by railroad subject to this Act, and of their officers, agents and employees, to obey strictly and conform promptly to such orders or directions of the Commission, and in case of failure or refusal on the part of any carrier, receiver, or operating trustee to comply with any such order or direction such carrier, receiver, or trustee shall be liable to a penalty of not less than $100 nor more than $500 for each such offense and $50 for each and every day of the continuance of such offense, which shall accrue to the United States and may be recovered in a civil action brought by the United States: Provided, however, That nothing in this Act shall impair or affect the right of a State, in the exercise of its police power, to require just and reasonable freight and passenger service for intrastate business, except in so far as such requirement is inconsistent with any lawful order of the Commission made under the provisions of this Act. [41 Stat. L. 477.]

[New and extended lines of railroads — abandonment of lines — certificate from Commission.] “(18) After ninety days after this paragraph takes effect no carrier by railroad subject to this Act shall undertake the extension of its line of railroad, or the construction of a new line of railroad, or shall acquire or operate any line of railroad, or extension thereof, or shall engage in transportation under this Act over or by means of such additional or extended line of railroad, unless and until there shall first have been obtained from the Commission a certificate that the present or future public convenience and necessity require or will require the construction, or operation, or construction and operation, of such additional or extended line of railroad, and no carrier by railroad subject to this Act shall abandon all or any portion of a line of railroad, or the operation thereof, unless and until there shall first have been obtained from the Commission a certificate that the present or future public convenience and necessity permit of such abandonment. [41 Stat. L. 477.]

[Application for certificate from Commission — notice of application.] “(19) The application for and issuance of any such certificate shall be under such rules and regulations as to hearings and other matters as the Commission may from time to time prescribe, and the provisions of this Act shall apply to all such proceedings. Upon receipt of any application for such certificate the Commission shall cause notice thereof to be given to and a copy filed with the governor of each State in which such additional or extended line of railroad is proposed to be constructed or operated, or all or any portion of a line of railroad, or the operation thereof, is proposed to be abandoned, with the right to be heard as hereinafter provided with respect to the hearing of complaints or the issuance of securities; and said notice shall also be published for three consecutive weeks in some newspaper of general circulation in each county in or through which said line of railroad is constructed or operates. [41 Stat. L. 478.]

[Authority of Commission with respect to issuance of certificate — construction, operation or abandonment of lines without approval of Commission — injunction — penalty.] “(20) The Commission shall have power to issue such certificate as prayed for, or to refuse to issue it, or to issue it for a portion or portions of a line of railroad, or extension thereof, described in the application, or for the partial exercise only of such right or privilege, and may attach to the issuance of the certificate such terms and conditions as in its judgment the public convenience and necessity may require. From and after issuance of such certificate, and not before, the carrier by railroad may, without securing approval other than such certificate, comply with the terms and conditions contained in or attached to the issuance of such certificate and proceed with the construction, operation, or abandonment covered thereby. Any construction, operation, or abandonment contrary to the provisions of this paragraph or of paragraph (18) or (19) of this section may be enjoined by any court of competent jurisdiction at the suit of the United States, the Commission, any commission or regulating body of the State or States affected, or any party in interest; and any carrier which, or any director, officer, receiver, operating trustee, lessee, agent, or person, acting for or employed by such carrier, who knowingly authorizes, consents to, or permits any violation of the provisions of this paragraph or of paragraph (18) of this section, shall upon conviction thereof be punished by a fine of not more than $5,000 or by imprisonment for not more than three years, or both. [41 Stat. L. 478.]

[Safe and adequate car service — power of Commission to require.] “(21) The Commission may, after hearing, in a proceeding upon complaint or upon its own initiative without complaint, authorize or require by order any carrier by railroad subject to this Act, party to such proceeding, to provide itself with safe and adequate facilities for performing as a common carrier its car service as that term is used in this Act, and to extend its line or lines: Provided, That no such authorization or order shall be made unless the Commission finds, as to such extension, that it is reasonably required in the interest of public convenience and necessity, or as to such extension or facilities that the expense involved therein will not impair the ability of the carrier to perform its duty to the public. Any carrier subject to this Act which refuses or neglects to comply with any order of the Commission made in pursuance of this paragraph shall be liable to a penalty of $100 for each day during which such refusal or neglect continues, which shall accrue to the United States and may be recovered in a civil action brought by the United States. [41 Stat. L. 478.]

[Construction or abandonment of side tracks, etc., wholly within State—electric railways.] “(22) The authority of the Commission conferred by paragraphs (18) to (21), both inclusive, shall not extend to the construction or abandonment of spur, industrial, team, switching or side tracks, located or to be located wholly within one State, or of street, suburban, or interurban electric railways, which are not operated as a part or parts of a general steam railroad system of transportation.” [41 Stat. L. 478.]

[41 Stat. L. 479.]

SEC. 404. [Section 2 amended — special rates, rebates, etc., prohibited.] Section 2 of the Interstate Commerce Act is hereby amended to read as follows:

“SEC. 2. That if any common carrier subject to the provisions of this Act shall, directly or indirectly, by any special rate, rebate, drawback, or other device, charge, demand, collect, or receive from any person or persons a greater or less compensation for any service rendered, or to be rendered, in the transportation of passengers or property or the transmission of intelligence, subject to the provisions of this Act, than it charges, demands, collects, or receives from any other person or persons for doing for him or them a like and contemporaneous service in the transportation or transmission of a like kind of traffic or message under substantially similar circumstances and conditions, such common carrier shall be deemed guilty of unjust discrimination, which is hereby prohibited and declared to be unlawful." [41 Stat. L. 479.]

For section 2, amended by the text, see 4 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 371.

SEC. 405. [First paragraph of section 3 numbered.] The first paragraph of section 3 of the Interstate Commerce Act is hereby amended by inserting "(1)" after the section number at the beginning thereof. [41 Stat. L. 479.]

For first paragraph of section 3, see 4 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 379.

[New paragraph added — payment of tariff rates and charges a prerequisite to delivery of freight.] Section 3 of the Interstate Commerce Act is hereby amended by adding after the first paragraph a new paragraph to read as follows:

"(2) From and after July 1, 1920, no carrier by railroad subject to the provisions of this Act shall deliver or relinquish possession at destination of any freight transported by it until all tariff rates and charges thereon have been paid, except under such rules and regulations as the Commission may from time to time prescribe to assure prompt payment of all such rates and charges and to prevent unjust discrimination: Provided, That the provisions of this paragraph shall not be construed to prohibit any carrier from extending credit in connection with rates and charges on freight transported for the United States, for any department, bureau, or agency thereof, or for any State or Territory or political subdivision thereof, or for the District of Columbia." [41 Stat. L. 479.]

[Second paragraph amended — interchange of traffic — terminal facilities.] The second paragraph of section 3 of the Interstate Commerce Act is hereby amended to read as follows:

"(3) All carriers, engaged in the transportation of passengers or property, subject to the provisions of this Act, shall, according to their respective powers, afford all reasonable, proper, and equal facilities for the interchange of traffic between their respective lines, and for the receiving, forwarding, and delivering of passengers or property to and from their several lines and those connecting therewith, and shall not discriminate in their rates, fares, and charges between such connecting lines, or unduly prejudice any such connecting line in the distribution of traffic that is not specifically routed by the shipper.

"(4) If the Commission finds it to be in the public interest and to be practicable, without substantially impairing the ability of a carrier owning or entitled to the enjoyment of terminal facilities to handle its own business, it shall have power to require the use of any such terminal facilities, including main line track or tracks for a reasonable distance outside of such terminal, of any carrier, by another carrier or other carriers, on such terms and for such compensation as the carriers affected may agree upon, or, in the event of a failure to agree, as the Commission may fix as just and reasonable for the use so required, to be ascertained on the principle controlling compensation in condemnation proceedings. Such compensation shall be paid or adequately secured before the enjoyment of the use may be commenced. If under this paragraph the use of such terminal facilities of any carrier is required to be given to another carrier or other carriers, and the carrier whose terminal facilities are required to be so used is not satisfied with the terms fixed for such use, or if the amount of compensation so fixed is not duly and promptly paid, the carrier whose terminal facilities have thus been required to be given to another carrier or other carriers shall be entitled to recover, by suit or action against such other carrier or carriers, proper damages for any injuries sustained by it as the result of compliance with such requirement, or just compensation for such use, or both, as the case may be." [41 Stat. L. 479.]

SEC. 406. [Section 4 amended.] Section 4 of the Interstate Commerce Act is hereby amended to read as follows:

For section 4, amended by the text, see 4 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 396.

[Long and short hauls.] "SEC. 4. (1) That it shall be unlawful for any common carrier subject to the provisions of this Act to charge or receive any greater compensation in the aggregate for the transportation of passengers, or of like kind of property, for a shorter than for a longer distance over the same line or route in the same direction, the shorter being included within the longer distance, or to charge any greater compensation as a through rate than the aggregate of the intermediate rates subject to the provisions of this Act, but this shall not be construed as authorizing any common carrier within the terms of this Act to charge or receive as great compensation for a shorter as for a longer distance: Provided, That upon application to the Commission such common carrier may in special cases, after investigation, be authorized by the Commission to charge less for longer than for shorter distances for the transportation of passengers or property; and the Commission may from time to time prescribe the extent to which such designated common carrier may be relieved from the operation of this section; but in exercising the authority conferred upon it in this proviso the Commission shall not permit the establishment of any charge to or from the more distant point that is not reasonably compensatory for the service performed; and if a circuitous rail line or route is, because of such circuitry, granted authority to meet the charges of a more direct line or route to or from competitive points and to maintain higher charges to or from intermediate points on its line, the authority shall not include intermediate points as to which the haul of the petitioning line or route is not longer than that of the direct line or route between the competitive points; and no such authorization shall be granted on account of merely potential water competition not actually in existence: And provided further, That rates, fares, or charges existing at the time of the passage of this amendatory Act by virtue of orders of the Commission or as to which application has theretofore been filed with the Commission and not yet acted upon, shall not be required to be changed by reason of the provisions of this section until the further order of or a determination by the Commission. [41 Stat. L. 480.]

[Competition of railroads with water routes — rates.] "(2) Wherever a carrier by railroad shall in competition with a water route or routes reduce the rates on the carriage of any species of freight to or from competitive points it shall not be permitted to increase such rates unless after hearing by the Commission it shall be found that such proposed increase rests upon changed conditions other than the elimination of water competition." [41 Stat. L. 480.]

SEC. 407. [First paragraph of section 5 amended — pooling agreements — consolidation of carriers.] The first paragraph of section 5 of the Interstate Commerce Act is hereby amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 5. (1) That, except upon specific approval by order of the Commission as in this section provided, and except as provided in paragraph (16) of section 1 of this Act, it shall be unlawful for any common carrier subject to this Act to enter into any contract, agreement, or combination with any other common carrier or carriers for the pooling of freights of different and competing railroads, or to divide between them the aggregate or net proceeds of the earnings of such railroads, or any portion thereof; and in any case of an agreement for the pooling of freights as aforesaid each day of its continuance shall be deemed a separate offense: Provided, That whenever the Commission is of opinion, after hearing upon application of any carrier or carriers engaged in the transportation of passengers or property subject to this Act, or upon its own initiative, that the division of their traffic or earnings, to the extent indicated by the Commission, will be in the interest of better service to the public, or economy in operation, and will not unduly restrain competition, the Commission shall have authority by order to approve and authorize, if assented to by all the carriers involved, such division of traffic or earnings, under such rules and regulations, and for such consideration as between such carriers and upon such terms and conditions, as shall be found by the Commission to be just and reasonable in the premises.

"(2) Whenever the Commission is of opinion, after hearing, upon application of any carrier or carriers engaged in the transportation of passengers or property subject to this Act, that the acquisition, to the extent indicated by the Commission, by one of such carriers of the control of any other such carrier or carriers either under a lease or by the purchase of stock or in any other manner not involving the consolidation of such carriers into a single system for ownership and operation, will be in the public interest, the Commission shall have authority by order to approve and authorize such acquisition, under such rules and regulations and for such consideration and on such terms and conditions as shall be found by the Commission to be just and reasonable in the premises.

"(3) The Commission may from time to time, for good cause shown, make such orders, supplemental to any order made under paragraph (1) or (2), as it may deem necessary or appropriate.

"(4) The Commission shall as soon as practicable prepare and adopt a plan for the consolidation of the railway properties of the continental United States into a limited number of systems. In the division of such railways into such systems under such plan, competition shall be preserved as fully as possible and wherever practicable the existing routes and channels of trade and commerce shall be maintained. Subject to the foregoing requirements, the several systems shall be so arranged that the cost of transportation as between competitive systems and as related to the values of the properties through which the service is rendered shall be the same, so far as practicable, so that these systems can employ uniform rates in the movement of competitive traffic and under efficient management earn substantially the same rate of return upon the value of their respective railway properties.

"(5) When the Commission has agreed upon a tentative plan, it shall give the same due publicity and upon reasonable notice, including notice to the Governor of each State, shall hear all persons who may file or present objections thereto. The Commission is authorized to prescribe a procedure for such hearings and to fix a time for bringing them to a close. After the hearings are at an end, the Commission shall adopt a plan for such consolidation and publish the same; but it may at any time thereafter, upon its own motion or upon application, reopen the subject for such changes or modifications as in its judgment will promote the public interest. The consolidations herein provided for shall be in harmony with such plan.

"(6) It shall be lawful for two or more carriers by railroad, subject to this Act, to consolidate their properties or any part thereof, into one corporation for the ownership, management, and operation of the properties theretofore in separate ownership, management, and operation, under the following conditions:

"(a) The proposed consolidation must be in harmony with and in furtherance of the complete plan of consolidation mentioned in paragraph (5) and must be approved by the Commission;

"(b) The bonds at par of the corporation which is to become the owner of the consolidated properties, together with the outstanding capital stock at par of such corporation, shall not exceed the value of the consolidated properties as determined by the Commission. The value of the properties sought to be consolidated shall be ascertained by the Commission under section 19a of this Act, and it shall be the duty of the Commission to proceed immediately to the ascertainment of such value for the properties involved in a proposed consolidation upon the filing of the application for such consolidation.

"(c) Whenever two or more carriers propose a consolidation under this section, they shall present their application therefor to the Commission, and thereupon the Commission shall notify the Governor of each State in which any part of the properties sought to be consolidated is situated and the carriers involved in the proposed consolidation, of the time and place for a public hearing. If after such hearing the Commission finds that the public interest will be promoted by the consolidation and that the conditions of this section have been or will be fulfilled, it may enter an order approving and authorizing such consolidation, with such modifications and upon such terms and conditions as it may prescribe, and thereupon such consolidation may be effected, in accordance with such order, if all the carriers involved assent thereto, the law of any State or the decision or order of any State authority to the contrary notwithstanding.

"(7) The power and authority of the Commission to approve and authorize the consolidation of two or more carriers shall extend and apply to the consolidation of four express companies into the American Railway Express Company, a Delaware corporation, if application for such approval and authority is made to the Commission within thirty days after the passage of this amendatory Act; and pending the decision of the Commission such consolidation shall not be dissolved.

"(8) The carriers affected by any order made under the foregoing provisions of this section and any corporation organized to effect a consolidation approved and authorized in such order shall be, and they are hereby, relieved from the operation of the 'antitrust laws,' as designated in section 1 of the Act entitled 'An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes,' approved October 15, 1914, and of all other restraints or prohibitions by law, State or Federal, in so far as may be necessary to enable them to do anything authorized or required by any order made under and pursuant to the foregoing provisions of this section." [41 Stat. L. 480.]

(1) That whenever, after full hearing, upon a complaint made as provided in section 13 of this Act, or after full hearing under an order for investigation and hearing made by the Commission on its own initiative either in extension of any pending complaint or without any complaint whatever, the Commission shall be of opinion that any individual or joint rate, fare, or charge whatsoever demanded, charged, or collected by any common carrier or carriers subject to this Act for the transportation of persons or property or for the transmission of messages as defined in the first section of this Act, or that any individual or joint classification, regulation, or practice whatsoever of such carrier or carriers subject to the provisions of this Act, is or will be unjust or unreasonable or unjustly discriminatory or unduly preferential or prejudicial, or otherwise in violation of any of the provisions of this Act, the Commission is hereby authorized and empowered to determine and prescribe what will be the just and reasonable individual or joint rate, fare, or charge, or rates, fares, or charges, to be thereafter observed in such case, or the maximum or minimum, or maximum and minimum, to be charged (or, in the case of a through route where one of the carriers is a water line, the maximum rates, fares, and charges applicable thereto), and what individual or joint classification, regulation, or practice is or will be just, fair, and reasonable, to be thereafter followed, and to make an order that the carrier or carriers shall cease and desist from such violation to the extent to which the Commission finds that the same does or will exist, and shall not thereafter publish, demand, or collect any rate, fare, or charge for such transportation or transmission other than the rate, fare, or charge so prescribed, or in excess of the maximum or less than the minimum so prescribed, as the case may be, and shall adopt the classification and shall conform to and observe the regulation or practice so prescribed. [41 Stat. L. 485.]

[Commission may establish through routes, joint classifications, and rates, etc., on failure of carriers — water connection — electric roads not carrying freight — water transportation.] "(3) The Commission may, and it shall whenever deemed by it to be necessary or desirable in the public interest, after full hearing upon complaint or upon its own initiative without a complaint, establish through routes, joint classifications, and joint rates, fares, or charges, applicable to the transportation of passengers or property, or the maxima or minima, or maxima and minima, to be charged (or, in the case of a through route where one of the carriers is a water line, the maximum rates, fares, and charges applicable thereto), and the divisions of such rates, fares, or charges as hereinafter provided, and the terms and conditions under which such through routes shall be operated; and this provision, except as herein otherwise provided, shall apply when one of the carriers is a water line. The Commission shall not, however, establish any through route, classification, or practice, or any rate, fare, or charge, between street electric passenger railways not engaged in the general business of transporting freight in addition to their passenger and express business, and railroads of a different character; nor shall the Commission have the right to establish any route, classification, or practice, or any rate, fare, or charge when the transportation is wholly by water, and any transportation by water affected by this Act shall be subject to the laws and regulations applicable to transportation by water. [41 Stat. L. 485.]

[Through routes — lines embraced — temporary through routes.] “(4) In establishing any such through route the Commission shall not (except as provided in section 3, and except where one of the carriers is a water line), require any carrier by railroad without its consent, to embrace in such route substantially less than the entire length of its railroad and of any intermediate railroad operated in conjunction and under a common management or control therewith, which lies between the termini of such proposed through route, unless such inclusion of lines would make the through route unreasonably long as compared with another practicable through route which could otherwise be established: Provided, That in time of shortage of equipment, congestion of traffic, or other emergency declared by the Commission it may (either upon complaint or upon its own initiative without complaint, at once, if it so orders without answer or other formal pleadings by the interested carrier or carriers, and with or without notice, hearing, or the making or filing of a report, according as the Commission may determine) establish temporarily such through routes as in its opinion are necessary or desirable in the public interest. [41 Stat. L. 485.]

[Transportation of livestock — service required of carrier.] “(5) Transportation wholly by railroad of ordinary livestock in car-load lots destined to or received at public stockyards shall include all necessary service of unloading and reloading en route, delivery at public stockyards of inbound shipments into suitable pens, and receipt and loading at such yards of outbound shipments, without extra charge therefor to the shipper, consignee or owner, except in cases where the unloading or reloading en route is at the request of the shipper, consignee or owner, or to try an intermediate market, or to comply with quarantine regulations. The Commission may prescribe or approve just and reasonable rules governing each of such excepted services. Nothing in this paragraph shall be construed to affect the duties and liabilities of the carriers now existing by virtue of law respecting the transportation of other than ordinary livestock, or the duty of performing service as to shipments other than those to or from public stockyards. [41 Stat. L. 486.]

[Divisions of joint rates, fares, or charges by Commission.] “(6) Whenever, after full hearing upon complaint or upon its own initiative, the Commission is of opinion that the divisions of joint rates, fares, or charges, applicable to the transportation of passengers or property, are or will be unjust, unreasonable, inequitable, or unduly preferential or prejudicial as between the carriers parties thereto (whether agreed upon by such carriers, or any of them, or otherwise established), the Commission shall by order prescribe the just, reasonable, and equitable divisions thereof to be received by the several carriers, and in cases where the joint rate, fare, or charge was established pursuant to a finding or order of the Commission and the divisions thereof are found by it to have been unjust, unreasonable, or inequitable, or unduly preferential or prejudicial, the Commission may also by order determine what (for the period subsequent to the filing of the complaint or petition or the making of the order of investigation) would have been the just, reasonable, and equitable divisions thereof to be received by the several carriers, and require adjustment to be made in accordance therewith. In so prescribing and determining the divisions of joint rates, fares and charges, the Commission shall give due consideration, among other things, to the efficiency with which the carriers concerned are operated, the amount of revenue required to pay their respective operating expenses, taxes, and a fair return on their railway property held for and used in the service of transportation, and the importance to the public of the transportation services of such carriers; and also whether any particular participating carrier is an originating, intermediate, or delivering line, and any other fact or circumstance which would ordinarily, without regard to the mileage haul, entitle one carrier to a greater or less proportion than another carrier of the joint rate, fare or charge. [41 Stat. L. 486.]

[New rates, classification, etc.— Commission to determine propriety of — suspension until decision — final determination — extension of suspension — hearing on rates increased since January 1, 1910.] “(7) Whenever there shall be filed with the Commission any schedule stating a new individual or joint rate, fare, or charge, or any new individual or joint classification, or any new individual or joint regulation or practice affecting any rate, fare, or charge, the Commission shall have, and it is hereby given, authority, either upon complaint or upon its own initiative without complaint, at once and if it so orders without answer or other formal pleading by the interested carrier or carriers, but upon reasonable notice, to enter upon a hearing concerning the lawfulness of such rate, fare, charge, classification, regulation, or practice; and pending such hearing and the decision thereon the Commission, upon filing with such schedule and delivering to the carrier or carriers affected thereby a statement in writing of its reasons for such suspension, may suspend the operation of such schedule and defer the use of such rate, fare, charge, classification, regulation, or practice, but not for a longer period than one hundred and twenty days beyond the time when it would otherwise go into effect; and after full hearing, whether completed before or after the rate, fare, charge, classification, regulation, or practice goes into effect, the Commission may make such order with reference thereto as would be proper in a proceeding initiated after it had become effective. If any such hearing can not be concluded within the period of suspension, as above stated, the Commission may extend the time of suspension for a further period not exceeding thirty days, and if the proceeding has not been concluded and an order made at the expiration of such thirty days, the proposed change of rate, fare, charge, classification, regulation, or practice shall go into effect at the end of such period, but, in case of a proposed increased rate or charge for or in respect to the transportation of property, the Commission may by order require the interested carrier or carriers to keep accurate account in detail of all amounts received by reason of such increase, specifying by whom and in whose behalf such amounts are paid, and upon completion of the hearing and decision may by further order require the interested carrier or carriers to refund, with interest, to the persons in whose behalf such amounts were paid such portion of such increased rates or charges as by its decision shall be found not justified. At any hearing involving a rate, fare, or charge increased after January 1, 1910, or of a rate, fare, or charge sought to be increased after the passage of this Act, the burden of proof to show that the increased rate, fare, or charge, or proposed increased rate, fare, or charge, is just and reasonable shall be upon the carrier, and the Commission shall give to the hearing and decision of such questions preference over all other questions pending before it and decide the same as speedily as possible." [41 Stat. L. 486.]

SEC. 419. [Fifth paragraph of section 15 numbered.] The fifth paragraph of section 15 of the Interstate Commerce Act is hereby amended by inserting "(8)" at the beginning of such paragraph. [41 Stat. L. 487.]

For section 15, amended by text, see 4 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 458 et seq.

SEC. 420. [New paragraphs added to section 15.] Section 15 of the Interstate Commerce Act is hereby amended by inserting after the fifth paragraph two new paragraphs, to read as follows:

For section 15, amended by text, see 4 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 458 et seq.

[Property diverted or delivered contrary to routing instructions.] "(9) Whenever property is diverted or delivered by one carrier to another carrier contrary to routing instructions in the bill of lading, unless such diversion or delivery is in compliance with a lawful order, rule, or regulation of the Commission, such carriers shall, in a suit or action in any court of competent jurisdiction, be jointly and severally liable to the carrier thus deprived of its right to participate in the haul of the property, for the total amount of the rate or charge it would have received had it participated in the haul of the property. The carrier to which the property is thus diverted shall not be liable in such suit or action if it can show, the burden of proof being upon it, that before carrying the property it had no notice, by bill of lading, waybill or otherwise, of the routing instructions. In any judgment which may be rendered the plaintiff shall be allowed to recover against the defendant a reasonable attorney's fee to be taxed in the case. [41 Stat. L. 487.]

[Unrouted traffic — authority of Commission to direct route.] "(10) With respect to traffic not routed by the shipper, the Commission may, whenever the public interest and a fair distribution of the traffic require, direct the route which such traffic shall take after it arrives at the terminus of one carrier or at a junction point with another carrier, and is to be there delivered to another carrier." [41 Stat. L. 488.]

SEC. 421. [Sixth, seventh, eighth and ninth paragraphs of section 15 numbered.] Section 15 of the Interstate Commerce Act is hereby further amended by inserting "(11)" at the beginning of the sixth paragraph, "(12)" at the beginning of the seventh paragraph, "(13)" at the beginning of the eighth paragraph, and "(14)" at the beginning of the ninth paragraph. [41 Stat. L. 488.]

For section 15, amended by text, see 4 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 458 et seq.

SEC. 422. [Section 15a added.] The Interstate Commerce Act is further amended by inserting after section 15 a new section to be known as section 15a and to read as follows:

[Terms used in section defined — "rates" — "carrier" — "net railway operating income."] "SEC. 15a. (1) When used in this section the term "rates" means rates, fares, and charges, and all classifications, regulations, and practices, relating thereto; the term "carrier" means a carrier by railroad or partly by railroad and partly by water, within the continental United States, subject to this Act, excluding (a) sleeping-car companies and express companies, (b) street or suburban electric railways unless operated as a part of a general steam railroad system of transportation, (c) interurban electric railways unless operated as a part of a general steam railroad system of transportation or engaged in the general transportation of freight, and (d) any belt-line railroad, terminal switching railroad, or other terminal facility, owned exclusively and maintained, operated, and controlled by any State or political subdivision thereof; and the term "net railway operating income" means railway operating income, including in the computation thereof debits and credits arising from equipment rents and joint facility rents. [41 Stat. L. 488.]

[Adjustment of rates by Commission — fair return upon aggregate value of railway property.] "(2) In the exercise of its powers to prescribe just and reasonable rates the Commission shall initiate, modify, establish or adjust such rates so that carriers as a whole (or as a whole in each of such rate groups or territories as the Commission may from time to time designate) will, under honest, efficient and economical management and reasonable expenditures for maintenance of way, structures and equipment, earn an aggregate annual net railway operating income equal, as nearly as may be, to a fair return upon the aggregate value of the railway property of such carriers held for and used in the service of transportation: Provided, That the Commission shall have reasonable latitude to modify or adjust any particular rate which it may find to be unjust or unreasonable, and to prescribe different rates for different sections of the country. [41 Stat. L. 488.]

[Determination of what is fair return.] "(3) The Commission shall from time to time determine and make public what percentage of such aggregate property value constitutes a fair return thereon, and such percentage shall be uniform for all rate groups or territories which may be designated by the Commission. In making such determination it shall give due consideration, among other things, to the transportation needs of the country and the necessity (under honest, efficient and economical management of existing transportation facilities) of enlarging such facilities in order to provide the people of the United States with adequate transportation: Provided, That during the two years beginning March 1, 1920, the Commission shall take as such fair return a sum equal to

5½ per centum of such aggregate value, but may, in its discretion, add thereto a sum not exceeding one-half of one per centum of such aggregate value to make provision in whole or in part for improvements, betterments, or equipment, which, according to the accounting system prescribed by the Commission, are chargeable to capital account. [41 Stat. L. 488.]

[Aggregate value of property of carriers — determination by Commission from time to time.] “(4) For the purposes of this section, such aggregate value of the property of the carriers shall be determined by the Commission from time to time and as often as may be necessary. The Commission may utilize the results of its investigation under section 19a of this Act, in so far as deemed by it available, and shall give due consideration to all the elements of value recognized by the law of the land for rate-making purposes, and shall give to the property investment account of the carriers only that consideration which under such law it is entitled to in establishing values for rate-making purposes. Whenever pursuant to section 19a of this Act the value of the railway property of any carrier held for and used in the service of transportation has been finally ascertained, the value so ascertained shall be deemed by the Commission to be the value thereof for the purpose of determining such aggregate value. [41 Stat. L. 488.]

[Net railway operating income received by carriers in excess of fair return — holding excess as trustee.] “(5) Inasmuch as it is impossible (without regulation and control in the interest of the commerce of the United States considered as a whole) to establish uniform rates upon competitive traffic which will adequately sustain all the carriers which are engaged in such traffic and which are indispensable to the communities to which they render the service of transportation, without enabling some of such carriers to receive a net railway operating income substantially and unreasonably in excess of a fair return upon the value of their railway property held for and used in the service of transportation, it is hereby declared that any carrier which receives such an income so in excess of a fair return, shall hold such part of the excess, as hereinafter prescribed, as trustee for, and shall pay it to, the United States. [41 Stat. L. 489.]

[Net railway operating income received by carriers in excess of 6 per centum — effect.] “(6) If, under the provisions of this section, any carrier receives for any year a net railway operating income in excess of 6 per centum of the value of the railway property held for and used by it in the service of transportation, one-half of such excess shall be placed in a reserve fund established and maintained by such carrier, and the remaining one-half thereof shall, within the first four months following the close of the period for which such computation is made, be recoverable by and paid to the Commission for the purpose of establishing and maintaining a general railroad contingent fund as hereinafter described. For the purposes of this paragraph the value of the railway property and the net railway operating income of a group of carriers, which the Commission finds are under common control and management and are operated as a single system, shall be computed for the system as a whole irrespective of the separate ownership and accounting returns of the various parts of such system. In the case of any carrier which has accepted the provisions of section 209 of this amendatory Act the provisions of this paragraph shall not be applicable to the income for any period prior to September 1, 1920. The value of such railway property shall be determined by the Commission in the manner provided in paragraph (4). [41 Stat. L. 489.]

[Right of carriers to draw from reserve fund — payment of dividends, interest, rent, etc.] “(7) For the purpose of paying dividends or interest on its stocks, bonds, or other securities, or rent for leased roads, a carrier may draw from the reserve fund established and maintained by it under the provisions of this section to the extent that its net railway operating income for any year is less than a sum equal to 6 per centum of the value of the railway property held for and used by it in the service of transportation, determined as provided in paragraph (6); but such fund shall not be drawn upon for any other purpose. [41 Stat. L. 489.]

[Reserve fund of carriers — accumulation.] “(8) Such reserve fund need not be accumulated and maintained by any carrier beyond a sum equal to 5 per centum of the value of its railway property determined as herein provided, and when such fund is so accumulated and maintained the portion of its excess income which the carrier is permitted to retain under paragraph (6) may be used by it for any lawful purpose. [41 Stat. L. 489.]

[Rules and regulations by Commission — determination and recovery of excess income.] “(9) The Commission shall prescribe rules and regulations for the determination and recovery of the excess income payable to it under this section, and may require such security and prescribe such reasonable terms and conditions in connection therewith as it may find necessary. The Commission shall make proper adjustments to provide for the computation of excess income for a portion of a year, and for a year in which a change in the percentage constituting a fair return or in the value of a carrier's railway property becomes effective. [41 Stat. L. 489.]

[General railroad contingent fund paid to Commission — disposition.] “(10) The general railroad contingent fund so to be recoverable by and paid to the Commission and all accretions thereof shall be a revolving fund and shall be administered by the Commission. It shall be used by the Commission in furtherance of the public interest in railway transportation either by making loans to carriers to meet expenditures for capital account or to refund maturing securities originally issued for capital account, or by purchasing transportation equipment and facilities and leasing the same to carriers, as hereinafter provided. Any moneys in the fund not so employed shall be invested in obligations of the United States or deposited in authorized depositories of the United States subject to the rules promulgated from time to time by the Secretary of the Treasury relating to Government deposits. [41 Stat. L. 490.]

[Loans to carriers from general railroad contingent fund — application.] “(11) A carrier may at any time make application to the Commission for a loan from the general railroad contingent fund, setting forth the amount of the loan and the term for which it is desired, the purpose of the loan and the uses to which it will be applied, the present and prospective ability of the applicant to repay the loan and meet the requirements of its obligations in that regard, the character and value of the security offered, and the extent to which the public convenience and necessity will be served. The application shall be accompanied by statements showing such facts and details as the Commission may require with respect to the physical situation, ownership, capitalization, indebtedness, contract obligations, operations, and earning power of the applicant, together with such other facts relating to the propriety and expediency of granting the loan applied for and the ability of the applicant to make good the obligation, as the Commission may deem pertinent to the inquiry. [41 Stat. L. 490.]

[Loans when granted by Commission — terms and conditions.] “(12) If the Commission, after such hearing and investigation, with or without notice, as it may direct, finds that the making, in whole or in part, of the proposed loan from the general railroad contingent fund is necessary to enable the applicant properly to meet the transportation needs of the public, and that the prospective earning power of the applicant and the character and value of the security offered are such as to furnish reasonable assurance of the applicant's ability to repay the loan within the time fixed therefor, and to meet its other obligations in connection with such loan, the Commission may make a loan to the applicant from such railroad contingent fund, in such amount, for such length of time, and under such terms and conditions as it may deem proper. The Commission shall also prescribe the security to be furnished, which shall be adequate to secure the loan. All such loans shall bear interest at the rate of 6 per centum per annum, payable semiannually to the Commission. Such loans when repaid, and all interest paid thereon, shall be placed in the general railroad contingent fund. [41 Stat. L. 490.]

[Leases of transportation equipment or facilities by carriers — application.] “(13) A carrier may at any time make application to the Commission for the lease to it of transportation equipment or facilities, purchased from the general railroad contingent fund, setting forth the kind and amount of such equipment or facilities and the term for which it is desired to be leased, the uses to which it is proposed to put such equipment or facilities, the present and prospective ability of the applicant to pay the rental charges thereon and to meet the requirements of its obligations under the lease, and the extent to which the public convenience and necessity will be served. The application shall be accompanied by statements showing such facts and details as the Commission may require with respect to the physical situation, ownership, capitalization, indebtedness, contract obligations, operation, and earning power of the applicant, together with such other facts relating to the propriety and expediency of leasing such equipment or facilities to the applicant as the Commission may deem pertinent to the inquiry. [41 Stat. L. 490.]

[Leases when made by Commission — terms and conditions.] “(14) If the Commission, after such hearing and investigation, with or without notice, as it may direct, finds that the leasing to the applicant of such equipment or facilities, in whole or in part, is necessary to enable the applicant properly to meet the transportation needs of the public, and that the prospective earning power of the applicant is such as to furnish reasonable assurance of the applicant's ability to pay promptly the rental charges and meet its other obligations under such lease, the Commission may lease such equipment or facilities purchased by it from the general railroad contingent fund, to the applicant for such length of time, and under such terms and conditions as it may deem proper. The rental charges provided in every such lease shall be at least sufficient to pay a return of 6 per centum per annum, plus allowance for depreciation determined as provided in paragraph (5) of section 20 of this Act, upon the value of the equipment or facilities leased thereunder. All rental charges and other payments received by the Commission in connection with such equipment and facilities, including amounts received under any sale thereof, shall be placed in the general railroad contingent fund. [41 Stat. L. 491.]

[Authority of Commission with respect to purchasing, maintaining, selling, etc., equipment and facilities.] “(15) The Commission may from time to time purchase, contract for the construction, repair and replacement of, and sell, equipment and facilities, and enter into and carry out contracts and other obligations in connection therewith, to the extent that moneys included in the general railroad contingent fund are available therefor, and in so far as necessary to enable it to secure and supply equipment and facilities to carriers whose applications therefor are approved under the provisions of this section, and to maintain and dispose of such equipment and facilities. [41 Stat. L. 491.]

[Rules and regulations by Commission — loans and leases of equipment and facilities.] “(16) The Commission may from time to time prescribe such rules and regulations as it deems necessary to carry out the provisions of this section respecting the making of loans and the lease of equipment and facilities. [41 Stat. L. 491.]

[Reparation for overcharges, etc.—right of shippers.] “(17) The provisions of this section shall not be construed as depriving shippers of their right to reparation in case of overcharges, unlawfully excessive or discriminatory rates, or rates excessive in their relation to other rates, but no shipper shall be entitled to recover upon the sole ground that any particular rate may reflect a proportion of excess income to be paid by the carrier to the Commission in the public interest under the provisions of this section. [41 Stat. L. 491.]

[Earnings of carriers from new construction — permission to retain.] “(18) Any carrier, or any corporation organized to construct and operate a railroad, proposing to undertake the construction and operation of a new line of railroad may apply to the Commission for permission to retain for a period not to exceed ten years all or any part of its earnings derived from such new construction in excess of the amount heretofore in this section provided, for such disposition as it may lawfully make of the same, and the Commission may, in its discretion, grant such permission, conditioned, however, upon the completion of the work of construction within a period to be designated by the Commission in its order granting such permission.” [41 Stat. L. 491.]

In either case the cause of action in respect of a shipment of property shall, for the purposes of this section, be deemed to accrue upon delivery or tender of delivery thereof by the carrier, and not after. A petition for the enforcement of an order for the payment of money shall be filed in the district court or State court within one year from the date of the order, and not after." [41 Stat. L. 491.]

“(5) The Commission may, in its discretion, prescribe the forms of any and all accounts, records, and memoranda to be kept by carriers subject to the provisions of this Act, including the accounts, records, and memoranda of the movement of traffic, as well as of the receipts and expenditures of moneys. The Commission shall, as soon as practicable, prescribe, for carriers subject to this Act, the classes of property for which depreciation charges may properly be included under operating expenses, and the percentages of depreciation which shall be charged with respect to each of such classes of property, classifying the carriers as it may deem proper for this purpose. The Commission may, when it deems necessary, modify the classes and percentages so prescribed. The carriers subject to this Act shall not charge to operating expenses any depreciation charges on classes of property other than those prescribed by the Commission, or charge with respect to any class of property a percentage of depreciation other than that prescribed therefor by the Commission. No such carrier shall in any case include in any form under its operating or other expenses any depreciation or other charge or expenditure included elsewhere as a depreciation charge or otherwise under its operating or other expenses. ["Carrier" as used in section defined.] "SEC. 20a. (1) That as used in this section the term 'carrier' means a common carrier by railroad (except a street, suburban, or interurban electric railway which is not operated as a part of a general steam railroad system of transportation) which is subject to this Act, or any corporation organized for the purpose of engaging in transportation by railroad subject to this Act. [41 Stat. L. 494.]

[Issuance of securities by carriers — assumption of obligations or liabilities — authorization by Commission.] "(2) From and after one hundred and twenty days after this section takes effect it shall be unlawful for any carrier to issue any share of capital stock or any bond or other evidence of interest in or indebtedness of the carrier (hereinafter in this section collectively termed 'securities') or to assume any obligation or liability as lessor, lessee, guarantor, indorser, surety, or otherwise, in respect of the securities of any other person, natural or artificial, even though permitted by the authority creating the carrier corporation, unless and until, and then only to the extent that, upon application by the carrier, and after investigation by the Commission of the purposes and uses of the proposed issue and the proceeds thereof, or of the proposed assumption of obligation or liability in respect of the securities of any other person, natural or artificial, the Commission by order authorizes such issue or assumption. The Commission shall make such order only if it finds that such issue or assumption: (a) is for some lawful object within its corporate purposes, and compatible with the public interest, which is necessary or appropriate for or consistent with the proper performance by the carrier of service to the public as a common carrier, and which will not impair its ability to perform that service, and (b) is reasonably necessary and appropriate for such purpose. [41 Stat. L. 494.]

([Scope of Commission's authority as to securities or obligations of carriers.] "(3) The Commission shall have power by its order to grant or deny the application as made, or to grant it in part and deny it in part, or to grant it with such modifications and upon such terms and conditions as the Commission may deem necessary or appropriate in the premises, and may from time to time, for good cause shown, make such supplemental orders in the premises as it may deem necessary or appropriate, and may by any such supplemental order modify the provisions of any previous order as to the particular purposes, uses, and extent to which, or the conditions under which, any securities so theretofore authorized or the proceeds thereof may be applied, subject always to the requirements of the foregoing paragraph (2). [41 Stat. L. 495.]

[Application to Commission for authority — form and contents — certificate of notification.] "(4) Every application for authority shall be made in such form and contain such matters as the Commission may prescribe. Every such application, as also every certificate of notification hereinafter provided for, shall be made under oath, signed and filed on behalf of the carrier by its president, a vice president, auditor, comptroller, or other executive officer having knowledge of the matters therein set forth and duly designated for that purpose by the carrier. [41 Stat. L. 495.]

[Subsequent disposition of securities described in application of authority or certificate of notification.] “(5) Whenever any securities set forth and described in any application for authority or certificate of notification as pledged or held unencumbered in the treasury of the carrier shall, subsequent to the filing of such application or certificate, be sold, pledged, repledged, or otherwise disposed of by the carrier, such carrier shall, within ten days after such sale, pledge, repledge, or other disposition, file with the Commission a certificate of notification to that effect, setting forth therein all such facts as may be required by the Commission. [41 Stat. L. 495.]

[Notice of filing of application for authority — intervention by State officials — hearing on application.] “(6) Upon receipt of any such application for authority the Commission shall cause notice thereof to be given to and a copy filed with the governor of each State in which the applicant carrier operates. The railroad commissions, public service or utilities commissions, or other appropriate State authorities of the State shall have the right to make before the Commission such representations as they may deem just and proper for preserving and conserving the rights and interests of their people and the States, respectively, involved in such proceedings. The Commission may hold hearings, if it sees fit, to enable it to determine its decision upon the application for authority. [41 Stat. L. 495.]

[Jurisdiction of Commission as exclusive and plenary.] “(7) The jurisdiction conferred upon the Commission by this section shall be exclusive and plenary, and a carrier may issue securities and assume obligations or liabilities in accordance with the provisions of this section without securing approval other than as specified herein. [41 Stat. L. 495.]

[Guaranty of securities by United States.] “(8) Nothing herein shall be construed to imply any guaranty or obligation as to such securities on the part of the United States. [41 Stat. L. 495.]

[Short term notes as affected by foregoing provisions — power of carriers to issue — par value — certificate of notification.] “(9) The foregoing provisions of this section shall not apply to notes to be issued by the carrier maturing not more than two years after the date thereof and aggregating (together with all other then outstanding notes of a maturity of two years or less) not more than 5 per centum of the par value of the securities of the carrier then outstanding. In the case of securities having no par value, the par value for the purposes of this paragraph shall be the fair market value as of the date of issue. Within ten days after the making of such notes the carrier issuing the same shall file with the Commission a certificate of notification, in such form as may from time to time be determined and prescribed by the Commission, setting forth as nearly as may be the same matters as those required in respect of applications for authority to issue other securities: Provided, That in any subsequent funding of such notes the provisions of this section respecting other securities shall apply. [41 Stat. L. 495.]

[Reports by carriers as to securities issued.] “(10) The Commission shall require periodical or special reports from each carrier hereafter issuing any securities, including such notes, which shall show, in such detail as the Commission may require, the disposition made of such securities and the application of the proceeds thereof. [41 Stat. L. 496.]

[Securities issued or obligation or liability assumed without complying with requirements as to authorization — effect.] “(11) Any security issued or any obligation or liability assumed by a carrier, for which under the provisions of this section the authorization of the Commission is required, shall be void, if issued or assumed without such authorization therefor having first been obtained, or if issued or assumed contrary to any term or condition of such order of authorization as modified by any order supplemental thereto entered prior to such issuance or assumption; but no security issued or obligation or liability assumed in accordance with all the terms and conditions of such an order of authorization therefor as modified by any order supplemental thereto entered prior to such issuance or assumption, shall be rendered void because of failure to comply with any provision of this section relating to procedure and other matters preceding the entry of such order of authorization. If any security so made void or any security in respect to which the assumption of obligation or liability is so made void, is acquired by any person for value and in good faith and without notice that the issue or assumption is void, such person may in a suit or action in any court of competent jurisdiction hold jointly and severally liable for the full amount of the damage sustained by him in respect thereof, the carrier which issued the security so made void, or assumed the obligation or liability so made void, and its directors, officers, attorneys, and other agents, who participated in any way in the authorizing, issuing, hypothecating, or selling of the security so made void or in the authorizing of the assumption of the obligation or liability so made void. In case any security so made void was directly acquired from the carrier issuing it the holder may at his option rescind the transaction and upon the surrender of the security recover the consideration given therefor. Any director, officer, attorney or agent of the carrier who knowingly assents to or concurs in any issue of securities or assumptions of obligation or liability forbidden by this section, or any sale or other disposition of securities contrary to the provisions of the Commission's order or orders in the premises, or any application not authorized by the Commission of the funds derived by the carrier through such sale or other disposition of such securities, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction shall be punished by a fine of not less than $1,000 nor more than $10,000, or by imprisonment for not less than one year nor more than three years, or by both such fine and imprisonment, in the discretion of the court. [41 Stat. L. 496.]

[Officers and directors of carriers — qualifications — participation in certain benefits or profits prohibited.] “(12) After December 31, 1921, it shall be unlawful for any person to hold the position of officer or director of more than one carrier, unless such holding shall have been authorized by order of the Commission, upon due showing, in form and manner prescribed by the Commission, that neither public nor private interests will be adversely affected thereby. After this section takes effect it shall be unlawful for any officer or director of any carrier to receive for his own benefit, directly or indirectly, any money or thing of value in respect of the negotiation, hypothecation, or sale of any securities issued or to be issued by such carrier, or to share in any of the proceeds thereof, or to participate in the making or paying of any dividends of an operating carrier from any funds properly included in capital account. Any violation of these provisions shall be a misdemeanor, and on conviction in any United States court having jurisdiction shall be punished by a fine of not less than $1,000 nor more than $10,000, or by imprisonment for not less than one year nor more than three years, or by both such fine and imprisonment, in the discretion of the court." [41 Stat. L. 496.]

SEC. 440. [Membership of Commission — number — terms — qualifications — salaries — secretary.] Section 24 of the Interstate Commerce Act is hereby amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 24. That the Commission is hereby enlarged so as to consist of eleven members, with terms of seven years, and each shall receive $12,000 compensation annually. The qualifications of the members and the manner of payment of their salaries shall be as already provided by law. Such enlargement of the Commission shall be accomplished through appointment by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, of two additional Interstate Commerce Commissioners, one for a term expiring December 31, 1923, and one for a term expiring December 31, 1924. The terms of the present commissioners, or of any successor appointed to fill a vacancy caused by the death or resignation of any of the present commissioners, shall expire as heretofore provided by law. Their successors and the successors of the additional commissioners herein provided for shall be appointed for the full term of seven years, except that any person appointed to fill a vacancy shall be appointed only for the unexpired term of the commissioner whom he shall succeed. Not more than six commissioners shall be appointed from the same political party. Hereafter the salary of the secretary of the Commission shall be $7,500 a year." [41 Stat. L. 497.]

SEC. 441. [Sections 25, 26 and 27 added.] The Interstate Commerce Act is hereby further amended by adding at the end thereof three new sections, to read as follows:

[Common carriers by water in foreign commerce — filing schedules with Commission — contents.] "SEC. 25. (1) That every common carrier by water in foreign commerce, whose vessels are registered under the laws of the United States, shall file with the Commission, within thirty days after this section becomes effective and regularly thereafter as changes are made, a schedule or schedules showing for each of its steam vessels intended to load general cargo at ports in the United States for foreign destinations (a) the ports of loading, (b) the dates upon which such vessels will commence to receive freight and dates of sailing, (c) the route and itinerary such vessels will follow and the ports of call for which cargo will be carried. [41 Stat. L. 497.]

[Quotation of rates by carriers by water on request.] "(2) Upon application of any shipper a carrier by railroad shall make request for, and the carrier by water shall upon receipt of such request name, a specific rate applying for such sailing, and upon such commodity as shall be embraced in the inquiry, and shall name in connection with such rate, port charges, if any, which accrue in addition to the vessel's rates and are not otherwise published by the railway as in addition to or absorbed in the railway rate. Vessel rates, if conditioned upon quantity of shipment, must be so stated and separate rates may be provided for carload and less than carload shipments. The carrier by water, upon advices from a carrier by railroad, stating that the quoted rate is firmly accepted as applying upon a specifically named quantity of any commodity, shall, subject to such conditions as the Commission by regulation may prescribe, make firm reservation from unsold space in such steam vessel as shall be required for its transportation and shall so advise the carrier by railroad, in which advices shall be included the latest available information as to prospective sailing date of such vessel. [41 Stat. L. 497.]

[Modification of schedules — publication of schedules — rules and regulations.] “(3) As the matters so required to be stated in such schedule or schedules are changed or modified from time to time, the carrier shall file with the Commission such changes or modifications as early as practicable after such modification is ascertained. The Commission is authorized to make and publish regulations not inconsistent herewith governing the manner and form in which such carriers are to comply with the foregoing provisions. The Commission shall cause to be published in compact form, for the information of shippers of commodities throughout the country, the substance of such schedules, and furnish such publications to all railway carriers subject to this Act, in such quantities that railway carriers may supply to each of their agents who receive commodities for shipment in such cities and towns as may be specified by the Commission, a copy of said publication; the intent being that each shipping community sufficiently important, from the standpoint of the export trade, to be so specified by the Commission shall have opportunity to know the sailings and routes, and to ascertain the transportation charges of such vessels engaged in foreign commerce. Each railway carrier to which such publication is furnished by the Commission is hereby required to distribute the same as aforesaid and to maintain such publication as it is issued from time to time, in the hands of its agents. The Commission is authorized to make such rules and regulations not inconsistent herewith respecting the distribution and maintenance of such publications in the several communities so specified as will further the intent of this section. [41 Stat. L. 498.]

[Bills of lading — issuance — form and contents.] “(4) When any consignor delivers a shipment of property to any of the places so specified by the Commission, to be delivered by a railway carrier to one of the vessels upon which space has been reserved at a specified rate previously ascertained, as provided herein, for the transportation by water from and for a port named in the aforesaid schedule, the railway carrier shall issue a through bill of lading to the point of destination. Such bill of lading shall name separately the charge to be paid for the railway transportation, water transportation, and port charges, if any, not included in the rail or water transportation charge; but the carrier by railroad shall not be liable to the consignor, consignee, or other person interested in the shipment after its delivery to the vessel. The Commission shall, in such manner as will preserve for the carrier by water the protection of limited liability provided by law, make such rules and regulations not inconsistent herewith as will prescribe the form of such through bill of lading. In all such cases it shall be the duty of the carrier by railroad to deliver such shipment to the vessel as a part of its undertaking as a common carrier. [41 Stat. L. 498.]

[Issuance of bill of lading as constituting "arrangement for continuous carriage."] "(5) The issuance of a through bill of lading covering shipments provided for herein shall not be held to constitute 'an arrangement for continuous carriage or shipment' within the meaning of this Act. [41 Stat. L. 498.]

[Safety devices on railroads — authority of Commission — failure to install — negligence.] "SEC. 26. That the Commission may, after investigation, order any carrier by railroad subject to this Act, within a time specified in the order, to install automatic train-stop or train-control devices or other safety devices, which comply with specifications and requirements prescribed by the Commission, upon the whole or any part of its railroad. such order to be issued and published at least two years before the date specified for its fulfillment: Provided, That a carrier shall not be held to be negligent because of its failure to install such devices upon a portion of its railroad not included in the order; and any action arising because of an accident happening upon such portion of its railroad shall be determined without consideration of the use of such devices upon another portion of its railroad. Any common carrier which refuses or neglects to comply with any order of the Commission made under the authority conferred by this section shall be liable to a penalty of $100 for each day that such refusal or neglect continues, which shall accrue to the United States, and may be recovered in a civil action brought by the United States. [41 Stat. L. 498.]

[Name of Act — "Interstate Commerce Act."] "SEC. 27. That this Act may be cited as the 'Interstate Commerce Act.' " [41 Stat. L. 499.]

TITLE V.— MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS.

It shall be the duty of the Secretary of War, with the object of promoting, encouraging, and developing inland waterway transportation facilities in connection with the commerce of the United States, to investigate the appropriate types of boats suitable for different classes of such waterways; to investigate the subject of water terminals, both for inland waterway traffic and for through traffic by water and rail, including the necessary docks, warehouses, apparatus, equipment, and appliances in connection therewith, and also railroad spurs and switches connecting with such terminals, with a view to devising the types most appropriate for different locations, and for the more expeditious and economical transfer or interchange of passengers or property between carriers by water and carriers by rail; to advise with communities, cities, and towns regarding the appropriate location of such terminals, and to cooperate with them in the preparation of plans for suitable terminal facilities; to investigate the existing status of water transportation upon the different inland waterways of the country, with a view to determining whether such waterways are being utilized to the extent of their capacity, and to what extent they are meeting the demands of traffic, and whether the water carriers utilizing such waterways are interchanging traffic with the railroads; and to investigate any other matter that may tend to promote and encourage inland water transportation. It shall also be the province and duty of the Secretary of War to compile, publish, and distribute, from time to time, such useful statistics, data, and information concerning transportation on inland waterways as he may deem to be of value to the commercial interests of the country.

The words "inland waterway" as used in this section shall be construed to include the Great Lakes. [41 Stat. L. 499.]

[Invalidity of part of Act — effect on remainder.] That if any clause, sentence, paragraph, or part of this Act shall for any reason be adjudged by any court of competent jurisdiction to be invalid such judgment shall not affect, impair, or invalidate the remainder of the Act, but shall be confined in its operation to the clause, sentence, paragraph, or part thereof directly involved in the controversy in which such judgment has been rendered. [41 Stat. L. 499.]

[SEC. 1.] [Public lands in Arkansas subject to state drainage laws.] That all of those unentered, unreserved public lands, and all of those entered lands for which no final certificates have been issued, within the areas hereinafter described, are hereby made and declared to be subject to the laws of the State of Arkansas relating to the organization, government, and regulation of drainage districts to the same extent and in the same manner, except as hereinafter provided, in which lands held under private ownership are or may be subject to said laws: Provided That the United States and all persons legally holding unpatented lands under entries made under the public-land laws of the United States shall be accorded all the rights, privileges, and benefits given by said laws to persons holding lands in private ownership, said lands being those public lands in Mississippi County, Arkansas, in townships fourteen, fifteen, and sixteen north, range nine east, and townships fifteen and sixteen north, range ten east, fifth principal meridian, according to the official surveys thereof approved October 12, 1915, and all of those unentered public lands, and all of those entered lands for which no final certificates have been issued in Poinsett County, Arkansas, in townships eleven and twelve north, range six east, fifth principal meridian, according to the official surveys thereof approved July 30, 1913. [41 Stat. L. 392.]

SEC. 2. [Apportionment of cost of drainage—certification of charges.] That the construction and maintenance of canals, ditches, levees, and other drainage works upon and across the lands subject to the operation of this Act are hereby authorized, subject to the same conditions as are imposed by the laws of the State of Arkansas upon lands held in private ownership, and that the cost of construction and maintenance of canals, ditches, levees, and other drainage works incurred in connection with any drainage project under said laws shall be equitably apportioned among all lands held in private ownership, all unentered public lands, and all lands embraced in unpatented entries affected by such project. Officially certified lists showing the amount of charges assessed against each smallest legal subdivision of such lands shall be furnished to the register and receiver of the United States land office of the district in which the lands affected are situated as soon as said charges would become a lien if the lands were held in private ownership [41 Stat. L. 392.]

SEC. 3. [Charges assessed against lands as lien—enforcement by sale.] That all charges legally assessed pursuant to the drainage laws of the State of Arkansas by a drainage district against any unentered public lands, or against any lands embraced in unpatented entries, subject to the provisions of this Act, shall be a lien upon said lands, which may be enforced by sale in the same manner and subject to the same conditions, except as hereinafter set forth, under which said charges shall be enforced against lands held in private ownership, and whenever any of said lands shall be sold for nonpayment of such charges, inclusive of lands bid in for a drainage district, a statement showing the name of the purchaser, the price at which each legal subdivision was sold the amount assessed against it, together with penalties and interest, if any, and the cost of the sale, and the amount of excess, if any, over and above all lawful assessment charges and the cost of sale, shall be officially certified to the register and receiver of the United States land office of the district in which the lands are situated immediately after the completion of such sale, but nothing in this Act shall be construed as creating any obligation on the United States to pay any of said charges. [41 Stat. L. 393.]

SEC. 4. [Sales of lands subject to Act—disposition of moneys received.] That all moneys received from the sale of entered or unentered lands subject to the operation of this Act which shall be in excess of assessments due thereon, together with penalties and interest and the costs of the sales, shall be paid by the proper county officer to the receiver of the United States land office of the district in which the lands are situated, and such excess moneys shall be covered into the United States Treasury as proceeds from the sales of public lands. [41 Stat. L. 393.]

SEC. 5. [Patents—purchasers—qualifications—limitation on amount of land sold to single purchaser—proceeds of sale.] That at any time within ninety days after the sale of unentered public lands and at any time within ninety days after the expiration of the period of redemption provided for in the drainage laws under which the lands are sold, no redemption having been made, after the sale of lands embraced within unpatented entries, the purchaser at such sale, a drainage district being herein expressly excepted from the operation of this provision, shall, upon the filing of an application therefor and an affidavit containing proof of necessary qualifications with the register and receiver of the United States land office, and upon payment to the receiver of the price of $5 per acre, together with the usual fees and commissions charged in entry of lands under the homestead laws, be entitled to receive a patent: Provided. That such purchaser shall have the qualifications required in making entry of lands under the homestead laws, and any such purchase shall exhaust any further homestead right of the purchaser to the extent of the amount of lands thus purchased by him. Not more than one hundred and sixty acres of such lands shall be sold and patented to any one purchaser under the provisions of this Act. This limitation shall not apply to lands subject to the operation of this Act which may be bid in for a drainage district, but no patent shall be issued to a drainage district or to any one bidding in said lands for a drainage district. The proceeds derived by the Government shall be covered into the United States Treasury and applied as provided by law for the disposal of the proceeds from the sale of public lands. [41 Stat. L. 393.]

SEC. 6. [Failure of purchaser to complete sale—subrogation.] That unless the purchaser shall, within the time specified in section 5 of this Act, file with the register and receiver of the United States land office an application for a patent, together with the required affidavit, and make payment of the purchase price, fees, and commissions as provided in said section 5, any person having the qualifications of an entryman under the homestead laws may file an application for a patent, together with the required affidavit, and upon payment to the receiver of the purchase price of $5 per acre, fees, and commissions, and in addition thereto an amount equal to the drainage charges, penalties, interest, and costs for which the lands were sold, and if the lands were bid in for the drainage district, an additional amount equal to 6 per centum per annum on the sum for which the lands were sold from the date of such sale, said applicant shall become subrogated to the rights of such purchaser and shall be entitled to receive a patent for not more than one hundred and sixty acres of said lands. When payment is made to effect subrogation as herein provided the register and receiver of the United States land office shall serve notice upon the purchaser that an application for patent for the lands purchased by him has been filed, and that the amount of the drainage charges, penalties, interests, and costs of the sale will be paid to him upon submission of proof of purchase and payment by him of said sums. The receiver shall make such payment as soon as said requirement shall have been fulfilled. If the lands were bid in for a drainage district, the receiver will pay to the proper county officers the amount of the drainage charges, penalties, and interests and costs of sale, together with the additional sum of 6 per centum per annum, to which said drainage district is entitled. All remaining moneys to which the United States may be entitled shall be covered into the United States Treasury and applied as provided by law for the disposal of the proceeds from the sale of public lands. [41 Stat. L. 393.]

SEC. 7. [Notices — hearings — appeals.] That a copy of all notices required by the drainage laws of the State of Arkansas to be given to the owners and occupants of lands held in private ownership shall, as soon as such notice is issued, be delivered to the register and receiver of the United States land office of the district in which the lands are situated where any of the lands subject to the operation of this Act are affected, and the United States and the entryman claiming under the public land laws of the United States shall be accorded the same rights to be heard by petition, answer, remonstrance, appeal, or otherwise, as are given to persons holding lands in private ownership, and all entrymen shall be given the same rights of redemption as are given to the owners of land held in private ownership. [41 Stat. L. 394.]

SEC. 8. [Act when effective.] That this Act shall not be effective as to any lands involved in suits instituted on behalf of the United States with a view to quieting title in the Government to such lands until and unless such suits shall be finally determined in favor of the United States. [41 Stat. L. 394.]

An Act To authorize a preference right of entry by certain Carey Act entrymen, and for other purposes.

[SEC. 1.] [Mineral deposits — leasing by government — lands affected — reservation to extract helium from gas.] That deposits of coal, phosphate, sodium, oil, oil shale, or gas, and lands containing such deposits owned by the United States, including those in national forests, but excluding lands acquired under the Act known as the Appalachian Forest Act, approved March 1, 1911 (Thirty-sixth Statutes, page 961), and those in national parks, and in lands withdrawn or reserved for military or naval uses or purposes, except as hereinafter provided, shall be subject to disposition in the form and manner provided by this Act to citizens of the United States, or to any association of such persons, or to any corporation organized under the laws of the United States, or of any State or Territory thereof, and in the case of coal, oil, oil shale, or gas, to municipalities: Provided, That the United States reserves the right to extract helium from all gas produced from lands permitted, leased, or otherwise granted under the provisions of this Act, under such rules and regulations as shall be prescribed by the Secretary of the Interior: Provided further, That in the extraction of helium from gas produced from such lands, it shall be so extracted as to cause no substantial delay in the delivery of gas produced from the well to the purchaser thereof: And provided further, That citizens of another country, the laws, customs, or regulations of which, deny similar or like privileges to citizens or corporations of this country, shall not by stock ownership, stock holding, or stock control, own any interest in any lease acquired under the provisions of this Act. COAL.

SEC. 2. [Leasing coal lands — occupants and claimants — prospecting or exploratory work — notice of leasing — leasing by railroads.] That the Secretary of the Interior is authorized to, and upon the petition of any qualified applicant shall, divide any of the coal lands or the deposits of coal, classified and unclassified, owned by the United States, outside of the Territory of Alaska, into leasing tracts of forty acres each, or multiples thereof, and in such form as, in the opinion of the Secretary of the Interior, will permit the most economical mining of the coal in such tracts, but in no case exceeding two thousand five hundred and sixty acres in any one leasing tract, and thereafter the Secretary of the Interior shall, in his discretion, upon the request of any qualified applicant or on his own motion, from time to time, offer such lands or deposits of coal for leasing, and shall award leases thereon by competitive bidding or by such other methods as he may by general regulations adopt, to any qualified applicant: Provided, That the Secretary is hereby authorized, in awarding leases for coal lands heretofore improved and occupied or claimed in good faith, to consider and recognize equitable rights of such occupants or claimants: Provided further, That where prospecting or exploratory work is necessary to determine the existence or workability of coal deposits in any unclaimed, undeveloped area, the Secretary of the Interior may issue, to applicants qualified under this Act, prospecting permits for a term of two years, for not exceeding two thousand five hundred and sixty acres; and if within said period of two years thereafter, the permittee shows to the Secretary that the land contains coal in commercial quantities, the permittee shall be entitled to a lease under this Act for all or part of the land in his permit: And provided further, That no lease of coal under this Act shall be approved or issued until after notice of the proposed lease, or offering for lease, has been given for thirty days in a newspaper of general circulation in the county in which the lands or deposits are situated: And provided further, That no company or corporation operating a common carrier railroad shall be given or hold a permit or lease under the provisions of this Act for any coal deposits except for its own use for railroad purposes; and such limitations of use shall be expressed in all permits and leases issued to such companies or corporations, and no such company or corporation shall receive or hold more than one permit or lease for each two hundred miles of its railroad line within the State in which said property is situated, exclusive of spurs or switches and exclusive of branch lines built to connect the leased coal with the railroad, and also exclusive of parts of the railroad operated mainly by power produced otherwise than by steam: And provided further, That nothing herein shall preclude such a railroad of less than two hundred miles in length from securing and holding one permit or lease hereunder. [41 Stat. L. 438.]

SEC. 3. [Modification of leases — contiguous coal deposits.] That any person, association, or corporation holding a lease of coal lands or coal deposits under this Act may, with the approval of the Secretary of the Interior, upon a finding by him that it will be for the advantage of the lessee and the United States, secure modifications of his or its original lease by including additional coal lands or coal deposits contiguous to those embraced in such lease, but in no event shall the total area embraced in such modified lease exceed in the aggregate two thousand five hundred and sixty acres. [41 Stat. L. 439.]

SEC. 4. [Exhaustion of coal deposits — leases of additional tracts.] That upon satisfactory showing by any lessee to the Secretary of the Interior that all of the workable deposits of coal within a tract covered by his or its lease will be exhausted, worked out, or removed within three years thereafter, the Secretary of the Interior may, within his discretion, lease to such lessee an additional tract of land or coal deposits, which, including the coal area remaining in the existing lease, shall not exceed two thousand five hundred and sixty acres, through the same procedure and under the same conditions as in case of an original lease. [41 Stat. L. 439.]

SEC. 5. [Consolidation of leases.] That if, in the judgment of the Secretary of the Interior, the public interest will be subserved thereby, lessees holding under lease areas not exceeding the maximum permitted under this Act may consolidate their leases through the surrender of the original leases and the inclusion of such areas in a new lease of not to exceed two thousand five hundred and sixty acres of contiguous lands. [41 Stat. L. 439.]

SEC. 6. [Single lease embracing noncontiguous tracts.] That where coal or phosphate lands aggregating two thousand five hundred and sixty acres and subject to lease hereunder do not exist as contiguous areas, the Secretary of the Interior is authorized, if, in his opinion the interests of the public and of the lessee will be thereby subserved, to embrace in a single lease noncontiguous tracts which can be operated as a single mine or unit. [41 Stat. L. 439.]

SEC. 7. [Royalties — period of lease — continuity of operation of mines.] That for the privilege of mining or extracting the coal in the lands covered by the lease the lessee shall pay to the United States such royalties as may be specified in the lease, which shall be fixed in advance of offering the same, and which shall not be less than 5 cents per ton of two thousand pounds, due and payable at the end of each third month succeeding that of the extraction of the coal from the mine, and an annual rental, payable at the date of such lease and annually thereafter, on the lands or coal deposits covered by such lease, at such rate as may be fixed by the Secretary of the Interior prior to offering the same, which shall not be less than 25 cents per acre for the first year thereafter, not less than 50 cents per acre for the second, third, fourth, and fifth years, respectively, and not less than $1 per acre for each and every year thereafter during the continuance of the lease, except that such rental for any year shall be credited against the royalties as they accrue for that year. Leases shall be for indeterminate periods upon condition of diligent development and continued operation of the mine or mines, except when such operation shall be interrupted by strikes, the elements, or casualties not attributable to the lessee, and upon the further condition that at the end of each twenty-year period succeeding the date of the lease such readjustment of terms and conditions may be made as the Secretary of the Interior may determine, unless otherwise provided by law at the time of the expiration of such periods: Provided, That the Secretary of the Interior may, if in his judgment the public interest will be subserved thereby, in lieu of the provision herein contained requiring continuous operation of the mine or mines, provide in the lease for the payment of an annual advance royalty upon a minimum number of tons of coal, which in no case shall aggregate less than the amount of rentals herein provided for: Provided further, That the Secretary of the Interior may permit suspension of operation under such lease for not to exceed six months at any one time when market conditions are such that the lease can not be operated except at a loss. [41 Stat. L. 439.]

SEC. 8. [Supplying local domestic needs for fuel—limited licenses and permits—corporations—municipalities.] That in order to provide for the supply of strictly local domestic needs for fuel, the Secretary of the Interior may, under such rules and regulations as he may prescribe in advance, issue limited licenses or permits to individuals or associations of individuals to prospect for, mine, and take for their use but not for sale, coal from the public lands without payment of royalty for the coal mined or the land occupied, on such conditions not inconsistent with this Act as in his opinion will safeguard the public interests: Provided, That this privilege shall not extend to any corporations: Provided further, That in the case of municipal corporations the Secretary of the Interior may issue such limited license or permit, for not to exceed three hundred and twenty acres for a municipality of less than one hundred thousand population, and not to exceed one thousand two hundred and eighty acres for a municipality of not less than one hundred thousand and not more than one hundred and fifty thousand population; and not to exceed two thousand five hundred and sixty acres for a municipality of one hundred and fifty thousand population or more, the land to be selected within the State wherein the municipal applicant may be located, upon condition that such municipal corporations will mine the coal therein under proper conditions and dispose of the same without profit to residents of such municipality for household use: And provided further, That the acquisition or holding of a lease under the preceding sections of this Act shall be no bar to the holding of such tract or operation of such mine under said limited license. [41 Stat. L. 440.]

PHOSPHATES.

SEC. 9. [Leasing phosphate lands.] That the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized to lease to any applicant qualified under this Act any lands belonging to the United States containing deposits of phosphates, under such restrictions and upon such terms as are herein specified, through advertisement, competitive bidding, or such other methods as the Secretary of the Interior may by general regulation adopt. [41 Stat. L. 440.]

SEC. 10. [Acreage embraced in lease.] That each lease shall be for not to exceed two thousand five hundred and sixty acres of land to be described by the legal subdivisions of the public land surveys, if surveyed; if unsurveyed, to be surveyed by the Government at the expense of the applicant for lease, in accordance with rules and regulations prescribed by the Secretary of the Interior and the lands leased shall be conformed to and taken in accordance with the legal subdivisions of such survey; deposits made to cover expense of surveys shall be deemed appropriated for that purpose; and any excess deposits shall be repaid to the person, association, or corporation making such deposits or their legal representatives: Provided, That the land embraced in any one lease shall be in compact form, the length of which shall not exceed two and one half times its width. [41 Stat. L. 440.]

SEC. 11. [Royalties — period of lease — continuity of operation of mines.] That for the privilege of mining or extracting the phosphates or phosphate rock covered by the lease the lessee shall pay to the United States such royalties as may be specified in the lease, which shall be fixed by the Secretary of the Interior in advance of offering the same, which shall be not less than 2 per centum of the gross value of the output of phosphates or phosphate rock at the mine, due and payable at the end of each third month succeeding that of the sale or other disposition of the phosphates or phosphate rock, and an annual rental payable at the date of such lease and annually thereafter on the area covered by such lease at such rate as may be fixed by the Secretary of the Interior prior to offering the lease, which shall be not less than 25 cents per acre for the first year thereafter, 50 cents per acre for the second, third, fourth, and fifth years, respectively, and $1 per acre for each and every year thereafter during the continuance of the lease, except that such rental for any year shall be credited against the royalties as they accrue for that year. Leases shall be for indeterminate periods upon condition of a minimum annual production, except when operation shall be interrupted by strikes, the elements, or casualties not attributable to the lessee, and upon the further condition that at the end of each twenty-year period succeeding the date of the lease such readjustment of terms and conditions shall be made as the Secretary of the Interior shall determine unless otherwise provided by law at the time of the expiration of such periods: Provided, That the Secretary of the Interior may permit suspension of operation under such lease for not exceeding twelve months at any one time when market conditions are such that the lease can not be operated except at a loss. [41 Stat. L. 440.]

SEC. 12. [Surface of unappropriated and unentered lands — use.] That any qualified applicant to whom the Secretary of the Interior may grant a lease to develop and extract phosphates, or phosphate rock, under the provisions of this Act shall have the right to use so much of the surface of unappropriated and unentered lands, not exceeding forty acres, as may be determined by the Secretary of the Interior to be necessary for the proper prospecting for or development, extraction, treatment, and removal of such mineral deposits. [41 Stat. L. 441.]

OIL AND GAS.

SEC. 13. [Lands containing oil and gas — prospecting permits.] That the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized, under such necessary and proper rules and regulations as he may prescribe, to grant to any applicant qualified under this Act a prospecting permit, which shall give the exclusive right, for a period not exceeding two years, to prospect for oil or gas upon not to exceed two thousand five hundred and sixty acres of land wherein such deposits belong to the United States and are not within any known geological structure of a producing oil or gas field upon condition that the permittee shall begin drilling operations within six months from the date of the permit, and shall, within one year from and after the date of permit, drill one or more wells for oil or gas to a depth of not less than five hundred feet each, unless valuable deposits of oil or gas shall be sooner discovered, and shall, within two years from date of the permit, drill for oil or gas to an aggregate depth of not less than two thousand feet unless valuable deposits of oil or gas shall be sooner discovered. The Secretary of the Interior may, if he shall find that the permittee has been unable with the exercise of diligence to test the land in the time granted by the permit, extend any such permit for such time, not exceeding two years, and upon such conditions as he shall prescribe. Whether the lands sought in any such application and permit are surveyed or unsurveyed the applicant shall, prior to filing his application for permit, locate such lands in a reasonably compact form and according to the legal subdivisions of the public land surveys if the land be surveyed; and in an approximately square or rectangular tract if the land be an unsurveyed tract, the length of which shall not exceed two and one-half times its width, and if he shall cause to be erected upon the land for which a permit is sought a monument not less than four feet high, at some conspicuous place thereon, and shall post a notice in writing on or near said monument, stating that an application for permit will be made within thirty days after date of posting said notice, the name of the applicant, the date of the notice, and such a general description of the land to be covered by such permit by reference to courses and distances from such monument and such other natural objects and permanent monuments as will reasonably identify the land, stating the amount thereof in acres. he shall during the period of thirty days following such marking and posting, be entitled to a preference right over others to a permit for the land so identified. The applicant shall, within ninety days after receiving a permit, mark each of the corners of the tract described in the permit upon the ground with substantial monuments, so that the boundaries can be readily traced on the ground, and shall post in a conspicuous place upon the lands a notice that such permit has been granted and a description of the lands covered thereby: Provided, That in the Territory of Alaska prospecting permits not more than five in number may be granted to any qualified applicant for periods not exceeding four years, actual drilling operations shall begin within two years from date of permit, and oil and gas wells shall be drilled to a depth of not less than five hundred feet, unless valuable deposits of oil or gas shall be sooner discovered, within three years from date of the permit and to an aggregate depth of not less than two thousand feet unless valuable deposits of oil or gas shall be sooner discovered, within four years from date of permit: Provided further, That in said Territory the applicants shall have a preference right over others to a permit for land identified by temporary monuments and notice posted on or near the same for six months following such marking and posting, and upon receiving a permit he shall mark the corners of the tract described in the permit upon the ground with substantial monuments within one year after receiving such permit. [41 Stat. L. 441.]

SEC. 14. [Discovery of deposits of oil or gas by permittee — lease.] That upon establishing to the satisfaction of the Secretary of the Interior that valuable deposits of oil or gas have been discovered within the limits of the land embraced in any permit, the permittee shall be entitled to a lease for one-fourth of the land embraced in the prospecting permit: Provided, That the permittee shall be granted a lease for as much as one hundred and sixty acres of said lands, if there be that number of acres within the permit. The area to be selected by the permittee, shall be in compact form and, if surveyed, to be described by the legal subdivisions of the public-land surveys; if unsurveyed, to be surveyed by the Government at the expense of the applicant for lease in accordance with rules and regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary of the Interior and the lands leased shall be conformed to and taken in accordance with the legal subdivisions of such surveys; deposits made to cover expense of surveys shall be deemed appropriated for that purpose, and any excess deposits may be repaid to the person or persons making such deposit or their legal representatives. Such leases shall be for a term of twenty years upon a royalty of 5 per centum in amount or value of the production and the annual payment in advance of a rental of $1 per acre, the rental paid for any one year to be credited against the royalties as they accrue for that year, with the right of renewal as prescribed in section 17 hereof. The permittee shall also be entitled to a preference right to a lease for the remainder of the land in his prospecting permit at a royalty of not less than 12½ per centum in amount or value of the production, and under such other conditions as are fixed for oil or gas leases in this Act, the royalty to be determined by competitive bidding or fixed by such other method as the Secretary may by regulations prescribe: Provided, That the Secretary shall have the right to reject any or all bids. [41 Stat. L. 442.]

SEC. 15. [Disposal of oil and gas by permittee — payments to government.] That until the permittee shall apply for lease to the one quarter of the permit area heretofore provided for he shall pay to the United States 20 per centum of the gross value of all oil or gas secured by him from the lands embraced within his permit and sold or otherwise disposed of or held by him for sale or other disposition. [41 Stat. L. 442.]

SEC. 16. [Permits and leases — condition of issuance.] That all permits and leases of lands containing oil or gas, made or issued under the provisions of this Act, shall be subject to the condition that no wells shall be drilled within two hundred feet of any of the outer boundaries of the lands so permitted or leased, unless the adjoining lands have been patented or the title thereto otherwise vested in private owners, and to the further condition that the permittee or lessee will, in conducting his explorations and mining operations, use all reasonable precautions to prevent waste of oil or gas developed in the land, or the entrance of water through wells drilled by him to the oil sands or oil-bearing strata, to the destruction or injury of the oil deposits. Violations of the provisions of this section shall constitute grounds for the forfeiture of the permit, or lease, to be enforced through appropriate proceedings in courts of competent jurisdiction. [41 Stat. L. 443.]

SEC. 17. [Unappropriated deposits of oil and gas—leasing.] That all unappropriated deposits of oil or gas situated within the known geologic structure of a producing oil or gas field and the unentered lands containing the same, not subject to preferential lease, may be leased by the Secretary of the Interior to the highest responsible bidder by competitive bidding under general regulations to qualified applicants in areas not exceeding six hundred and forty acres and in tracts which shall not exceed in length two and one-half times their width, such leases to be conditioned upon the payment by the lessee of such bonus as may be accepted and of such royalty as may be fixed in the lease, which shall not be less than $12\frac{1}{2}$ per centum in amount or value of the production and the payment in advance of a rental of not less than \$1 per acre per annum thereafter during the continuance of the lease, the rental paid for any one year to be credited against the royalties as they accrue for that year. Leases shall be for a period of twenty years, with the preferential right in the lessee to renew the same for successive periods of ten years upon such reasonable terms and conditions as may be prescribed by the Secretary of the Interior, unless otherwise provided by law at the time of the expiration of such periods. Whenever the average daily production of any oil well shall not exceed ten barrels per day, the Secretary of the Interior is authorized to reduce the royalty on future production when in his judgment the wells can not be successfully operated upon the royalty fixed in the lease. The provisions of this paragraph shall apply to all oil and gas leases made under this Act. [41 Stat. L. 443.]

SEC. 18. [Rights in oil or gas bearing land under preexisting mining law—relinquishment—lease to claimants—suits affecting lands.] That upon relinquishment to the United States, filed in the General Land Office within six months after the approval of this Act, of all right, title, and interest claimed and possessed prior to July 3, 1910, and continuously since by the claimant or his predecessor in interest under the preexisting placer mining law to any oil or gas bearing land upon which there has been drilled one or more oil or gas wells to discovery embraced in the Executive order of withdrawal issued September 27, 1909, and not within any naval petroleum reserve, and upon payment as royalty to the United States of an amount equal to the value at the time of production of one-eighth of all the oil or gas already produced except oil or gas used for production purposes on the claim, or unavoidably lost, from such land, the claimant, or his successor, if in possession of such land, undisputed by any other claimant prior to July 1, 1919, shall be entitled to a lease thereon from the United States for a period of twenty years, at a royalty of not less than $12\frac{1}{2}$ per centum of all the oil or gas produced except oil or gas used for production purposes on the claim, or unavoidably lost: Provided, That not more than one-half of the area, but in no case to exceed three thousand two hundred acres, within the geologic oil or gas structure of a producing oil or gas field shall be leased to any one claimant under the provision of this section when the area of such geologic oil structure exceeds six hundred and forty acres. Any claimant or his successor, subject to this limitation, shall, however, have the right to select and receive the lease as in this section provided for that portion of his claim or claims equal to, but not in excess of, said one-half of the area of such geologic oil structure, but not more than three thousand two hundred acres.

All such leases shall be made and the amount of royalty to be paid for oil and gas produced, except oil or gas used for production purposes on the claim, or unavoidably lost, after the execution of such lease shall be fixed by the Secre-

An Act To authorize the Commissioner of Navigation to change the names of vessels.

[SEC. 1.] [Changing names of vessels — authority of Commissioner of Navigation.] That the Commissioner of Navigation shall, under the direction of the Secretary of Commerce, be empowered to change the names of vessels of the United States on application of the owner or owners of such vessels when in his judgment there shall be sufficient cause for so doing. [41 Stat. L. 436.]

SEC. 2. [Rules and regulations — evidence — order changing name — publication.] That the Commissioner of Navigation, with the approval of the Secretary of Commerce, shall establish such rules and regulations and procure such evidence as to age, condition, where built, and pecuniary liability of the vessel as he may deem necessary to prevent injury to public or private interests; and when permission is granted by the Commissioner of Navigation, he shall cause the order for the change of name to be published at least in four issues in some daily or weekly paper at the place of documentation, and the cost of procuring evidence and advertising the change of name to be paid by the person or persons desiring such change of name. [41 Stat. L. 437.]

SEC. 3. [Fees for privilege of securing changes of name.] That for the privilege of securing such changes of name the following fees shall be paid by the owners of vessels to collectors of customs, to be deposited in the Treasury by such collectors as navigation fees: For vessels ninety-nine gross tons and under, $10; for vessels one hundred gross tons and up to and including four hundred and ninety-nine gross tons, $25; for vessels five hundred gross tons and up to and including nine hundred and ninety-nine gross tons, $50; for vessels one thousand gross tons and up to and including four thousand nine hundred and ninety-nine gross tons, $75; for vessels five thousand gross tons and over, $100. [41 Stat. L. 437.]

SEC. 4. [Repeal of legislation affecting same subject.] That sections 1 and 2 of the Act of March 2, 1881, entitled "An Act to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to change the name of vessels under certain circumstances," and section 5 of the Act of July 5, 1884, entitled "An Act to constitute a Bureau of Navigation in the Treasury Department," are hereby repealed. [41 Stat. L. 437.]

For Act of March 2, 1881, secs. 1 and 2 here repealed, see 9 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 289.
For Act of July 5, 1884, sec. 5, here repealed, see 9 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 247.

SEC. 5. [Act when in effect.] That this Act shall take effect thirty days after its passage. [41 Stat. L. 437.]

An Act Authorizing suits against the United States in admiralty, suits for salvage services, and providing for the release of merchant vessels belonging to the United States from arrest and attachment in foreign jurisdictions, and for other purposes.

[Act of March 9, 1920, ch. 95, 41 Stat. L. 525.]

[Sec. 1.] [Vessels or cargo belonging to United States — arrest or seizure by judicial process — Panama Railroad Company.] That no vessel owned by the United States or by any corporation in which the United States or its representatives shall own the entire outstanding capital stock or in the possession of the United States or of such corporation or operated by or for the United States or such corporation, and no cargo owned or possessed by the United States or by such corporation, shall hereafter, in view of the provision herein made for a libel in personam, be subject to arrest or seizure by judicial process in the United States or its possessions: Provided, That this Act shall not apply to the Panama Railroad Company. [41 Stat. L. 525.]

SEC. 2. [Libel in personam — venue — service — cross libel — transfer of cause to another district.] That in cases where if such vessel were privately owned or operated, or if such cargo were privately owned and possessed, a proceeding in admiralty could be maintained at the time of the commencement of the action herein provided for, a libel in personam may be brought against the United States or against such corporation, as the case may be, provided that such vessel is employed as a merchant vessel or is a tug boat operated by such corporation.] Such suits shall be brought in the district court of the United States for the district in which the parties so suing, or any of them, reside or have their principal place of business in the United States, or in which the vessel or cargo charged with liability is found. The libelant shall forthwith serve a copy of his libel on the United States attorney for such district and mail a copy thereof by registered mail to the Attorney General of the United States, and shall file a sworn return of such service and mailing. Such service and mailing shall constitute valid service on the United States and such corporation. In case the United States or such corporation shall file a libel in rem or in personam in any district, a cross-libel in personam may be filed or a set-off claimed against the United States or such corporation with the same force and effect as if the libel had been filed by a private party. Upon application of either party the cause may, in the discretion of the court, be transferred to any other district court of the United States. [41 Stat. L. 525.]

SEC. 3. [Hearing and determination — decree — appeals — election to proceed as in rem — bond or stipulation.] That such suits shall proceed and shall be heard and determined according to the principles of law and to the rules of practice obtaining in like cases between private parties. A decree against the United States or such corporation may include costs of suit, and when the decree is for a money judgment, interest at the rate of 4 per centum per annum until satisfied, or at any higher rate which shall be stipulated in any contract upon which such decree shall be based. Interest shall run as ordered by the court. Decrees shall be subject to appeal and revision as now provided in other cases of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction. If the libelant so elects in his libel the suit may proceed in accordance with the principles of libels in rem wherever it shall appear that had the vessel or cargo been privately owned and possessed a libel in rem might have been maintained. Elections so to proceed shall not preclude the libelant in any proper case from seeking relief in personam in the same suit. Neither the United States nor such corporation shall be required to give any bond or admiralty stipulation on any proceeding brought hereunder. Any such bond or stipulation heretofore given in admiralty causes by the United States, the United States Shipping Board, or the United States Shipping Board Emergency Fleet Corporation, shall become void and be surrendered and canceled upon the filing of a suggestion by the Attorney General or other duly authorized law officer that the United States is interested in such cause, and assumes liability to satisfy any decree included within said bond or stipulation, and thereafter any such decree shall be paid as provided in section 8 of this Act. [41 Stat. L. 526.]

SEC. 4. [Causes of action against United States affecting vessels formerly belonging to it — attachment of vessels.] That if a privately owned vessel not in the possession of the United States or of such corporation is arrested or attached upon any cause of action arising or alleged to have arisen from previous possession, ownership, or operation of such vessel by the United States or by such corporation such vessel shall be released without bond or stipulation therefor upon the suggestion by the United States, through its Attorney General or other duly authorized law officer, that it is interested in such cause, desires such release, and assumes the liability for the satisfaction of any decree obtained by the libellant in such cause, and thereafter such cause shall proceed against the United States in accordance with the provisions of this Act. [41 Stat. L. 526.]

SEC. 5. [Date of creation of cause of action as affecting right to sue — limitation of actions.] That suits as herein authorized may be brought only on causes of action arising since April 6, 1917, provided that suits based on causes of action arising prior to the taking effect of this Act shall be brought within one year after this Act goes into effect; and all other suits hereunder shall be brought within two years after the cause of action arises. [41 Stat. L. 526.]

SEC. 6. [Exemptions and limitations of liability.] That the United States or such corporation shall be entitled to the benefits of all exemptions and of all limitations of liability accorded by law to the owners, charterers, operators, or agents of vessels. [41 Stat. L. 527.]

SEC. 7. [Seizures and suits in foreign jurisdiction.] That if any vessel or cargo within the purview of sections 1 and 4 of this Act is arrested, attached, or otherwise seized by process of any court in any country other than the United States, or if any suit is brought therein against the master of any such vessel for any cause of action arising from, or in connection with, the possession, operation, or ownership of any such vessel, or the possession, carriage, or ownership of any such cargo, the Secretary of State of the United States in his discretion, upon the request of the Attorney General of the United States, or any other officer duly authorized by him, may direct the United States consul residing at or nearest the place at which such action may have been commenced to claim such vessel or cargo as immune from such arrest, attachment, or other seizure, and to execute an agreement, undertaking, bond, or stipulation for and on behalf of the United States, or the United States Shipping Board, or such corporation as by said court required, for the release of such vessel or cargo, and for the prosecution of any appeal; or may, in the event of such suits against the master of any such vessel, direct said United States consul to enter the appearance of the United States, or of the United States Shipping Board, or of such corporation, and to pledge the credit thereof to the payment of any judgment and cost that may be entered in such suit. The Attorney General is hereby vested with power and authority to arrange with any bank, surety company, person, firm, or corporation in the United States, its Territories and possessions, or in any foreign country, to execute any such aforesaid bond or stipulation as surety or stipulator thereon, and to pledge the credit of the United States to the indemnification of such surety or stipulator as may be required to secure the execution of such bond or stipulation. The presentation of a copy of the judgment roll in any such suit, certified by the clerk of the court and authenticated by the certificate and seal of the United States consul claiming such vessel or cargo, or his successor, and by the certificate of the Secretary of State as to the official capacity of such consul, shall be sufficient evidence to the proper accounting officers of the United States, or of the United States Shipping Board, or of such corporation, for the allowance and payment of such judgments: Provided, however, That nothing in this section shall be held to prejudice or preclude a claim of the immunity of such vessel or cargo from foreign jurisdiction in a proper case. [41 Stat. L. 527.]

SEC. 8. [Satisfaction of judgment against United States.] That any final judgment rendered in any suit herein authorized, and any final judgment within the purview of sections 4 and 7 of this Act, and any arbitration award or settlement had and agreed to under the provisions of section 9 of this Act, shall, upon the presentation of a duly authenticated copy thereof, be paid by the proper accounting officers of the United States out of any appropriation or insurance fund or other fund especially available therefor; otherwise there is hereby appropriated out of any money in the Treasury of the United States not otherwise appropriated, a sum sufficient to pay any such judgment or award or settlement. [41 Stat. L. 527.]

SEC. 9. [Arbitrating, compromising or settling claims.] That the Secretary of any department of the Government of the United States, or the United States Shipping Board, or the board of trustees of such corporation, having control of the possession or operation of any merchant vessel are, and each hereby is, authorized to arbitrate, compromise, or settle any claim in which suit will lie under the provisions of sections 2, 4, 7, and 10 of this Act. [41 Stat. L. 527.]

SEC. 10. [Salvage services.] That the United States, and the crew of any merchant vessel owned or operated by the United States, or such corporation, shall have the right to collect and sue for salvage services rendered by such vessel and crew, and any moneys recovered therefrom by the United States for its own benefit, and not for the benefit of the crew, shall be covered into the United States Treasury to the credit of the department of the Government of the United States, or of the United States Shipping Board, or of such corporation, having control of the possession or operation of such vessel. [41 Stat. L. 528.]

SEC. 11. [Moneys recovered in suits by United States — disposition.] That all moneys recovered in any suit brought by the United States on any cause of action arising from, or in connection with, the possession, operation, or ownership of any merchant vessel, or the possession, carriage, or ownership of any cargo, shall be covered into the United States Treasury to the credit of the department of the Government of the United States, or of the United States Shipping Board, or of such aforesaid corporation, having control of the vessel or cargo with respect to which such cause of action arises, for reimbursement of the appropriation, or insurance fund, or other funds, from which the loss, damage, or compensation for which said judgment was recovered has been or will be paid. [41 Stat. L. 528.]

SEC. 12. [Reports to Congress of judgments rendered and settlements of claims arising under this Act.] That the Attorney General shall report to the Congress at each session thereof the suits under this Act in which final judgment shall have been rendered for or against the United States and such aforesaid corporation, and the Secretary of any department of the Government of the United States, and the United States Shipping Board, and the board of trustees of any such aforesaid corporation, shall likewise report the arbitration awards or settlements of claims which shall have been agreed to since the previous session, and in which the time to appeal shall have expired or have been waived. [41 Stat. L. 528.]

SEC. 13. [Repeal of inconsistent Acts.] That the provisions of all other Acts inconsistent herewith are hereby repealed. [41 Stat. L. 528.]

[Act of March 30, 1920, ch. 111, 41 Stat. L. 537.]

[SEC. 1.] [Actions in Admiralty for death on high seas — parties — beneficiaries.] That whenever the death of a person shall be caused by wrongful act, neglect, or default occurring on the high seas beyond a marine league from the shore of any State, or the District of Columbia, or the Territories or dependencies of the United States, the personal representative of the decedent may maintain a suit for damages in the district courts of the United States, in admiralty, for the exclusive benefit of the decedent's wife, husband, parent, child, or dependent relative against the vessel, person, or corporation which would have been liable if death had not ensued. [41 Stat. L. 537.]

SEC. 2. [Measure of compensation — apportionment.] That the recovery in such suit shall be a fair and just compensation for the pecuniary loss sustained by the persons for whose benefit the suit is brought and shall be apportioned among them by the court in proportion to the loss they may severally have suffered by reason of the death of the person by whose representative the suit is brought. [41 Stat. L. 537.]

SEC. 3. [Limitation of actions.] That such suit shall be begun within two years from the date of such wrongful act, neglect, or default, unless during that period there has not been reasonable opportunity for securing jurisdiction of the vessel, person, or corporation sought to be charged; but after the expiration of such period of two years the right of action hereby given shall not be deemed to have lapsed until ninety days after a reasonable opportunity to secure jurisdiction has offered. [41 Stat. L. 537.]

SEC. 4. [Actions in Admiralty brought under law of foreign state.] That whenever a right of action is granted by the law of any foreign State on account of death by wrongful act, neglect, or default occurring upon the high seas, such right may be maintained in an appropriate action in admiralty in the courts of the United States without abatement in respect to the amount for which recovery is authorized, any statute of the United States to the contrary notwithstanding. [41 Stat. L. 537.]

SEC. 5. [Death from wrongful act during pendency of action — substitution of parties.] That if a person die as the result of such wrongful act, neglect, or default as is mentioned in section 1 during the pendency in a court of admiralty of the United States of a suit to recover damages for personal injuries in respect of such act, neglect, or default, the personal representative of the decedent may be substituted as a party and the suit may proceed as a suit under this Act for the recovery of the compensation provided in section 2. [41 Stat. L. 537.]

SEC. 6. [Contributory negligence as bar to recovery.] That in suits under this Act the fact that the decedent has been guilty of contributory negligence shall not bar recovery, but the court shall take into consideration the degree of negligence attributable to the decedent and reduce the recovery accordingly. SEC. 7. [State statutes as affected by this Act — certain waters expressly excepted from application of Act.] That the provisions of any State statute giving or regulating rights of action or remedies for death shall not be affected by this Act. Such commissioners shall be appointed as soon as practicable after the enactment of this Act and shall continue in office two for a term of one year, and the remaining five for terms of two, three, four, five, and six years, respectively, from the date of their appointment, the term of each to be designated by the President, but their successors shall be appointed for terms of six years, except that any person chosen to fill a vacancy shall be appointed only for the unexpired term of the commissioner whom he succeeds.

"The commissioners shall be appointed with due regard to their fitness for the efficient discharge of the duties imposed on them by this Act, and two shall be appointed from the States touching the Pacific Ocean, two from the States touching the Atlantic Ocean, one from the States touching the Gulf of Mexico, one from the States touching the Great Lakes and one from the interior, but not more than one shall be appointed from the same State. Not more than four of the commissioners shall be appointed from the same political party. A vacancy in the board shall be filled in the same manner as the original appointments. No commissioner shall take any part in the consideration or decision of any claim or particular controversy in which he has a pecuniary interest.

"Each commissioner shall devote his time to the duties of his office, and shall not be in the employ of or hold any official relation to any common carrier or other person subject to this Act, nor while holding such office acquire any stock or bonds thereof or become pecuniarily interested in any such carrier.

"The duties of the board may be so divided that under its supervision the directorship of various activities may be assigned to one or more commissioners. Any commissioner may be removed by the President for inefficiency, neglect of duty, or malfeasance in office. A vacancy in the board shall not impair the right of the remaining members of the board to exercise all its powers. The board shall have an official seal, which shall be judicially noticed.

"The board may adopt rules and regulations in regard to its procedure and the conduct of its business. The board may employ within the limits of appropriations made therefor by Congress such attorneys as it finds necessary for proper legal service to the board in the conduct of its work, or for proper representation of the public interest in investigations made by it or proceedings pending before it whether at the board's own instance or upon complaint, or to appear for or represent the board in any case in court or other tribunal. The board shall have such other rights and perform such other duties not inconsistent with the Merchant Marine Act, 1920, as are conferred by existing law upon the board in existence at the time this section as amended takes effect.

"The commissioners in office at the time this section as amended takes effect shall hold office until all the commissioners provided for in this section as amended are appointed and qualify." [41 Stat. L. 989.]

Section 3 of the Shipping Act of 1916 as originally enacted will be found in 1918 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. 786.

(b) [United States Shipping Board—salaries—sec. 4 of "Shipping Act, 1916," amended.] The first sentence of section 4 of the "Shipping Act, 1916," is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 4. That each member of the board shall receive a salary of $12,000 per annum." [41 Stat. L. 990.]

SEC. 4. Vessels and other property acquired by President—transfer to Shipping Board.] That all vessels and other property or interests of whatsoever kind, including vessels or property in course of construction or contracted for, acquired by the President through any agencies whatsoever in pursuance of authority conferred by the Acts or parts of Acts repealed by section 2 of this Act, or in pursuance of the joint resolution entitled "Joint resolution authorizing the President to take over for the United States the possession and title of any vessel within its jurisdiction, which at the time of coming therein was owned in whole or in part by any corporation, citizen, or subject of any nation with which the United States may be at war, or was under register of any such nation, and for other purposes," approved May 12, 1917, with the exception of vessels and property the use of which is in the opinion of the President required by any other branch of the Government service of the United States, are hereby transferred to the board: Provided, That all vessels in the military and naval service of the United States, including the vessels assigned to river and harbor work, inland waterways, or vessels for such needs in the course of construction or under contract by the War Department, shall be exempt from the provisions of this Act. [41 Stat. L. 990.]

The Act of May 12, 1917, mentioned in the text, will be found in 1918 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. 803.

SEC. 5. [Sale of government owned vessels to citizens.] That in order to accomplish the declared purposes of this Act, and to carry out the policy declared in section 1 hereof, the board is authorized and directed to sell, as soon as practicable, consistent with good business methods and the objects and purposes to be attained by this Act, at public or private competitive sale after appraisement and due advertisement, to persons who are citizens of the United States except as provided in section 6 of this Act, all of the vessels referred to in section 4 of this Act or otherwise acquired by the board. Such sale shall be made at such prices and on such terms and conditions as the board may prescribe, but the completion of the payment of the purchase price and interest shall not be deferred more than fifteen years after the making of the contract of sale. The board in fixing or accepting the sale price of such vessels shall take into consideration the prevailing domestic and foreign market price of, the available supply of, and the demand for vessels, existing freight rates and prospects of their maintenance, the cost of constructing vessels of similar types under prevailing conditions, as well as the cost of the construction or purchase price of the vessels to be sold, and any other facts or conditions that would influence a prudent, solvent business man in the sale of similar vessels or property which he is not forced to sell. All sales made under the authority of this Act shall be subject to the limitations and restrictions of section 9 of the "Shipping Act, 1916," as amended. [41 Stat. L. 990.]

Section 9 of the "Shipping Act, 1916," will be found in 1918 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. 788.

SEC. 6. [Sale of vessels to aliens.] That the board is authorized and empowered to sell to aliens, at such prices and on such terms and conditions as it may determine, not inconsistent with the provisions of section 5 (except that completion of the payment of the purchase price and interest shall not be deferred more than ten years after the making of the contract of sale), such vessels as it shall, after careful investigation, deem unnecessary to the promotion and maintenance of an efficient American merchant marine; but no such sale shall be made unless the board, after diligent effort, has been unable to sell, in accordance with the terms and conditions of section 5, such vessels to persons citizens of the United States, and has, upon an affirmative vote of not less than five of its members, spread upon the minutes of the board, determined to make such sale; and it shall make as a part of its records a full statement of its reasons for making such sale. Deferred payments of purchase price of vessels under this section shall bear interest at the rate of not less than 5½ per centum per annum, payable semiannually. [41 Stat. L. 991.]

SEC. 7. [Steamship lines — establishment and operation — carrying mails.] That the board is authorized and directed to investigate and determine as promptly as possible after the enactment of this Act and from time to time thereafter what steamship lines should be established and put in operation from ports in the United States or any Territory, District, or possession thereof to such world and domestic markets as in its judgment are desirable for the promotion, development, expansion, and maintenance of the foreign and coastwise trade of the United States and an adequate postal service, and to determine the type, size, speed, and other requirements of the vessels to be employed upon such lines and the frequency and regularity of their sailings, with a view to furnishing adequate, regular, certain, and permanent service. The board is authorized to sell, and if a satisfactory sale can not be made, to charter such of the vessels referred to in section 4 of this Act or otherwise acquired by the board, as will meet these requirements to responsible persons who are citizens of the United States who agree to establish and maintain such lines upon such terms of payment and other conditions as the board may deem just and necessary to secure and maintain the service desired; and if any such steamship line is deemed desirable and necessary, and if no such citizen can be secured to supply such service by the purchase or charter of vessels on terms satisfactory to the board, the board shall operate vessels on such line until the business is developed so that such vessels may be sold on satisfactory terms and the service maintained, or unless it shall appear within a reasonable time that such line can not be made self-sustaining. The Postmaster General is authorized, notwithstanding the Act entitled "An Act to provide for ocean mail service between the United States and foreign ports, and to promote commerce," approved March 3, 1891, to contract for the carrying of the mails over such lines at such price as may be agreed upon by the board and the Postmaster General: Provided, That preference in the sale or assignment of vessels for operation on such steamship lines shall be given to persons who are citizens of the United States who have the support, financial and otherwise, of the domestic communities primarily interested in such lines if the board is satisfied of the ability of such persons to maintain the service desired and proposed to be maintained, or to persons who are citizens of the United States who may then be maintaining a service from the port of the United States to or in the general direction of the world market port to which the board has determined that such service should be established: Provided further, That where steamship lines and regular service have been established and are being maintained by ships of the board at the time of the enactment of this Act, such lines and service shall be maintained by the board until, in the opinion of the board, the maintenance thereof is unbusinesslike and against the public interests: And provided further, That whenever the board shall determine, as provided in this Act, that trade conditions warrant the establishment of a service or additional service under Government administration where a service is already being given by persons, citizens of the United States, the rates and charges for such Government service shall not be less than the cost thereof, including a proper interest and depreciation charge on the value of Government vessels and equipment employed therein. [41 Stat. L. 991.]

For Act of March 3, 1891, mentioned in the text, see 8 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 218.

SEC. 8. [Duty of Shipping Board with respect to developing ports and transportation facilities — investigations — rail rates, etc.] That it shall be the duty of the board, in cooperation with the Secretary of War, with the object of promoting, encouraging, and developing ports and transportation facilities in connection with water commerce over which it has jurisdiction, to investigate territorial regions and zones tributary to such ports, taking into consideration the economies of transportation by rail, water and highway and the natural direction of the flow of commerce; to investigate the causes of the congestion of commerce at ports and the remedies applicable thereto; to investigate the subject of water terminals, including the necessary docks, warehouses, apparatus, equipment, and appliances in connection therewith, with a view to devising and suggesting the types most appropriate for different locations and for the most expeditious and economical transfer or interchange of passengers or property between carriers by water and carriers by rail; to advise with communities regarding the appropriate location and plan of construction of wharves, piers, and water terminals; to investigate the practicability and advantages of harbor, river, and port improvements in connection with foreign and coastwise trade; and to investigate any other matter that may tend to promote and encourage the use by vessels of ports adequate to care for the freight which would naturally pass through such ports: Provided, That if after such investigation the board shall be of the opinion that rates, charges, rules, or regulations of common carriers by rail subject to the jurisdiction of the Interstate Commerce Commission are detrimental to the declared object of this section, or that new rates, charges, rules, or regulations, new or additional port terminal facilities, or affirmative action on the part of such common carriers by rail is necessary to promote the objects of this section, the board may submit its findings to the Interstate Commerce Commission for such action as such commission may consider proper under existing law. [41 Stat. L. 992.]

SEC. 9. [Vessels purchased on credit — duty of purchasers to insure.] That if the terms and conditions of any sale of a vessel made under the provisions of this Act include deferred payments of the purchase price, the board shall require, as part of such terms and conditions, that the purchaser of the vessel shall keep the same insured (a) against loss or damage by fire, and against marine risks and disasters, and war and other risks if the board so specifies, with such insurance companies, associations or underwriters, and under such forms of policies, and to such an amount, as the board may prescribe or approve; and (b) by protection and indemnity insurance with such insurance companies, associations, or underwriters and under such forms of policies, and to such an amount as the board may prescribe or approve. The insurance required to be carried under this section shall be made payable to the board and/or to the parties as interest may appear. The board is authorized to enter into any agreement that it deems wise in respect to the payment and/or the guarantee of premiums of insurance. [41 Stat. L. 992.]

SEC. 10. [Insurance fund — creation by Shipping Board.] That the board may create out of net revenue from operations and sales, and maintain and administer, a separate insurance fund, which it may use to insure in whole or in part, against all hazards commonly covered by insurance policies in such cases, any interest of the United States (1) in any vessel, either constructed or in process of construction, and (2) in any plants or materials heretofore or hereafter acquired by the board or hereby transferred to the board. [41 Stat. L. 992.]

SEC. 11. [Construction loan fund—creation and use.] That during a period of five years from the enactment of this Act the board may annually set aside out of the revenues from sales and operations a sum not exceeding $25,000,000, to be known as its construction loan fund, to be used in aid of the construction of vessels of the best and most efficient type for the establishment and maintenance of service on steamship lines deemed desirable and necessary by the board, and such vessels shall be equipped with the most modern, the most efficient, and the most economical machinery and commercial appliances. The board shall use such fund to the extent required upon such terms as the board may prescribe to aid persons, citizens of the United States, in the construction by them in private shipyards in the United States of the foregoing class of vessels. No aid shall be for a greater sum than two-thirds of the cost of the vessel or vessels to be constructed, and the board shall require such security, including a first lien upon the entire interest in the vessel or vessels so constructed as it shall deem necessary to insure the repayment of such sum with interest thereon and the maintenance of the service for which such vessel or vessels are built. [41 Stat. L. 993.]

SEC. 12. [Reconditioning and repair of unsold vessels—operation or lease by Shipping Board—Emergency Fleet Corporation—continuance in existence.] That all vessels may be reconditioned and kept in suitable repair and until sold shall be managed and operated by the board or chartered or leased by it on such terms and conditions as the board shall deem wise for the promotion and maintenance of an efficient merchant marine, pursuant to the policy and purposes declared in sections 1 and 5 of this Act; and the United States Shipping Board Emergency Fleet Corporation shall continue in existence and have authority to operate vessels, unless otherwise directed by law, until all vessels are sold in accordance with the provisions of this Act, the provision in section 11 of the "Shipping Act, 1916," to the contrary notwithstanding. [41 Stat. L. 993.]

For section 11, mentioned in the text, see 1918 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. 790.

SEC. 13. [Property other than vessels in hands of Shipping Board—sale.] That the board is further authorized to sell all property other than vessels transferred to it under section 4 upon such terms and conditions as the board may determine and prescribe. [41 Stat. L. 993.]

SEC. 14. [Net proceeds derived by Shipping Board—disposition.] That the net proceeds derived by the board prior to July 1, 1921, from any activities authorized by this Act, or by the "Shipping Act, 1916," or by the Acts specified in section 2 of this Act, except such an amount as the board shall deem necessary to withhold as operating capital, for the purposes of section 12 hereof, and for the insurance fund authorized in section 10 hereof, and for the construction loan fund authorized in section 11 hereof, shall be covered into the Treasury of the United States to the credit of the board and may be expended by it, within the limits of the amounts heretofore or hereafter authorized, for the construction.

requisitioning, or purchasing of vessels. After July 1, 1921, such net proceeds, less such an amount as may be authorized annually by Congress to be withheld as operating capital, and less such sums as may be needed for such insurance and construction loan funds, shall be covered into the Treasury of the United States as miscellaneous receipts. The board shall, as rapidly as it deems advisable, withdraw investment of Government funds made during the emergency under the authority conferred by the Acts or parts of Acts repealed by section 2 of this Act and cover the net proceeds thereof into the Treasury of the United States as miscellaneous receipts. [41 Stat. L. 993.]

SEC. 15. [Vessels furnished War Department — payment for charter hire.] That the board shall not require payment from the War Department for the charter hire of vessels owned by the United States Government furnished by the board from July 1, 1918, to June 30, 1919, inclusive, for the use of such department. [41 Stat. L. 993.]

The possession and control of such other docks, piers, warehouses, wharves and terminal equipment and facilities or parts thereof, including all leasehold easements, rights of way, riparian rights and other rights, estates or interests therein or appurtenant thereto which were acquired by the War Department or the Navy Department for military or naval purposes during the war emergency may be transferred by the President to the board whenever the President deems such transfer to be for the best interests of the United States.

The President may at any time he deems it necessary, by order setting out the need therefor and fixing the period of such need, permit or transfer the possession and control of any part of the property taken over by or transferred to the board under this section to the War Department or the Navy Department for their needs, and when in the opinion of the President such need therefor ceases the possession and control of such property shall revert to the board. None of such property shall be sold except as may be hereafter provided by law. [41 Stat. L. 994.]

amended.] That section 9 of the "Shipping Act, 1916," is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 9. That any vessel purchased, chartered, or leased from the board, by persons who are citizens of the United States, may be registered or enrolled and licensed, or both registered and enrolled and licensed, as a vessel of the United States and entitled to the benefits and privileges appertaining thereto: Provided, That foreign-built vessels admitted to American registry or enrollment and license under this Act, and vessels owned by any corporation in which the United States is a stockholder, and vessels sold, leased, or chartered by the board to any person a citizen of the United States, as provided in this Act, may engage in the coastwise trade of the United States while owned, leased, or chartered by such a person.

"Every vessel purchased, chartered, or leased from the board shall, unless otherwise authorized by the board, be operated only under such registry or enrollment and license. Such vessels while employed solely as merchant vessels shall be subject to all laws, regulations, and liabilities governing merchant vessels, whether the United States be interested therein as owner, in whole or in part, or hold any mortgage, lien, or other interest therein.

(1) The board is authorized and directed in aid of the accomplishment of the purposes of this Act

(a) To make all necessary rules and regulations to carry out the provisions of this Act;

(b) To make rules and regulations affecting shipping in the foreign trade not in conflict with law in order to adjust or meet general or special conditions unfavorable to shipping in the foreign trade, whether in any particular trade or upon any particular route or in commerce generally and which arise out of or result from foreign laws, rules, or regulations or from competitive methods or practices employed by owners, operators, agents, or masters of vessels of a foreign country; and

(c) To request the head of any department, board, bureau, or agency of the Government to suspend, modify, or annul rules or regulations which have been established by such department, board, bureau, or agency, or to make new rules or regulations affecting shipping in the foreign trade other than such rules or regulations relating to the Public Health Service, the Consular Service, and the Steamboat Inspection Service.

(2) No rule or regulation shall hereafter be established by any department, board, bureau, or agency of the Government which affect shipping in the foreign trade, except rules or regulations affecting the Public Health Service, the Consular Service, and the Steamboat Inspection Service, until such rule or regulation has been submitted to the board for its approval and final action has been taken thereon by the board or the President.

(3) Whenever the head of any department, board, bureau, or agency of the Government refuses to suspend, modify, or annul any rule or regulation, or make a new rule or regulation upon request of the board, as provided in subdivision (c) of paragraph (1) of this section, or objects to the decision of the board in respect to the approval of any rule or regulation, as provided in paragraph (2) of this section, either the board or the head of the department, board, bureau, or agency which has established or is attempting to establish the rule or regulation in question may submit the facts to the President, who is hereby authorized to establish or suspend, modify, or annul such rule or regulation.

SEC. 20. (1) [Common carriers by water — combinations and discriminations — “deferred rebates” — “fighting ships” — penalties — sec. 14 of “Shipping Act, 1916,” amended.] That section 14 of the Shipping Act, 1916, as amended, is amended to read as follows:

“SEC. 14. That no common carrier by water shall, directly or indirectly, in respect to the transportation by water of passengers or property between a port of a State, Territory, District, or possession of the United States and any other such port or a port of a foreign country,—

“First. Pay, or allow, or enter into any combination, agreement, or understanding, express or implied, to pay or allow, a deferred rebate to any shipper. The term ‘deferred rebate’ in this Act means a return of any portion of the freight money by a carrier to any shipper as a consideration for the giving of all or any portion of his shipments to the same or any other carrier, or for any other purpose, the payment of which is deferred beyond the completion of the service for which it is paid, and is made only if, during both the period for which computed and the period of deferment, the shipper has complied with the terms of the rebate agreement or arrangement.

“Second. Use a fighting ship either separately or in conjunction with any other carrier, through agreement or otherwise. The term ‘fighting ship’ in this Act means a vessel used in a particular trade by a carrier or group of carriers for the purpose of excluding, preventing or reducing competition by driving another carrier out of said trade.

“Third. Retaliate against any shipper by refusing, or threatening to refuse, space accommodations when such are available, or resort to other discriminating or unfair methods, because such shipper has patronized any other carrier or has filed a complaint charging unfair treatment, or for any other reason.

“Fourth. Make any unfair or unjustly discriminatory contract with any shipper based on the volume of freight offered, or unfairly treat or unjustly discriminate against any shipper in the matter of (a) cargo space accommodations or other facilities, due regard being had for the proper loading of the vessel and the available tonnage; (b) the loading and landing of freight in proper condition; or (c) the adjustment and settlement of claims.

"Any carrier who violates any provision of this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by a fine of not more than $25,000 for each offense." [41 Stat. L. 996.]

For section 14 of "Shipping Act, 1916," here amended, see 1918 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. 792.

(2) [Enforcement of penalties against common carriers by water — authority of Shipping Board — sec. 14-a added to "Shipping Act, 1916."] The Shipping Act, 1916, as amended, is amended by inserting after section 14 a new section to read as follows:

"SEC. 14a. The board upon its own initiative may, or upon complaint shall, after due notice to all parties in interest and hearing, determine whether any person, not a citizen of the United States and engaged in transportation by water of passengers or property —

"(1) Has violated any provision of section 14, or

"(2) Is a party to any combination, agreement, or understanding, express or implied, that involves in respect to transportation of passengers or property between foreign ports, deferred rebates or any other unfair practice designated in section 14, and that excludes from admission upon equal terms with all other parties thereto, a common carrier by water which is a citizen of the United States and which has applied for such admission.

"If the board determines that any such person has violated any such provision or is a party to any such combination, agreement, or understanding, the board shall thereupon certify such fact to the Secretary of Commerce. The Secretary shall thereafter refuse such person the right of entry for any ship owned or operated by him or by any carrier directly or indirectly controlled by him, into any port of the United States, or any Territory, District, or possession thereof, until the board certifies that the violation has ceased or such combination, agreement, or understanding has been terminated." [41 Stat. L. 996.]

SEC. 21. [Coastwise laws of United States — extension to island, etc., territories — steamship service established — registry — Philippine Islands.] That from and after February 1, 1922, the coastwise laws of the United States shall extend to the island Territories and possessions of the United States not now covered thereby, and the board is directed prior to the expiration of such year to have established adequate steamship service at reasonable rates to accommodate the commerce and the passenger travel of said islands and to maintain and operate such service until it can be taken over and operated and maintained upon satisfactory terms by private capital and enterprise: Provided, That if adequate shipping service is not established by February 1, 1922, the President shall extend the period herein allowed for the establishment of such service in the case of any island Territory or possession for such time as may be necessary for the establishment of adequate shipping facilities therefor: Provided further, That until Congress shall have authorized the registry as vessels of the United States of vessels owned in the Philippine Islands, the Government of the Philippine Islands is hereby authorized to adopt, from time to time, and enforce regulations governing the transportation of merchandise and passengers between ports or places in the Philippine Archipelago: And provided further, That the foregoing provisions of this section shall not take effect with reference to the Philippine Islands until the President of the United States after a full investigation of the local needs and conditions shall, by proclamation, declare that an adequate shipping service has been established as herein provided and fix a date for the going into effect of the same. [41 Stat. L. 997.]

SEC. 22. [Coastwise trade — foreign built ships — American registry — Act of Oct. 6, 1917, repealed — permits for carrying passengers — Hawaii.] That the Act entitled "An Act giving the United States Shipping Board power to suspend present provisions of law and permit vessels of foreign registry and foreign-built vessels admitted to American registry under the Act of August 18, 1914, to engage in the coastwise trade during the present war and for a period of one hundred and twenty days thereafter, except the coastwise trade with Alaska," approved October 6, 1917, is hereby repealed: Provided, That all foreign-built vessels admitted to American registry, owned on February 1, 1920, by persons citizens of the United States, and all foreign-built vessels owned by the United States at the time of the enactment of this Act, when sold and owned by persons citizens of the United States, may engage in the coastwise trade so long as they continue in such ownership, subject to the rules and regulations of such trade: Provided, That the board is authorized to issue permits for the carrying of passengers in foreign ships if it deems it necessary so to do, operating between the Territory of Hawaii and the Pacific Coast up to February 1, 1922. For Act of Oct. 6, 1917, see 1918 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. 808.

SEC. 23. [Vessel owners — income taxes — deductions and exemptions.] That the owner of a vessel documented under the laws of the United States and operated in foreign trade shall, for each of the ten taxable years while so operated, beginning with the first taxable year ending after the enactment of this Act, be allowed as a deduction for the purpose of ascertaining his net income subject to the war-profits and excess-profits taxes imposed by Title III of the Revenue Act of 1918 an amount equivalent to the net earnings of such vessel during such taxable year, determined in accordance with rules and regulations to be made by the board: Provided, That such owner shall not be entitled to such deduction unless during such taxable year he invested, or set aside under rules and regulations to be made by the board in a trust fund for investment, in the building in shipyards in the United States of new vessels of a type and kind approved by the board, an amount, to be determined by the Secretary of the Treasury and certified by him to the board, equivalent to the war-profits and excess-profits taxes that would have been payable by such owner on account of the net earnings of such vessels but for the deduction allowed under the provisions of this section: Provided further, That at least two-thirds of the cost of any vessel constructed under this paragraph shall be paid for out of the ordinary funds or capital of the person having such vessel constructed.

That during the period of ten years from the enactment of this Act any person a citizen of the United States who may sell a vessel documented under the laws of the United States and built prior to January 1, 1914, shall be exempt from all income taxes that would be payable upon any of the proceeds of such sale, under Title I, Title II, and Title III of the Revenue Act of 1918 if the entire proceeds thereof shall be invested in the building of new ships in American shipyards, such ships to be documented under the laws of the United States and to be of a type approved by the board. [41 Stat. L. 997.]

For Revenue Act of 1918, mentioned in the text, see 1919 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. 82.

SEC. 24. [United States mails — carrying on American-built vessels.] That all mails of the United States shipped or carried on vessels shall, if practicable, be shipped or carried on American-built vessels documented under the laws of the United States. No contract hereafter made with the Postmaster General for carrying mails on vessels so built and documented shall be assigned or sublet, and no mails covered by such contract shall be carried on any vessel not so built and documented. No money shall be paid out of the Treasury of the United States on or in relation to any such contract for carrying mails on vessels so built and documented when such contract has been assigned or sublet or when mails covered by such contract are in violation of the terms thereof carried on any vessel not so built and documented. The board and the Postmaster General, in aid of the development of a merchant marine adequate to provide for the maintenance and expansion of the foreign or coastwise trade of the United States and of a satisfactory postal service in connection therewith, shall from time to time determine the just and reasonable rate of compensation to be paid for such service, and the Postmaster General is hereby authorized to enter into contracts within the limits of appropriations made therefor by Congress to pay for the carrying of such mails in such vessels at such rate. Nothing herein shall be affected by the Act entitled "An Act to provide for ocean mail service between the United States and foreign ports, and to promote commerce," approved March 3, 1891. [41 Stat. For Act of March 3, 1891, mentioned in the text, see 8 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 218.

SEC. 25. [Classification of vessels owned by United States — American Bureau of Shipping.] That for the classification of vessels owned by the United States, and for such other purposes in connection therewith as are the proper functions of a classification bureau, all departments, boards, bureaus, and commissions of the Government are hereby directed to recognize the American Bureau of Shipping as their agency so long as the American Bureau of Shipping continues to be maintained as an organization which has no capital stock and pays no dividends: Provided, That the Secretary of Commerce and the chairman of the board shall each appoint one representative who shall represent the Government upon the executive committee of the American Bureau of Shipping, and the bureau shall agree that these representatives shall be accepted by them as active members of such committee. Such representatives of the Government shall serve without any compensation, except necessary traveling expenses: Provided further, That the official list of merchant vessels published by the Government shall hereafter contain a notation clearly indicating all vessels classed by the American Bureau of Shipping. [41 Stat. L. 998.]

SEC. 26. [Cargo vessels — carrying persons other than crew.] That cargo vessels documented under the laws of the United States may carry not to exceed sixteen persons in addition to the crew between any ports or places in the United States or its Districts, Territories, or possessions, or between any such port or place and any foreign port, or from any foreign port to another foreign port, and such vessels shall not be held to be "passenger vessels" or "vessels carrying passengers" within the meaning of the inspection laws and the rules and regulations thereunder: Provided, That nothing herein shall be taken to exempt such vessels from the laws, rules, and regulations respecting life-saving equipment: Provided further, That when any such vessel carries persons other than the crew as herein provided for, the owner, agent, or master of the vessel shall first notify such persons of the presence on board of any dangerous articles, as defined by law, or of any other condition or circumstances which would constitute a risk of safety for passenger or crew.

The privilege bestowed by this section on vessels of the United States shall be extended insofar as the foreign trade is concerned to the cargo vessels of any nation which allows the like privilege to cargo vessels of the United States in trades not restricted to vessels under its own flag.

Failure on the part of the owner, agent, or master of the vessel to give such notice shall subject the vessel to a penalty of $500, which may be mitigated or remitted by the Secretary of Commerce upon a proper representation of the facts. [41 Stat. L. 998.]

Sec. 27. [Merchandise transported between points in United States including territories — vessels employed.] That no merchandise shall be transported by water, or by land and water, on penalty of forfeiture thereof, between points in the United States, including Districts, Territories, and possessions thereof embraced within the coastwise laws, either directly or via a foreign port, or for any part of the transportation, in any other vessel than a vessel built in and documented under the laws of the United States and owned by persons who are citizens of the United States, or vessels to which the privilege of engaging in the coastwise trade is extended by sections 18 or 22 of this Act: Provided, That this section shall not apply to merchandise transported between points within the continental United States, excluding Alaska, over through routes heretofore or hereafter recognized by the Interstate Commerce Commission for which routes rate tariffs have been or shall hereafter be filed with said commission when such routes are in part over Canadian rail lines and their own or other connecting water facilities: Provided further, That this section shall not become effective upon the Yukon river until the Alaska Railroad shall be completed and the Shipping Board shall find that proper facilities will be furnished for transportation by persons citizens of the United States for properly handling the traffic. [41 Stat. L. 999.]

Sec. 28. [Discriminations by common carriers in rates, etc.] That no common carrier shall charge, collect, or receive, for transportation subject to the Interstate Commerce Act of persons or property, under any joint rate, fare, or charge, or under any export, import, or other proportional rate, fare, or charge, which is based in whole or in part on the fact that the persons or property affected thereby is to be transported to, or has been transported from, any port in a possession or dependency of the United States, or in a foreign country, by a carrier by water in foreign commerce, any lower rate, fare, or charge than that charged, collected, or received by it for the transportation of persons, or of a like kind of property, for the same distance, in the same direction, and over the same route, in connection with commerce wholly within the United States, unless the vessel so transporting such persons or property is, or unless it was at the time of such transportation by water, documented under the laws of the United States. Whenever the board is of the opinion, however, that adequate shipping facilities to or from any port in a possession or dependency of the United States or a foreign country are not afforded by vessels so documented, it shall certify this fact to the Interstate Commerce Commission, and the commission may, by order, suspend the operation of the provisions of this section with respect to the rates, fares, and charges for the transportation by rail of persons and property transported from, or to be transported, to such ports, for such length of time and under such terms and conditions as it may prescribe in such order, or in any order supplemental thereto. Such suspension of operation of the provisions of this section may be terminated by order of the commission whenever the board is of the opinion that adequate shipping facilities by such vessels to such ports are afforded and shall so certify to the commission. [41 Stat. L. 999.]

RECORDING OF SALES, CONVEYANCES, AND MORTGAGES OF VESSELS OF THE UNITED STATES.

Subsection C. (a) No sale, conveyance, or mortgage which, at the time such sale, conveyance, or mortgage is made, includes a vessel of the United States, or any portion thereof, as the whole or any part of the property sold, conveyed, or mortgaged shall be valid, in respect to such vessel, against any person other than the grantor or mortgagor, his heir or devisee, and a person having actual notice thereof, until such bill of sale, conveyance, or mortgage is recorded in the office of the collector of customs of the port of documentation of such vessel, as provided in subdivision (b) of this subsection.

(b) Such collector of customs shall record bills of sale, conveyances, and mortgages, delivered to him, in the order of their reception, in books to be kept for that purpose and indexed to show —

- (1) The name of the vessel;
- (2) The names of the parties to the sale, conveyance, or mortgage;
- (3) The time and date of reception of the instrument;
- (4) The interest in the vessel so sold, conveyed, or mortgaged; and
- (5) The amount and date of maturity of the mortgage.

Subsection D. (a) A valid mortgage which, at the time it is made includes the whole of any vessel of the United States of 200 gross tons and upwards, shall in addition have, in respect to such vessel and as of the date of the compliance with all the provisions of this subdivision, the preferred status given by the provisions of subsection M, if —

(1) The mortgage is indorsed upon the vessel's documents in accordance with the provisions of this section;

(2) The mortgage is recorded as provided in subsection C, together with the time and date when the mortgage is so indorsed;

(3) An affidavit is filed with the record of such mortgage to the effect that the mortgage is made in good faith and without any design to hinder, delay, or defraud any existing or future creditor of the mortgagor or any lienor of the mortgaged vessel;

(4) The mortgage does not stipulate that the mortgagee waives the preferred status thereof; and

(5) The mortgagee is a citizen of the United States.

(b) Any mortgage which complies in respect to any vessel with the conditions enumerated in this subsection is hereafter in this section called a "preferred mortgage" as to such vessel.

(c) There shall be indorsed upon the documents of a vessel covered by a preferred mortgage —

(1) The names of the mortgagor and mortgagee;

(2) The time and date the indorsement is made;

(3) The amount and date of maturity of the mortgage; and

(4) Any amount required to be indorsed by the provisions of subdivision (e) or (f) of this subsection.

(d) Such indorsement shall be made (1) by the collector of customs of the port of documentation of the mortgaged vessel, or (2) by the collector of customs of any port in which the vessel is found, if such collector is directed to make the indorsement by the collector of customs of the port of documentation; and no clearance shall be issued to the vessel until such indorsement is made. The collector of customs of the port of documentation shall give such direction by wire or letter at the request of the mortgagee and upon the tender of the cost of communication of such direction. Whenever any new document is issued for the vessel, such indorsement shall be transferred to and indorsed upon the new document by the collector of customs.

(e) A mortgage which includes property other than a vessel shall not be held a preferred mortgage unless the mortgage provides for the separate discharge of such property by the payment of a specified portion of the mortgage indebtedness. If a preferred mortgage so provides for the separate discharge, the amount of the portion of such payment shall be indorsed upon the documents of the vessel.

(f) If a preferred mortgage includes more than one vessel and provides for the separate discharge of each vessel by the payment of a portion of the mortgage indebtedness, the amount of such portion of such payment shall be indorsed upon the documents of the vessel. In case such mortgage does not provide for the separate discharge of a vessel and the vessel is to be sold upon the order of a district court of the United States in a suit in rem in admiralty, the court shall determine the portion of the mortgage indebtedness increased by 20 per centum (1) which, in the opinion of the court, the approximate value of the vessel bears to the approximate value of all the vessels covered by the mortgage, and (2) upon the payment of which the vessel shall be discharged from the mortgage.

Subsection E. The collector of customs upon the recording of a preferred mortgage shall deliver two certified copies thereof to the mortgagor who shall place, and use due diligence to retain, one copy on board the mortgaged vessel and cause such copy and the documents of the vessel to be exhibited by the master to any person having business with the vessel, which may give rise to a maritime lien upon the vessel or to the sale, conveyance, or mortgage thereof. The master of the vessel shall, upon the request of any such person, exhibit to him the documents of the vessel and the copy of any preferred mortgage of the vessel placed on board thereof.

Subsection F. The mortgagor (1) shall, upon request of the mortgagee, disclose in writing to him prior to the execution of any preferred mortgage, the existence of any maritime lien, prior mortgage or other obligation or liability upon the vessel to be mortgaged, that is known to the mortgagor, and (2), without the consent of the mortgagee, shall not incur, after the execution of such mortgage and before the mortgagee has had a reasonable time in which to record the mortgage and have indorsements in respect thereto made upon the documents of the vessel, any contractual obligation creating a lien upon the vessel other than a lien for wages of stevedores when employed directly by the owner, operator, master, ship's husband, or agent of the vessel, for wages of the crew of the vessel, for general average, or for salvage, including contract salvage, in respect to the vessel.

Subsection G. (a) The collector of customs of the port of documentation shall, upon the request of any person, record notice of his claim of a lien upon a vessel covered by a preferred mortgage, together with the nature, date of creation, and amount of the lien, and the name and address of the person. Any person who has caused notice of his claim of lien to be so recorded shall, upon a discharge in whole or in part of the indebtedness, forthwith file with the collector of customs a certificate of such discharge. The collector of customs shall thereupon record the certificate.

(b) The mortgagor, upon a discharge in whole or in part of the mortgage indebtedness, shall forthwith file with the collector of customs for the port of documentation of the vessel, a certificate of such discharge. Such collector of customs shall thereupon record the certificate. In case of a vessel covered by a preferred mortgage, the collector of customs at the port of documentation shall (1) indorse upon the documents of the vessel, or direct the collector of customs at any port in which the vessel is found, to so indorse, the fact of such discharge, and (2) shall deny clearance to the vessel until such indorsement is made.

Subsection H. (a) No bill of sale, conveyance, or mortgage shall be recorded unless it states the interest of the grantor or mortgagor in the vessel, and the interest so sold, conveyed, or mortgaged.

(b) No bill of sale, conveyance, mortgage, notice of claim of lien, or certificate of discharge thereof, shall be recorded unless previously acknowledged before a notary public or other officer authorized by a law of the United States, or of a State, Territory, District, or possession thereof, to take acknowledgment of deeds.

(c) In case of a change in the port of documentation of a vessel of the United States, no bill of sale, conveyance, or mortgage shall be recorded at the new port of documentation unless there is furnished to the collector of customs of such port, together with the copy of the bill of sale, conveyance, or mortgage to be recorded, a certified copy of the record of the vessel at the former port of documentation furnished by the collector of such port. The collector of customs at the new port of documentation is authorized and directed to record such certified copy.

(d) A preferred mortgage may bear such rate of interest as is agreed by the parties thereto.

Subsection I. Each collector of customs shall permit records made under the provisions of this section to be inspected during office hours, under such reasonable regulations as the collector may establish. Upon the request of any person the collector of customs shall furnish him from the records of the collector's office (1) a certificate setting forth the names of the owners of any vessel, the interest held by each owner, and the material facts as to any bill of sale or conveyance of, any mortgage covering, or any lien or other incumbrance upon, a specified vessel, (2) a certified copy of any bill of sale, conveyance, mortgage, notice of claim of lien, or certificate of discharge in respect to such vessel, or (3) a certified copy as required by subdivision (c) of subsection H. The collector of customs shall collect a fee for any bill of sale, conveyance, or mortgage recorded, or any certificate or certified copy furnished, by him, in the amount of 20 cents a folio with a minimum charge of $1.00. All such fees shall be covered into the Treasury of the United States as miscellaneous receipts. [41 Stat. L. 1000.]

PENALTIES.

Subsection J. (a) If the master of the vessel willfully fails to exhibit the documents of the vessel or the copy of any preferred mortgage thereof, as required by subsection E, the board of local inspectors of vessels having jurisdiction of the license of the master, may suspend or cancel such license, subject to the provisions of "An Act to provide for appeals from decision of boards of local inspectors of vessels and for other purposes," approved June 10, 1918.

(b) A mortgagor who, with intent to defraud, violates any provision of subsection F, and if the mortgagor is a corporation or association, the president or other principal executive officer of the corporation or association, shall upon conviction thereof be held guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be fined not more than

$1,000 or imprisoned not more than 2 years, or both. The mortgaged indebtedness shall thereupon become immediately due and payable at the election of the mortgagee.

(c) If any person enters into any contract secured by, or upon the credit of, a vessel of the United States covered by a preferred mortgage, and suffers pecuniary loss by reason of the failure of the collector of customs, or any officer, employee, or agent thereof, properly to perform any duty required of the collector under the provisions of this section, the collector of customs shall be liable to such person for damages in the amount of such loss. If any such person is caused any such loss by reason of the failure of the mortgagor, or master of the mortgaged vessel, or any officer, employee, or agent thereof, to comply with any provision of subsection E or F or to file an affidavit as required by subdivision (a) of subsection D, correct in each particular thereof, the mortgagor shall be liable to such person for damages in the amount of such loss. The district courts of the United States are given jurisdiction (but not to the exclusion of the courts of the several States, Territories, Districts, or possessions) of suits for the recovery of such damages, irrespective of the amount involved in the suit or the citizenship of the parties thereto. Such suit shall be begun by personal service upon the defendant within the limits of the district. Upon judgment for the plaintiff in any such suit, the court shall include in the judgment an additional amount for costs of the action and a reasonable counsel's fee, to be fixed by the court. [41 Stat. L. 1003.]

FORECLOSURE OF PREFERRED MORTGAGES.

Subsection K. A preferred mortgage shall constitute a lien upon the mortgaged vessel in the amount of the outstanding mortgage indebtedness secured by such vessel. Upon the default of any term or condition of the mortgage, such lien may be enforced by the mortgagee by suit in rem in admiralty. Original jurisdiction of all such suits is granted to the district courts of the United States exclusively. In addition to any notice by publication, actual notice of the commencement of any such suit shall be given by the libellant, in such manner as the court shall direct, to (1) the master, other ranking officer, or caretaker of the vessel, and (2) any person who has recorded a notice of claim of an undischarged lien upon the vessel, as provided in subsection G, unless after search by the libellant satisfactory to the court, such mortgagor, master, other ranking officer, caretaker, or claimant is not found within the United States. Failure to give notice to any such person, as required by this subsection, shall not constitute a jurisdictional defect; but the libellant shall be liable to such person for damages in the amount of his interest in the vessel terminated by the suit. Suit in personam for the recovery of such damages may be brought in accordance with the provisions of subdivision (c) of subsection J.

Subsection L. In any suit in rem in admiralty for the enforcement of the preferred mortgage lien, the court may appoint a receiver and, in its discretion, authorize the receiver to operate the mortgaged vessel. The marshal may be authorized and directed by the court to take possession of the mortgaged vessel notwithstanding the fact that the vessel is in the possession or under the control of any person claiming a possessory common-law lien.

Subsection M. (a) When used hereinafter in this section, the term "preferred maritime lien" means (1) a lien arising prior in time to the recording and indorsement of a preferred mortgage in accordance with the provisions of this section; or (2) a lien for damages arising out of tort, for wages of a stevedore when employed directly by the owner, operator, master, ship's husband, or agent of the vessel, for wages of the crew of the vessel, for general average, and for salvage, including contract salvage.

3 (b) Upon the sale of any mortgaged vessel by order of a district court of the United States in any suit in rem in admiralty for the enforcement of a preferred mortgage lien thereon, all preëxisting claims in the vessel, including any possessory common-law lien of which a lienor is deprived under the provisions of subsection L shall be held terminated and shall thereafter attach, in like amount and in accordance with their respective priorities, to the proceeds of the sale; except that the preferred mortgage lien shall have priority over all claims against the vessel, except (1) preferred maritime liens, and (2) expenses and fees allowed and costs taxed, by the court.]

Subsection N. (a) Upon the default of any term or condition of a preferred mortgage upon a vessel, the mortgagee may, in addition to all other remedies granted by this section, bring suit in personam in admiralty in a district court of the United States, against the mortgagor for the amount of the outstanding mortgage indebtedness secured by such vessel or any deficiency in the full payment thereof.

(b) This section shall not be construed, in the case of a mortgage covering, in addition to vessels, realty or personalty other than vessels, or both, to authorize the enforcement by suit in rem in admiralty of the rights of the mortgagee in respect to such realty or personalty other than vessels. [41 Stat. L. 1003.]

TRANSFERS OF MORTGAGED VESSELS AND ASSIGNMENT OF VESSEL MORTGAGES.

Subsection O. (a) The documents of a vessel of the United States covered by a preferred mortgage may not be surrendered (except in the case of the forfeiture of the vessel or its sale by the order of any court of the United States or any foreign country) without the approval of the board. The board shall refuse such approval unless the mortgagee consents to such surrender.

(b) The interest of the mortgagee in a vessel of the United States covered by a mortgage, shall not be terminated by the forfeiture of the vessel for a violation of any law of the United States, unless the mortgagee authorized, consented, or conspired to effect the illegal act, failure, or omission which constituted such violation.

(c) Upon the sale of any vessel of the United States covered by a preferred mortgage, by order of a district court of the United States in any suit in rem in admiralty for the enforcement of a maritime lien other than a preferred maritime lien, the vessel shall be sold free from all preëxisting claims thereon; but the court shall, upon the request of the mortgagee, the libellant, or an intervenor, require the purchaser at such sale to give and the mortgagor to accept a new mortgage of the vessel for the balance of the term of the original mortgage. The conditions of such new mortgage shall be the same, so far as practicable, as those of the original mortgage and shall be subject to the approval of the court. If such new mortgage is given, the mortgagee shall not be paid from the proceeds of the sale and the amount payable as the purchase price shall be held diminished in the amount of the new mortgage indebtedness.

(d) No rights under a mortgage of a vessel of the United States shall be assigned to any person not a citizen of the United States without the approval of the board. Any assignment in violation of any provision of this section shall be void.

(e) No vessel of the United States shall be sold by order of a district court of the United States in any suit in rem in admiralty to any person not a citizen of the United States. [41 Stat. L. 1004.]

MARITIME LIENS FOR NECESSARIES.

Subsection P. Any person furnishing repairs, supplies, towage, use of dry dock or marine railway, or other necessities, to any vessel, whether foreign or domestic, upon the order of the owner of such vessel, or of a person authorized by the owner, shall have a maritime lien on the vessel, which may be enforced by suit in rem, and it shall not be necessary to allege or prove that credit was given to the vessel.

Subsection Q. The following persons shall be presumed to have authority from the owner to procure repairs, supplies, towage, use of dry dock or marine railway, and other necessities for the vessel: The managing owner, ship's husband, master, or any person to whom the management of the vessel at the port of supply is intrusted. No person tortiously or unlawfully in possession or charge of a vessel shall have authority to bind the vessel.

Subsection R. The officers and agents of a vessel specified in subsection Q shall be taken to include such officers and agents when appointed by a charterer, by an owner pro hac vice, or by an agreed purchaser in possession of the vessel; but nothing in this section shall be construed to confer a lien when the furnisher knew, or by exercise of reasonable diligence could have ascertained, that because of the terms of a charter party, agreement for sale of the vessel, or for any other reason, the person ordering the repairs, supplies, or other necessities was without authority to bind the vessel therefor.

Subsection S. Nothing in this section shall be construed to prevent the furnisher of repairs, supplies, towage, use of dry dock or marine railway, or other necessities, or the mortgagee, from waiving his right to a lien, or in the case of a preferred mortgage lien, to the preferred status of such lien, at any time, by agreement or otherwise; and this section shall not be construed to affect the rules of law now existing in regard to (1) the right to proceed against the vessel for advances, (2) laches in the enforcement of liens upon vessels, (3) the right to proceed in personam, (4) the rank of preferred maritime liens among themselves, or (5) priorities between maritime liens and mortgages, other than preferred mortgages, upon vessels of the United States.

Subsection T. This section shall supersede the provisions of all State statutes conferring liens on vessels, in so far as such statutes purport to create rights of action to be enforced by suits in rem in admiralty against vessels for repairs, supplies, towage, use of dry dock or marine railway, and other necessities. [41 Stat. L. 1005.]

MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS.

Subsection U. This section shall not apply (1) to any existing mortgage, or (2) to any mortgage hereafter placed on any vessel now under an existing mortgage, so long as such existing mortgage remains undischarged.

Subsection V. The Secretary of Commerce is authorized and directed to furnish collectors of customs with all necessary books and records, and with certificates of registry and of enrollment and license in such form as provides for the making of all indorsements thereon required by this section.

Subsection W. The Secretary of Commerce is authorized to make such regulations in respect to the recording and indorsing of mortgages covering vessels of the United States, as he deems necessary to the efficient execution of the provisions of this section.

B [Subsection X. Sections 4192 to 4196, inclusive, of the Revised Statutes of the United States, as amended, and the Act entitled "An Act relating to liens on vessels for repairs, supplies, or other necessities," approved June 23, 1910, are repealed. This section, however, so far as not inconsistent with any of the provisions of law so repealed, shall be held a reenactment of such repealed law, and any right or obligation based upon any provision of such law and accruing prior to such repeal, may be prosecuted in the same manner and to the same effect as if this Act had not been passed.] [41 Stat. [Act of June 5, 1920, ch. 241, 41 Stat. L. 977.]

If the President shall not so order within sixty days after the filing of such application or if the claimant shall have filed the notice as above required and shall have made no application to the President, said claimant may, at any time before the expiration of six months after the end of the war institute a suit in equity in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia or in the district court of the United States for the district in which such claimant resides, or, if a corporation, where it has its principal place of business (to which suit the Alien Property Custodian or the Treasurer of the United States, as the case may be, shall be made a party defendant), to establish the interest, right, title, or debt so claimed, and if so established the court shall order the payment, conveyance, transfer, assignment, or delivery to said claimant of the money or other property so held by the Alien Property Custodian or by the Treasurer of the United States or the interest therein to which the court shall determine said claimant is entitled. If suit shall be so instituted, then such money or property shall be retained in the custody of the “(b) In respect of all money or other property conveyed, transferred, assigned, delivered, or paid to the Alien Property Custodian or seized by him hereunder and held by him or by the Treasurer of the United States, if the President shall determine that the owner thereof at the time such money or other property was required to be so conveyed, transferred, assigned, delivered, or paid to the Alien Property Custodian or at the time when it was voluntarily delivered to him or was seized by him was —

“(3) A woman who at the time of her marriage was a citizen of the United States (said citizenship having been acquired by birth in the United States), and who prior to April 6, 1917, intermarried with a subject or citizen of Germany or Austria-Hungary, and that the money or other property concerned was not acquired by such woman either directly or indirectly from any subject or citizen of Germany or Austria-Hungary; or

“(4) A citizen or subject of Germany or Austria or Hungary or Austria-Hungary and was, at the time of the severance of diplomatic relations between the United States and such nations, respectively, accredited to the United States as a diplomatic or consular officer of any such nation, or the wife or minor child of such officer, and that the money or other property concerned was within the territory of the United States by reason of the service of such officer in such capacity; or

“(5) A citizen or subject of Germany or Austria-Hungary, who by virtue of the provisions of sections 4067, 4068, 4069, and 4070 of the Revised Statutes, and of the proclamations and regulations thereunder, was transferred, after arrest, into the custody of the War Department of the United States for detention during the war and is at the time of the return of his money or other property hereunder living within the United States; or

“(6) A partnership, association, or other unincorporated body of individuals outside the United States, or a corporation incorporated within any country other than the United States, and was entirely owned at such time by subjects or citizens of nations, States, or free cities other than Germany or Austria or Hungary or Austria-Hungary and is so owned at the time of the return of its money or other property hereunder; or

For the purposes of this section any citizen or subject of a State or free city which at the time of the proposed return of money or other property of such citizen or subject hereunder forms a part of the territory of any one of the following nations: Germany, Austria, or Hungary, shall be deemed to be a citizen or subject of such nation. And the receipt of the said owner or of the person by whom said property was conveyed, transferred, assigned, delivered, or paid over to the Alien Property Custodian shall be a full acquittance and discharge of the Alien Property Custodian or the Treasurer of the United States, as the case may be, and of the United States in respect to all claims of all persons heretofore or hereafter claiming any right, title, or interest in said property, or compensation or damages arising from the capture of such property by the President or the Alien Property Custodian: Provided further, however, That except as herein provided no such action by the President shall bar any person from the prosecution of any suit at law or in equity to establish any right, title, or interest which he may have therein.

“(c) Any person whose property the President is authorized to return under the provisions of subsection (b) hereof may file notice of claim for the return of such property, as provided in subsection (a) hereof, and thereafter may make application to the President for allowance of such claim and/or may institute suit in equity to recover such property, as provided in said subsection, and with like effect. The President or the court, as the case may be, may make the same determinations with respect to citizenship and other relevant facts that the President is authorized to make under the provisions of subsection (b) hereof.

“(d) Whenever a person, deceased, would have been entitled, if living, to the return of his money or other property hereunder, then his legal representative may proceed for the return of such property as provided in subsection (a) hereof: Provided, however, That the President or the court, as the case may be, before granting such relief shall impose such conditions by way of security or otherwise, as the President or the court, respectively, shall deem sufficient to insure that such legal representative will redeliver to the Alien Property Custodian such portion of the money or other property so received by him as shall be distributable to any person not eligible as a claimant under subsections (a) or (c) hereof.

“(e) No money or other property shall be returned nor any debt allowed under this section to any person who is a citizen or subject of any nation which was associated with the United States in the prosecution of the war, unless such nation in like case extends reciprocal rights to citizens of the United States; nor in any event shall a debt be allowed under this section unless it was owing to and owned by the claimant prior to October 6, 1917, and as to claimants other than citizens of the United States unless it arose with reference to the money or other property held by the Alien Property Custodian or Treasurer of the United States hereunder.

“(f) Except as herein provided, the money or other property conveyed, transferred, assigned, delivered, or paid to the Alien Property Custodian, shall not be liable to lien, attachment, garnishment, trustee process, or execution, or subject to any order or decree of any court.

“(g) This section shall not apply, however, to money paid to the Alien Property Custodian under section 10 hereof.” [41 Stat. L. 977-980.]

"Fourth, persons to be appointed as captains or lieutenants under the provisions of section 24, hereof, shall be placed according to commissioned service rendered prior to November 11, 1918, among the officers referred to in the next preceding clause; and where such commissioned service is equal, officers now in the Regular Army shall precede persons to be appointed under the provisions of this Act, and the latter shall be arranged according to age.

"Fifth, persons appointed as lieutenant colonels or majors under the provisions of section 24 hereof, shall be placed immediately below all officers of the Regular Army who, on July 1, 1920, are promoted to those grades respectively under the provisions of section 24 hereof: Provided, That the board charged with the preparation of the promotion list may in its discretion, assign to any such officer a position on the list higher than that to which he would otherwise be entitled, but not such as to place him above any officer of greater age, whose commissioned service commenced prior to April 6, 1917, and who would precede him on the list under the general provisions of this section.

"Any former officer of the Regular Army and any retired officer who may hereafter be appointed to the active list in the manner provided by law shall be placed on the promotion list in accordance with his total active commissioned service; except that former officers appointed to field grades on July 1, 1920, under the provisions of section 24, may be placed as provided in the next preceding paragraph of this section. “ SEC. 24b. CLASSIFICATION OF OFFICERS.— Immediately upon the passage of this Act, and in September of 1921 and every year thereafter, the President shall convene a board of not less than five general officers, who shall arrange all officers in two classes, namely: Class A, consisting of officers who should be retained in the service, and Class B, of officers who should not be retained in the service. Until otherwise finally classified, all officers shall be regarded as belonging to Class A, and shall be promoted according to the provisions of this Act to fill any vacancies which may occur prior to such final classification. No officer shall be finally classified in Class B until he shall have been given an opportunity to appear before a court of inquiry. In such court of inquiry he shall be furnished with a full copy of the official records upon which the proposed classification is based and shall be given an opportunity to present testimony in his own behalf. The record of such court of inquiry shall be forwarded to the final classification board for reconsideration of the case, and after such consideration the finding of said classification board shall be final and not subject to further revision except upon the order of the President. Whenever an officer is placed in Class B, a board of not less than three officers shall be convened to determine whether such classification is due to his neglect, misconduct or avoidable habits. If the finding is affirmative, he shall be discharged from the Army; if negative, he shall be placed on the unlimited retired list with pay at the rate of $2\frac{1}{2}$ per centum of his active pay multiplied by the number of complete years of commissioned service, or service which under the provisions of this Act is counted as its equivalent, unless his total commissioned service or equivalent service shall be less than ten years, in which case he shall be honorably discharged with one year's pay. The maximum retired pay of an officer retired under the provisions of this section prior to January 1, 1924, shall be 75 per centum of active pay, and of one retired on or after that date, 60 per centum. If an officer is thus retired before the completion of thirty years' commissioned service, he may be employed on such active duty as the Secretary of War considers him capable of performing until he has completed thirty years' commissioned service. The board convened upon the passage of this Act shall also report the names of those second lieutenants of the Quartermaster Corps who were commissioned under the provisions of section 9 of the Act of June 3, 1916, who are not qualified for further promotion. The officers so reported shall continue in the grade of second lieutenant for the remainder of their service and the others shall be placed upon the promotion list according to their commissioned service, as hereinbefore provided.

“ SEC. 24c. PROMOTION OF OFFICERS.— Up to and including June 30, 1920, except as otherwise provided herein, promotions shall continue to be made in accordance with law existing prior to the passage of this Act, and on the basis of the number heretofore authorized for each grade and branch. On and after July 1, 1920, vacancies in grades below that of brigadier general shall be filled by the promotion of officers in the order in which they stand on the promotion list, without regard to the branches in which they are commissioned. Existing laws providing for the examination of officers for promotion are hereby repealed, except those relating to physical examination, which shall continue to be required for promotion to all grades below that of brigadier general, and except also those governing the examination of officers of the Medical, Dental, and Veterinary Corps. Officers of said three Corps shall be examined in accordance with laws governing examination of officers of the Medical Corps, second lieutenants of the Veterinary Corps being subject to the same provisions as first lieutenants.

" SEC. 24d. TRANSFER OF OFFICERS.— Upon his own application any officer may be transferred to another branch without loss of rank or change of place on the promotion list.

ART. 35. DISPOSITION OF RECORDS — GENERAL COURTS-MARTIAL.—The trial judge advocate of each general court-martial shall, with such expedition as circumstances may permit, forward to the appointing authority or to his successor in command the original record of the proceedings of such court in the trial of each case. All records of such proceedings shall, after having been acted upon, be transmitted to the Judge Advocate General of the Army. [41 Stat. L. 794.]

ART. 36. DISPOSITION OF RECORDS — SPECIAL AND SUMMARY COURTS-MARTIAL.—After having been acted upon by the officer appointing the court, or by the officer commanding for the time being, the record of each trial by special court-martial and a report of each trial by summary court-martial shall be transmitted to such general headquarters as the President may designate in regulations, there to be filed in the office of the judge advocate. When no longer of use, records of summary courts-martial may be destroyed. [41 Stat. L. 794.]

ART. 37.—IRREGULARITIES — EFFECT OF.—The proceedings of a court-martial shall not be held invalid, nor the findings or sentence disapproved, in any case on the ground of improper admission or rejection of evidence or for any error as to any matter of pleading or procedure unless in the opinion of the reviewing or confirming authority, after an examination of the entire proceedings, it shall appear that the error complained of has injuriously affected the substantial rights of an accused: Provided, That the act or omission upon which the accused has been tried constitutes an offense denounced and made punishable by one or more of these articles: Provided further, That the omission of the words “hard labor” in any sentence of a court-martial adjudging imprisonment or confinement shall not be construed as depriving the authorities executing such sentence of imprisonment or confinement of the power to require hard labor as a part of the punishment in any case where it is authorized by the Executive order prescribing maximum punishments. [41 Stat. L. 794.]

ART. 38. PRESIDENT MAY PRESCRIBE RULES.—The President may, by regulations, which he may modify from time to time, prescribe the procedure, including modes of proof, in cases before courts-martial, courts of inquiry, military commissions, and other military tribunals, which regulations shall, in so far as he shall deem practicable, apply the rules of evidence generally recognized in the trial of criminal cases in the district courts of the United States: Provided, That nothing contrary to or inconsistent with these articles shall be so prescribed: Provided further, That all rules made in pursuance of this article shall be laid before the Congress annually. [41 Stat. L. 794.]

E. LIMITATIONS UPON PROSECUTIONS.

ART. 39. AS TO TIME.—Except for desertion committed in time of war, or for mutiny or murder, no person subject to military law shall be liable to be tried or punished by a court-martial for any crime or offense committed more than two years before the arraignment of such person: Provided, That for desertion in time of peace or for any crime or offense punishable under articles ninety-three and ninety-four of this code the period of limitations upon trial and punishment by court-martial shall be three years: Provided further, That the period of any absence of the accused from the jurisdiction of the United States, and also any period during which by reason of some manifest impediment the accused shall not have been amenable to military justice, shall be excluded in computing the aforesaid periods of limitation: And provided further, That this article shall not have the effect to authorize the trial or punishment for any crime or offense barred by the provisions of existing law. [41 Stat. L. 794.]

ART. 40. AS TO NUMBER.—No person shall, without his consent, be tried a second time for the same offense; but no proceeding in which an accused has been found guilty by a court-martial upon any charge or specification shall be held to be a trial in the sense of this article until the reviewing and, if there be one, the confirming authority shall have taken final action upon the case.

No authority shall return a record of trial to any court-martial for reconsideration of —

- (a) An acquittal; or
- (b) A finding of not guilty of any specification; or
- (c) A finding of not guilty of any charge, unless the record shows a finding of guilty under a specification laid under that charge, which sufficiently alleges a violation of some article of war; or
- (d) The sentence originally imposed, with a view to increasing its severity, unless such sentence is less than the mandatory sentence fixed by law for the offense or offenses upon which a conviction has been had.

And no court-martial, in any proceedings on revision, shall reconsider its finding or sentence in any particular in which a return of the record of trial for such reconsideration is hereinbefore prohibited. [41 Stat. L. 795.]

F. PUNISHMENTS.

ART. 41. CRUEL AND UNUSUAL PUNISHMENTS PROHIBITED.—Cruel and unusual punishments of every kind including flogging, branding, marking, or tattooing on the body, are prohibited. [41 Stat. L. 795.]

ART. 42. PLACES OF CONFINEMENT — WHEN LAWFUL.—Except for desertion in time of war; repeated desertion in time of peace, and mutiny, no person shall under the sentence of a court-martial be punished by confinement in a penitentiary unless an act or omission of which he is convicted is recognized as an offense of a civil nature and so punishable by penitentiary confinement for more than one year by some statute of the United States, of general application within the continental United States, excepting section 289, Penal Code of the United States, 1910, or by the law of the District of Columbia, or by way of commutation of a death sentence, and unless, also, the period of confinement authorized and adjudged by such court-martial is more than one year: Provided, That when a sentence of confinement is adjudged by a court-martial upon conviction of two or more acts or omissions any one of which is punishable under these articles by confinement in a penitentiary, the entire sentence of confinement may be executed in a penitentiary: Provided further, That penitentiary confinement hereby authorized may be served in any penitentiary directly or indirectly under the jurisdiction of the United States: Provided further, That persons sentenced to dishonorable discharge and to confinement not in a penitentiary shall be confined in the United States Disciplinary Barracks or elsewhere as the Secretary of War or the reviewing authority may direct, but not in a penitentiary. [41 Stat. L. 795.]

ART. 43. DEATH SENTENCE—WHEN LAWFUL.—No person shall, by general court-martial, be convicted of an offense for which the death penalty is made mandatory by law, nor sentenced to suffer death, except by the concurrence of all the members of said court-martial present at the time the vote is taken, and for an offense in these articles expressly made punishable by death; nor sentenced to life imprisonment, nor to confinement for more than ten years, except by the concurrence of three-fourths of all of the members present at the time the vote is taken. All other convictions and sentences, whether by general or special court-martial, may be determined by a two-thirds vote of those members present at the time the vote is taken. All other questions shall be determined by a majority vote. [41 Stat. L. 795.]

ART. 44. COWARDICE; FRAUD.—ACCESSORY PENALTY.—When an officer is dismissed from the service for cowardice or fraud, the crime, punishment, name, and place of abode of the delinquent shall be published in the newspapers in and about the camp and in the State from which the offender came or where he usually resides; and after such publication it shall be scandalous for an officer to associate with him. [41 Stat. L. 796.]

ART. 45. MAXIMUM LIMITS.—Whenever the punishment for a crime or offense made punishable by these articles is left to the discretion of the court-martial, the punishment shall not exceed such limit or limits as the President may from time to time prescribe: Provided, That in time of peace the period of confinement in a penitentiary shall in no case exceed the maximum period prescribed by the law which, under article 42 of these articles, permits confinement in a penitentiary, unless in addition to the offense so punishable under such law the accused shall have been convicted at the same time of one or more other offenses. [41 Stat. L. 796.]

G. ACTION BY APPOINTING OR SUPERIOR AUTHORITY.

ART. 46. ACTION BY CONVENING AUTHORITY.—Under such regulations as may be prescribed by the President every record of trial by general court-martial or military commission received by a reviewing or confirming authority shall be referred by him, before he acts thereon, to his staff judge advocate or to the Judge Advocate General. No sentence of a court-martial shall be carried into execution until the same shall have been approved by the officer appointing the court or by the officer commanding for the time being. [41 Stat. L. 796.]

ART. 47. POWERS INCIDENT TO POWER TO APPROVE.—The power to approve the sentence of a court-martial shall be held to include:

(a) The power to approve or disapprove a finding and to approve only so much of a finding of guilty of a particular offense as involves a finding of guilty of a lesser included offense when, in the opinion of the authority having power to approve, the evidence of record requires a finding of only the lesser degree of guilt; and

(b) The power to approve or disapprove the whole or any part of the sentence.

(c) The power to remand a case for rehearing, under the provisions of article 50½. [41 Stat. L. 796.]

ART. 48. CONFIRMATION — WHEN REQUIRED.— In addition to the approval required by article forty-six, confirmation by the President is required in the following cases before the sentence of a court-martial is carried into execution, namely:

(a) Any sentence respecting a general officer.

(b) Any sentence extending to the dismissal of an officer, except that in time of war a sentence extending to the dismissal of an officer below the grade of brigadier general may be carried into execution upon confirmation by the commanding general of the Army in the field or by the commanding general of the territorial department or division;

(c) Any sentence extending to the suspension or dismissal of a cadet; and

(d) Any sentence of death, except in the cases of persons convicted in time of war of murder, rape, mutiny, desertion, or as spies; and in such excepted cases a sentence of death may be carried into execution, subject to the provisions of article 50½, upon confirmation by the commanding general of the Army in the field or by the commanding general of the territorial department or division.

When the authority competent to confirm the sentence has already acted as the approving authority no additional confirmation by him is necessary. [41 Stat. L. 796.]

ART. 49. POWERS INCIDENT TO POWER TO CONFIRM.— The power to confirm the sentence of a court-martial shall be held to include:

(a) The power to confirm or disapprove a finding, and to confirm so much only of a finding of guilty of a particular offense as involves a finding of guilty of a lesser included offense when, in the opinion of the authority having power to confirm, the evidence of record requires a finding of only the lesser degree of guilt; and

(b) The power to confirm or disapprove the whole or any part of the sentence;

(c) The power to remand a case for rehearing, under the provisions of article 50½. [41 Stat. L. 797.]

ART. 50. MITIGATION OR REMISSION OF SENTENCES.— The power to order the execution of the sentence adjudged by a court-martial shall be held to include, inter alia, the power to mitigate or remit the whole or any part of the sentence.

Any unexecuted portion of a sentence adjudged by a court-martial may be mitigated or remitted by the military authority competent to appoint, for the command, exclusive of penitentiaries and the United States Disciplinary Barracks, in which the person under sentence is held, a court of the kind that imposed the sentence, and the same power may be exercised by superior military authority; but no sentence approved or confirmed by the President shall be remitted or mitigated by any other authority, and no approved sentence of loss of files by an officer shall be remitted or mitigated by any authority inferior to the President, except as provided in the fifty-second article.

When empowered by the President so to do, the commanding general of the Army in the field or the commanding general of the territorial department or division, may approve or confirm and commute (but not approve or confirm without commuting), mitigate, or remit and then order executed as commuted, mitigated, or remitted any sentence which under these articles requires the confirmation of the President before the same may be executed.

The power of remission or mitigation shall extend to all uncollected forfeitures adjudged by sentence of court-martial. [41 Stat. L. 797.]

ART. 50¹/₂. REVIEW; REHEARING.—The Judge Advocate General shall constitute, in his office, a board of review consisting of not less than three officers of the Judge Advocate General's Department.

Before any record of trial in which there has been adjudged a sentence requiring approval or confirmation by the President under the provisions of article 46, article 48, or article 51 is submitted to the President, such record shall be examined by the board of review. The board shall submit its opinion, in writing, to the Judge Advocate General, who shall, except as herein otherwise provided, transmit the record and the board's opinion, with his recommendations, directly to the Secretary of War for the action of the President.

Except as herein provided, no authority shall order the execution of any other sentence of a general court-martial involving the penalty of death, dismissal not suspended, dishonorable discharge not suspended, or confinement in a penitentiary, unless and until the board of review shall, with the approval of the Judge Advocate General, have held the record of trial upon which such sentence is based legally sufficient to support the sentence; except that the proper reviewing or confirming authority may upon his approval of a sentence involving dishonorable discharge or confinement in a penitentiary order its execution if it is based solely upon findings of guilty of a charge or charges and a specification or specifications to which the accused has pleaded guilty. When the board of review, with the approval of the Judge Advocate General, holds the record in a case in which the order of execution has been withheld under the provisions of this paragraph legally sufficient to support the findings and sentence, the Judge Advocate General shall so advise the reviewing or confirming authority from whom the record was received, who may thereupon order the execution of the sentence. When in a case in which the order of execution has been withheld under the provisions of this paragraph, the board of review holds the record of trial legally insufficient to support the findings or sentence, either in whole or in part, or that errors of law have been committed injuriously affecting the substantial rights of the accused, and the Judge Advocate General concurs in such holding of the board of review, such findings and sentence shall be vacated in whole or in part in accord with such holding and the recommendations of the Judge Advocate General thereon, and the record shall be transmitted through the proper channels to the convening authority for a rehearing or such other action as may be proper. In the event that the Judge Advocate General shall not concur in the holding of the board of review, the Judge Advocate General shall forward all the papers in the case, including the opinion of the board of review and his own dissent therefrom, directly to the Secretary of War for the action of the President, who may confirm the action of the reviewing authority or confirming authority below, in whole or in part, with or without remission, mitigation, or commutation, or may disapprove, in whole or in part, any finding of guilty, and may disapprove or vacate the sentence, in whole or in part.

When the President or any reviewing or confirming authority disapproves or vacates a sentence the execution of which has not theretofore been duly ordered, he may authorize or direct a rehearing. Such rehearing shall take place before a court composed of officers not members of the court which first heard the case. Upon such rehearing the accused shall not be tried for any offense of which he was found not guilty by the first court, and no sentence in excess of or more severe than the original sentence shall be enforced unless the sentence be based upon a finding of guilty of an offense not considered upon the merits in the original proceeding: Provided, That such rehearing shall be had in all cases where a finding and sentence have been vacated by reason of the action of the board of review approved by the Judge Advocate General holding the record of trial legally insufficient to support the findings or sentence or that errors of law have been committed injuriously affecting the substantial rights of the accused, unless, in accord with such action, and the recommendations of the Judge Advocate General thereon, the findings or sentence are approved in part only, or the record is returned for revision, or unless the case is dismissed by order of the reviewing or confirming authority. After any such rehearing had on the order of the President, the record of trial shall, after examination by the board of review, be transmitted by the Judge Advocate General, with the board's opinion and his recommendations, directly to the Secretary of War for the action of the President.

Every record of trial by general court-martial, examination of which by the board of review is not hereinbefore in this article provided for, shall nevertheless be examined in the Judge Advocate General's Office; and if found legally insufficient to support the findings and sentence, in whole or in part, shall be examined by the board of review, and the board, if it also finds that such record is legally insufficient to support the findings and sentence, in whole or in part, shall, in writing, submit its opinion to the Judge Advocate General, who shall transmit the record and the board's opinion, with his recommendations, directly to the Secretary of War for the action of the President. In any such case the President may approve, disapprove, or vacate, in whole or in part, any findings of guilty, or confirm, mitigate, commute, remit, or vacate any sentence, in whole or in part, and direct the execution of the sentence as confirmed or modified, and he may restore the accused to all rights affected by the findings and sentence, or part thereof, held to be invalid; and the President's necessary orders to this end shall be binding upon all departments and officers of the Government.

Whenever necessary, the Judge Advocate General may constitute two or more boards of review in his office, with equal powers and duties.

Whenever the President deems such action necessary, he may direct the Judge Advocate General to establish a branch of his office, under an Assistant Judge Advocate General, with any distant command, and to establish in such branch office a board of review, or more than one. Such Assistant Judge Advocate General and such board or boards of review shall be empowered to perform for that command, under the general supervision of the Judge Advocate General, the duties which the Judge Advocate General and the board or boards of review in his office would otherwise be required to perform in respect of all cases involving sentences not requiring approval or confirmation by the President. [41 Stat. L. 797.]

ART. 51. SUSPENSION OF SENTENCES OF DISMISSAL OR DEATH.—The authority competent to order the execution of a sentence of dismissal of an officer or a sentence of death may suspend such sentence until the pleasure of the President be known, and in case of such suspension a copy of the order of suspension, together with a copy of the record of trial, shall immediately be transmitted to the President. [41 Stat. L. 799.]

ART. 52. SUSPENSION OF SENTENCES.—The authority competent to order the execution of the sentence of a court-martial may, at the time of the approval of such sentence, suspend the execution, in whole or in part, of any such sentence as does not extend to death, and may restore the person under sentence to duty during such suspension; and the Secretary of War or the commanding officer holding general court-martial jurisdiction over any such offender, may at any time thereafter, while the sentence is being served, suspend the execution, in whole or in part, of the balance of such sentence and restore the person under sentence to duty during such suspension. A sentence, or any part thereof, which has been so suspended may be remitted, in whole or in part, except in cases of persons confined in the United States Disciplinary Barracks or its branches, by the officer who suspended the same, by his successor in office, or by any officer exercising appropriate court-martial jurisdiction over the command in which the person under sentence may be serving at the time, and, subject to the foregoing exceptions, the same authority may vacate the order of suspension at any time and order the execution of the sentence or the suspended part thereof in so far as the same shall not have been previously remitted, subject to like power of suspension. The death or honorable discharge of a person under a suspended sentence shall operate as a complete remission of any unexecuted or unremitted part of such sentence. [41 Stat. L. 799.]

ART. 53. EXECUTION OR REMISSION—CONFINEMENT IN DISCIPLINARY BARRACKS.—When a sentence of dishonorable discharge has been suspended until the soldier's release from confinement, the execution or remission of any part of his sentence shall, if the soldier be confined in the United States Disciplinary Barracks, or any branch thereof, be directed by the Secretary of War. [41 Stat. L. 800.]

[41 Stat. L. 800.]

ART. 61. ABSENCE WITHOUT LEAVE.—Any person subject to military law who fails to repair at the fixed time to the properly appointed place of duty, or goes from the same without proper leave, or absents himself from his command, guard, quarters, station, or camp without proper leave, shall be punished as a court-martial may direct. [41 Stat. L. 801.]

[41 Stat. L. 801.]

ART. 67. [41 Stat. L. 801.]

D. ARREST; CONFINEMENT.

ART. 69. ARREST OR CONFINEMENT.—Any person subject to military law charged with crime or with a serious offense under these articles shall be placed in confinement or in arrest as circumstances may require; but when charged with a minor offense only such person shall not ordinarily be placed in confinement. [41 Stat. L. 802.]

ART. 70. CHARGES; ACTION UPON.—Charges and specifications must be signed by a person subject to military law, and under oath either that he has personal knowledge of, or has investigated, the matters set forth therein, and that the same are true in fact, to the best of his knowledge and belief.

No charge will be referred for trial until after a thorough and impartial investigation thereof shall have been made. This investigation will include inquiries as to the truth of the matter set forth in said charges, form of charges, and what disposition of the case should be made in the interest of justice and discipline. At such investigation full opportunity shall be given to the accused to cross-examine witnesses against him if they are available and to present anything he may desire in his own behalf either in defense or mitigation, and the investigating officer shall examine available witnesses requested by the accused. If the charges are forwarded after such investigation, they shall be accompanied by a statement of the substance of the testimony taken on both sides.

Before directing the trial of any charge by general court-martial the appointing authority will refer it to his staff judge advocate for consideration and advice.

When any person subject to military law is placed in arrest or confinement immediate steps will be taken to try the person accused or to dismiss the charge and release him. When a person is held for trial by general court-martial the commanding officer will, within eight days after the accused is arrested or confined, if practicable, forward the charges to the officer exercising general court-martial jurisdiction and furnish the accused a copy of such charges. If the same be not practicable, he will report to superior authority the reasons for delay. The trial judge advocate will cause to be served upon the accused a copy of the charges upon which trial is to be had, and a failure so to serve such charges will be ground for a continuance unless the trial be had on the charges furnished the accused as hereinbefore provided. In time of peace no person shall, against his objection, be brought to trial before a general court-martial within a period of five days subsequent to the service of charges upon him. [41 Stat. L. 802.]

ART. 71. REFUSAL TO RECEIVE AND KEEP PRISONERS.—No provost marshal or commander of a guard shall refuse to receive or keep any prisoner committed to his charge by an officer belonging to the forces of the United States, provided the officer committing shall, at the time, deliver an account in writing, signed by himself, of the crime or offense charged against the prisoner. Any commanding officer who upon such application refuses or willfully neglects, except in time of war, to deliver over such accused person to the civil authorities or to aid the officers of justice in apprehending and securing him shall be dismissed from the service or suffer such other punishment as a court-martial may direct.

When, under the provisions of this article, delivery is made to the civil authorities of an offender undergoing sentence of a court-martial, such delivery, if followed by conviction, shall be held to interrupt the execution of the sentence of the court-martial, and the offender shall be returned to military custody, after having answered to the civil authorities for his offense, for the completion of the said court-martial sentence. [41 Stat. L. 803.]

E. WAR OFFENSES.

ART. 76. SUBORDINATES COMPELLING COMMANDER TO SURRENDER.—Any person subject to military law who compels or attempts to compel any commander of any garrison, fort, post, camp, guard, or other command, to give it up to the enemy or to abandon it shall be punishable with death or such other punishment as a court-martial may direct. Whenever the contemplated improvement is, in the judgment of the commission, desirable and justified in the public interest for the purpose of improving or developing a waterway or waterways for the use or benefit of interstate or foreign commerce, a finding to that effect shall be made by the commission and shall become a part of the records of the commission: Provided further, That in case the commission shall find that any Government dam may be advantageously used by the United States for public purposes in addition to navigation, no license therefor shall be issued until two years after it shall have reported to Congress the facts and conditions relating thereto, except that this provision shall not apply to any Government dam constructed prior to the passage of this Act: And provided further, That upon the filing of any application for a license which has not been preceded by a preliminary permit under subsection (e) of this section, notice shall be given and published as required by the proviso of said subsection.

(e) To issue preliminary permits for the purpose of enabling applicants for a license hereunder to secure the data and to perform the acts required by section 9 hereof: Provided, however, That upon the filing of any application for a preliminary permit by any person, association, or corporation the commission, before granting such application, shall at once give notice of such application in writing to any State or municipality likely to be interested in or affected by such application; and shall also publish notice of such application for eight weeks in a daily or weekly newspaper published in the county or counties in which the project or any part thereof or the lands affected thereby are situated.

(f) To prescribe rules and regulations for the establishment of a system of accounts and for the maintenance thereof by licensees hereunder; to examine all books and accounts of such licensees at any time; to require them to submit at such time or times as the commission may require statements and reports, including full information as to assets and liabilities, capitalization, net investment and reduction thereof, gross receipts, interest due and paid, depreciation and other reserves, cost of project, cost of maintenance and operation of the project, cost of renewals and replacements of the project works, and as to depreciation of the project works and as to production, transmission, use and sale of power; also to require any licensee to make adequate provision for currently determining said costs and other facts. All such statements and reports shall be made upon oath, unless otherwise specified, and in such form and on such blanks as the commission may require. Any person who, for the purpose of deceiving, makes or causes to be made any false entry in the books or the accounts of such licensee, and any person who, for the purpose of deceiving, makes or causes to be made any false statement or report in response to a request or order or direction from the commission for the statements and report herein referred to shall, upon conviction, be fined not more than $2,000 or imprisoned not more than five years, or both.

(g) To hold hearings and to order testimony to be taken by deposition at any designated place in connection with the application for any permit or license, or the regulation of rates, service, or securities, or the making of an investigation, as provided in this Act; and to require by subpoena, signed by any member of the commission, the attendance and testimony of witnesses and the production of documentary evidence from any place in the United States, and in case of disobedience to a subpoena the commission may invoke the aid of any court of the United States in requiring the attendance and testimony of witnesses and the production of documentary evidence. Any member, expert, or examiner of the commission may, when duly designated by the commission for such purposes, administer oaths and affirmations, examine witnesses and receive evidence. Depositions may be taken before any person designated by the commission or by its executive secretary and empowered to administer oaths, shall be reduced to writing by such person or under his direction, and subscribed by the deponent. Witnesses summoned before the commission shall be paid the same fees and mileage that are paid witnesses in the courts of the United States, and witnesses whose depositions are taken and persons taking the same shall severally be entitled to the same fees as are paid for like services in the courts of the United States.

(h) To perform any and all acts, to make such rules and regulations, and to issue such orders not inconsistent with this Act as may be necessary and proper for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of this Act. [41 Stat. L. 1065.]

SEC. 5. [Preliminary permits — purpose — scope.] That each preliminary permit issued under this Act shall be for the sole purpose of maintaining priority of application for a license under the terms of this Act for such period or periods, not exceeding a total of three years, as in the discretion of the commission may be necessary for making examinations and surveys, for preparing maps, plans, specifications, and estimates, and for making financial arrangements. Each such permit shall set forth the conditions under which priority shall be maintained and a license issued. Such permits shall not be transferable, and may be canceled by order of the commission upon failure of permittees to comply with the conditions thereof. [41 Stat. L. 1067.]

SEC. 6. [Licenses — conditions of issuance — revocation, alteration and surrender.] That licenses under this Act shall be issued for a period not exceeding fifty years. Each such license shall be conditioned upon acceptance by the licensee of all the terms and conditions of this Act and such further conditions, if any, as the commission shall prescribe in conformity with this Act, which said terms and conditions and the acceptance thereof shall be expressed in said license. Licenses may be revoked only for the reasons and in the manner prescribed under the provisions of this Act, and may be altered or surrendered only upon mutual agreement between the licensee and the commission after ninety days' public notice. [41 Stat. L. 1067.]

SEC. 7. [Preference in issuing licenses or permits — states and municipalities — project by United States.] That in issuing preliminary permits hereunder or licenses where no preliminary permit has been issued and in issuing licenses to new licensees under section 15 hereof the commission shall give preference to applications therefor by States and municipalities, provided the plans for the same are deemed by the commission equally well adapted, or shall within a reasonable time to be fixed by the commission be made equally well adapted, to conserve and utilize in the public interest the navigation and water resources of the region; and as between other applicants, the commission may give preference to the applicant the plans of which it finds and determines are best adapted to develop, conserve, and utilize in the public interest the navigation and water resources of the region, if it be satisfied as to the ability of the applicant to carry out such plans.

That whenever, in the judgment of the commission, the development of any project should be undertaken by the United States itself, the commission shall not approve any application for such project by any citizen, association, corporation, State, or municipality, but shall cause to be made such examinations, surveys, reports, plans, and estimates of the cost of the project as it may deem necessary, and shall submit its findings to Congress with such recommendations as it may deem appropriate concerning the construction of such project or completion of any project upon any Government dam by the United States.

The commission is hereby authorized and directed to investigate and, on or before the 1st day of January, 1921, report to Congress the cost and, in detail, the economic value of the power plant outlined in project numbered 3, House Document numbered 1400, Sixty-second Congress, third session, in view of existing conditions, utilizing such study as may heretofore have been made by any department of the Government; also in connection with such project to submit plans and estimates of cost necessary to secure an increased and adequate water supply for the District of Columbia. For this purpose the sum of $25,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby appropriated. [41 Stat. L. 1067.]

SEC. 8. [Transfer of licenses — conditions — what are "voluntary transfers."] That no voluntary transfer of any license, or of the rights thereunder granted, shall be made without the written approval of the commission; and any successor or assign of the rights of such licensee, whether by voluntary transfer, judicial sale, foreclosure sale, or otherwise, shall be subject to all the conditions of the license under which such rights are held by such licensee and also subject to all the provisions and conditions of this Act to the same extent as though such successor or assign were the original licensee hereunder: Provided, That a mortgage or trust deed or judicial sales made thereunder or under tax sales shall not be deemed voluntary transfers within the meaning of this section. [41 Stat. L. 1068.]

SEC. 9. [Applicants for licenses — evidence submitted to commission.] That each applicant for a license hereunder shall submit to the commission —

(a) Such maps, plans, specifications, and estimates of cost as may be required for a full understanding of the proposed project. Such maps, plans, and specifications when approved by the commission shall be made a part of the license; and thereafter no change shall be made in said maps, plans, or specifications until such changes shall have been approved and made a part of such license by the commission.

(b) Satisfactory evidence that the applicant has complied with the requirements of the laws of the State or States within which the proposed project is to be located with respect to bed and banks and to the appropriation, diversion, and use of water for power purposes and with respect to the right to engage in the business of developing, transmitting, and distributing power, and in any other business necessary to effect the purposes of a license under this Act.

(c) Such additional information as the commission may require. [41 Stat. L. 1068.]

SEC. 10. [Licenses — conditions of issuance.] That all licenses issued under this Act shall be on the following conditions:

(a) That the project adopted, including the maps, plans, and specifications, shall be such as in the judgment of the commission will be best adapted to a comprehensive scheme of improvement and utilization for the purposes of navigation, of water-power development, and of other beneficial public uses; and if necessary in order to secure such scheme the commission shall have authority to require the modification of any project and of the plans and specifications of the project works before approval.

(b) That except when emergency shall require for the protection of navigation, life, health, or property, no substantial alteration or addition not in conformity with the approved plans shall be made to any dam or other project works constructed hereunder of a capacity in excess of one hundred horsepower without the prior approval of the commission; and any emergency alteration or addition so made shall thereafter be subject to such modification and change as the commission may direct.

(c) That the licensee shall maintain the project works in a condition of repair adequate for the purposes of navigation and for the efficient operation of said works in the development and transmission of power, shall make all necessary renewals and replacements, shall establish and maintain adequate depreciation reserves for such purposes, shall so maintain and operate said works as not to impair navigation, and shall conform to such rules and regulations as the commission may from time to time prescribe for the protection of life, health, and property. Each licensee hereunder shall be liable for all damages occasioned to the property of others by the construction, maintenance, or operation of the project works or of the works appurtenant or accessory thereto, constructed under the license, and in no event shall the United States be liable therefor.

(d) That after the first twenty years of operation out of surplus earned thereafter, if any, accumulated in excess of a specified reasonable rate of return upon the actual, legitimate investment of a licensee in any project or projects under license the licensee shall establish and maintain amortization reserves, which reserves shall, in the discretion of the commission, be held until the termination of the license or be applied from time to time in reduction of the net investment. Such specified rate of return and the proportion of such surplus earnings to be paid into and held in such reserves shall be set forth in the license.

(e) That the licensee shall pay to the United States reasonable annual charges in an amount to be fixed by the commission for the purpose of reimbursing the United States for the costs of the administration of this Act; for recompensing it for the use, occupancy, and enjoyment of its lands or other property; and for the expropriation to the Government of excessive profits until the respective States shall make provision for preventing excessive profits or for the expropriation thereof to themselves, or until the period of amortization as herein provided is reached, and in fixing such charges the commission shall seek to avoid increasing the price to the consumers of power by such charges, and charges for the expropriation of excessive profits may be adjusted from time to time by the commission as conditions may require: Provided, That when licenses are issued involving the use of Government dams or other structures owned by the United States or tribal lands embraced within Indian reservations the commission shall fix a reasonable annual charge for the use thereof, and such charges may be readjusted at the end of twenty years after the beginning of operations and at periods of not less than ten years thereafter in a manner to be described in each license: Provided, That licenses for the development, transmission, or distribution of power by States or municipalities shall be issued and enjoyed without charge to the extent such power is sold to the public without profit or is used by such State or municipality for State or municipal purposes, except that as to projects constructed or to be constructed by States or municipalities primarily designed to provide or improve navigation licenses therefor shall be issued without charge; and that licenses for the development, transmission, or distribution of power for domestic, mining, or other beneficial use in projects of not more than one hundred horsepower capacity may be issued without charge, except on tribal lands within Indian reservations; but in no case shall a license be issued free of charge for the development and utilization of power created by any Government dam and that the amount charged therefor in any license shall be such as determined by the commission.

(f) That whenever any licensee hereunder is directly benefited by the construction work of another licensee, a permittee, or of the United States of a storage reservoir or other headwater improvement, the commission shall require as a condition of the license that the licensee so benefited shall reimburse the owner of such reservoir or other improvements for such part of the annual charges for interest, maintenance, and depreciation thereon as the commission may deem equitable. The proportion of such charges to be paid by any licensee shall be determined by the commission.

Whenever such reservoir or other improvement is constructed by the United States the commission shall assess similar charges against any licensee directly benefited thereby, and any amount so assessed shall be paid into the Treasury of the United States, to be reserved and appropriated as a part of the special fund for headwater improvements as provided in section 17 hereof.

(g) Such other conditions not inconsistent with the provisions of this Act as the commission may require.

(h) That combinations, agreements, arrangements, or understandings, express or implied, to limit the output of electrical energy, to restrain trade, or to fix, maintain, or increase prices for electrical energy or service are hereby prohibited.

(i) In issuing licenses for a minor part only of a complete project, or for a complete project of not more than one hundred horsepower capacity, the commission may in its discretion waive such conditions, provisions, and requirements of this Act, except the license period of fifty years, as it may deem to be to the public interest to waive under the circumstances: Provided, That the provisions hereof shall not apply to lands within Indian reservations. [41 Stat. L. 1068.]

SEC. 11. [Project works along or in navigable waters—conditions in licenses.] That if the dam or other project works are to be constructed across, along, or in any of the navigable waters of the United States, the commission may, in so far as it deems the same reasonably necessary to promote the present and future needs of navigation and consistent with a reasonable investment cost to the licensee, include in the license any one or more of the following provisions or requirements:

(a) That such licensee shall, to the extent necessary to preserve and improve navigation facilities, construct, in whole or in part, without expense to the United States, in connection with such dam, a lock or locks, booms, sluices, or other structures for navigation purposes, in accordance with plans and specifications approved by the Chief of Engineers and the Secretary of War and made part of such license.

(b) That in case such structures for navigation purposes are not made a part of the original construction at the expense of the licensee, then whenever the United States shall desire to complete such navigation facilities the licensee shall convey to the United States, free of cost, such of its land and its rights of way and such right of passage through its dams or other structures, and permit such control of pools as may be required to complete such navigation facilities.

(c) That such licensee shall furnish free of cost to the United States power for the operation of such navigation facilities, whether constructed by the licensee or by the United States. [41 Stat. L. 1070.]

SEC. 12. [Locks or other navigation structures — projects involving navigable waters.] That whenever application is filed for a project hereunder involving navigable waters of the United States, and the commission shall find upon investigation that the needs of navigation require the construction of a lock or locks or other navigation structures, and that such structures can not, consistent with a reasonable investment cost to the applicant, be provided in the manner specified in section 11, subsection (a) hereof, the commission may grant the application with the provision to be expressed in the license that the licensee will install the necessary navigation structures if the Government fails to make provision therefor within a time to be fixed in the license and cause a report upon such project to be prepared, with estimates of cost of the power development and of the navigation structures, and shall submit such report to Congress with such recommendations as it deems appropriate concerning the participation of the United States in the cost of construction of such navigation structures. [41 Stat. L. 1070.]

SEC. 13. [Construction of project works — limitation of time for construction.] That the licensee shall commence the construction of the project works within the time fixed in the license, which shall not be more than two years from the date thereof, shall thereafter in good faith and with due diligence prosecute such construction, and shall within the time fixed in the license complete and put into operation such part of the ultimate development as the commission shall deem necessary to supply the reasonable needs of the then available market, and shall from time to time thereafter construct such portion of the balance of such development as the commission may direct, so as to supply adequately the reasonable market demands until such development shall have been completed. The periods for the commencement of construction may be extended once but not longer than two additional years and the period for the completion of construction carried on in good faith and with reasonable diligence may be extended by the commission when not incompatible with the public interests. In case the licensee shall not commence actual construction of the project works, or of any specified part thereof, within the time prescribed in the license or as extended by the commission, then, after due notice given, the license shall, as to such project works or part thereof, be terminated upon written order of the commission. In case the construction of the project works, or of any specified part thereof, have been begun but not completed within the time prescribed in the license; or as extended by the commission, then the Attorney General, upon the request of the commission, shall institute proceedings in equity in the district court of the United States for the district in which any part of the project is situated for the revocation of said license, the sale of the works constructed, and such other equitable relief as the case may demand, as provided for in section 26 hereof. [41 Stat. L. 1071.]

SEC. 14. [Authority of United States to take over projects — compensation — condemnation.] That upon not less than two years' notice in writing from the commission the United States shall have the right upon or after the expiration of any license to take over and thereafter to maintain and operate any project or projects as defined in section 3 hereof, and covered in whole or in part by the license, or the right to take over upon mutual agreement with the licensee all property owned and held by the licensee then valuable and serviceable in the development, transmission, or distribution of power and which is then dependent for its usefulness upon the continuance of the license, together with any lock or locks or other aids to navigation constructed at the expense of the licensee, upon the condition that before taking possession it shall pay the net investment of the licensee in the project or projects taken, not to exceed the fair value of the property taken, plus such reasonable damages, if any, to property of the licensee valuable, serviceable, and dependent as above set forth but not taken, as may be caused by the severance therefrom of property taken, and shall assume all contracts entered into by the licensee with the approval of the commission. The net investment of the licensee in the project or projects so taken and the amount of such severance damages, if any, shall be determined by agreement between the commission and the licensee, and in case they can not agree, by proceedings in equity instituted by the United States in the district court of the United States in the district within which any such property may be located: Provided, That such net investment shall not include or be affected by the value of any lands, rights of way or other property of the United States licensed by the commission under this Act, by the license, or by good will, going value, or prospective revenues: Provided further, That the values allowed for water rights, rights of way, lands, or interest in lands shall not be in excess of the actual reasonable cost thereof at the time of acquisition by the licensee: Provided, That the right of the United States or any State or municipality to take over, maintain, and operate any project licensed under this Act at any time by condemnation proceedings upon payment of just compensation is hereby expressly reserved. [41 Stat. L. 1071.]

SEC. 15. [New licenses and renewals.] That if the United States does not, at the expiration of the original license, exercise its right to take over, maintain, and operate any project or projects of the licensee, as provided in section 14 hereof, the commission is authorized to issue a new license to the original licensee upon such terms and conditions as may be authorized or required under the then existing laws and regulations, or to issue a new license under said terms and conditions to a new licensee, which license may cover any project or projects covered by the original license, and shall be issued on the condition that the new licensee shall, before taking possession of such project or projects, pay such amount, and assume such contracts as the United States is required to do, in the manner specified in section 14 hereof: Provided, That in the event the United States does not exercise the right to take over or does not issue a license to a new licensee, or issue a new license to the original licensee, upon reasonable terms, then the commission shall issue from year to year an annual license to the then licensee under the terms and conditions of the original license until the property is taken over or a new license is issued as aforesaid. [41 Stat. L. 1072.]

SEC. 16. [Temporary use of projects by United States when safety of nation involved — compensation.] That when in the opinion of the President of the United States, evidenced by a written order addressed to the holder of any license hereunder, the safety of the United States demands it, the United States shall have the right to enter upon and take possession of any project, or part thereof, constructed, maintained, or operated under said license, for the purpose of manufacturing nitrates, explosives, or munitions of war, or for any other purpose involving the safety of the United States, to retain possession, management, and control thereof for such length of time as may appear to the President to be necessary to accomplish said purposes, and then to restore possession and control to the party or parties entitled thereto; and in the event that the United States shall exercise such right it shall pay to the party or parties entitled thereto just and fair compensation for the use of said property as may be fixed by the commission upon the basis of a reasonable profit in time of peace, and the cost of restoring said property to as good condition as existed at the time of the taking over thereof, less the reasonable value of any improvements that may be made thereto by the United States and which are valuable and serviceable to the licensee. [41 Stat. L. 1072.]

SEC. 17. [Proceeds from Indian reservation — charges arising from licenses — disposition.] That all proceeds from any Indian reservation shall be placed to the credit of the Indians of such reservation. All other charges arising from licenses hereunder shall be paid into the Treasury of the United States, subject to the following distribution: Twelve and one-half per centum thereof is hereby appropriated to be paid into the Treasury of the United States and credited to "Miscellaneous receipts"; 50 per centum of the charges arising from licenses hereunder for the occupancy and use of public lands, national monuments, national forests, and national parks shall be paid into, reserved, and appropriated as a part of the reclamation fund created by the Act of Congress known as the Reclamation Act, approved June 17, 1902; and 37½ per centum of the charges arising from licenses hereunder for the occupancy and use of national forests, national parks, public lands, and national monuments, from development within the boundaries of any State shall be paid by the Secretary of the Treasury to such State; and 50 per centum of the charges arising from all other licenses hereunder is hereby reserved and appropriated as a special fund in the Treasury to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of War in the maintenance and operation of dams and other navigation structures owned by the United States or in the construction, maintenance, or operation of head-water or other improvements of navigable waters of the United States. [41 Stat. L. 1072.]

SEC. 18. [Operation of navigation facilities — rules and regulations.] That the operation of any navigation facilities which may be constructed as a part of or in connection with any dam or diversion structure built under the provisions of this Act, whether at the expense of a licensee hereunder or of the United States, shall at all times be controlled by such reasonable rules and regulations in the interest of navigation, including the control of the level of the pool caused by such dam or diversion structure as may be made from time to time by the Secretary of War. Such rules and regulations may include the maintenance and operation by such licensee at its own expense of such lights and signals as may be directed by the Secretary of War, and such fishways as may be prescribed by the Secretary of Commerce; and for willful failure to comply with any such rule or regulation such licensee shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be punished as provided in section 25 hereof. [41 Stat. L. 1073.]

SEC. 19. [Corporations furnishing power for sale or use in public service — regulation by state.] That as a condition of the license, every licensee hereunder which is a public-service corporation, or a person, association, or corporation owning or operating any project and developing, transmitting, or distributing power for sale or use in public service, shall abide by such reasonable regulation of the services to be rendered to customers or consumers of power, and of rates and charges of payment therefor, as may from time to time be prescribed by any duly constituted agency of the State in which the service is rendered or the rate charged. That in case of the development, transmission, or distribution, or use in public service of power by any licensee hereunder or by its customer engaged in public service within a State which has not authorized and empowered a commission or other agency or agencies within said State to regulate and control the services to be rendered by such licensee or by its customer engaged in public service, or the rates and charges of payment therefor, or the amount or character of securities to be issued by any of said parties, it is agreed as a condition of such license that jurisdiction is hereby conferred upon the commission, upon complaint of any person aggrieved or upon its own initiative, to exercise such regulation and control until such time as the State shall have provided a commission or other authority for such regulation and control: Provided, That the jurisdiction of the commission shall cease and determine as to each specific matter of regulation and control prescribed in this section as soon as the State shall have provided a commission or other authority for the regulation and control of that specific matter. [41 Stat. L. 1073.]

SEC. 20. [Power sold in interstate or foreign commerce — regulation of rates and service rendered.] That when said power or any part thereof shall enter into interstate or foreign commerce the rates charged and the service rendered by any such licensee, or by any subsidiary corporation, the stock of which is owned or controlled directly or indirectly by such licensee, or by any person, corporation, or association purchasing power from such licensee for sale and distribution or use in public service shall be reasonable, nondiscriminatory, and just to the customer and all unreasonable discriminatory and unjust rates or services are hereby prohibited and declared to be unlawful; and whenever any of the States directly concerned has not provided a commission or other authority to enforce the requirements of this section within such State or to regulate and control the amount and character of securities to be issued by any of such parties or such States are unable to agree through their properly constituted authorities on the services to be rendered or on the rates or charges of payment therefor, or on the amount or character of securities to be issued by any of said parties, jurisdiction is hereby conferred upon the commission, upon complaint of any person aggrieved, upon the request of any State concerned, or upon its own initiative to enforce the provisions of this section, to regulate and control so much of the services rendered, and of the rates and charges of payment therefor as constitute interstate or foreign commerce and to regulate the issuance of securities by the parties included within this section, and securities issued by the licensee subject to such regulations shall be allowed only for the bona fide purpose of financing and conducting the business of such licensee.

The administration of the provisions of this section, so far as applicable, shall be according to the procedure and practice in fixing and regulating the rates, charges, and practices of railroad companies as provided in the Act to regulate commerce, approved February 4, 1887, as amended, and that the parties subject to such regulation shall have the same rights of hearing, defense, and review as said companies in such cases.

In any valuation of the property of any licensee hereunder for purposes of rate making, no value shall be claimed by the licensee or allowed by the commission for any project or projects under license in excess of the value or values prescribed in section 14 hereof for the purposes of purchase by the United States, but there shall be included the cost to such licensee of the construction of the lock or locks or other aids of navigation and all other capital expenditures required by the United States, and no value shall be claimed or allowed for the rights granted by the commission or by this Act. [41 Stat. L. 1073.]

For Act of Feb. 4, 1887, see 4 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 337 et seq.

SEC. 21. [Condemnation proceedings.] That when any licensee can not acquire by contract or pledges an unimproved dam site or the right to use or damage the lands or property of others necessary to the construction, maintenance, or operation of any dam, reservoir, diversion structure, or the works appurtenant or accessory thereto, in conjunction with an improvement which in the judgment of the commission is desirable and justified in the public interest for the purpose of improving or developing a waterway or waterways for the use or benefit of interstate or foreign commerce, it may acquire the same by the exercise of the right of eminent domain in the district court of the United States for the district in which such land or other property may be located, or in the State courts. The practice and procedure in any action or proceeding for that purpose in the district court of the United States shall conform as nearly as may be with the practice and procedure in similar action or proceeding in the courts of the State where the property is situated: Provided, That United States district courts shall only have jurisdiction of cases when the amount claimed by the owner of the property to be condemned exceeds $3,000. [41 Stat. L. 1074.]

SEC. 22. [Contracts for the sale and delivery of power — public interest requiring extension of time beyond license period.] That whenever the public interest requires or justifies the execution by the licensee of contracts for the sale and delivery of power for periods extending beyond the date of termination of the license, such contracts may be entered into upon the joint approval of the commission and of the public-service commission or other similar authority in the State in which the sale or delivery of power is made, or if sold or delivered in a State which has no such public-service commission, then upon the approval of the commission, and thereafter, in the event of failure to issue a new license to the original licensee at the termination of the license, the United States or the new licensee, as the case may be, shall assume and fulfill all such contracts. [41 Stat. L. 1074.]

SEC. 23. [Permits, rights of way, etc., heretofore granted — provisions of this Act as affecting — projects already constructed — licenses — valuation — projects in nonnavigable waters.] That the provisions of this Act shall not be construed as affecting any permit or valid existing right of way heretofore granted, or as confirming or otherwise affecting any claim, or as affecting any authority heretofore given pursuant to law, but any person, association, corporation, State, or municipality, holding or possessing such permit, right of way, or authority may apply for a license hereunder, and upon such application the commission may issue to any such applicant a license in accordance with the provisions of this Act, and in such case the provisions of this Act shall apply to such applicant as a licensee hereunder: Provided, That when application is made for a license under this section for a project or projects already constructed, the fair value of said project or projects, determined as provided in this section, shall for the purposes of this Act and of said license be deemed to be the amount to be allowed as the net investment of the applicant in such project or projects as of the date of such license, or as of the date of such determination, if license has not been issued. Such fair value may, in the discretion of the commission, be determined by mutual agreement between the commission and the applicant or, in case they can not agree, jurisdiction is hereby conferred upon the district court of the United States in the district within which such project or projects may be located, upon the application of either party, to hear and determine the amount of such fair value.

That any person, association, corporation, State, or municipality intending to construct a dam or other project works across, along, over, or in any stream or part thereof, other than those defined herein as navigable waters, and over which Congress has jurisdiction under its authority to regulate commerce between foreign nations and among the several States, may in their discretion file declaration of such intention with the commission, whereupon the commission shall cause immediate investigation of such proposed construction to be made, and if upon investigation it shall find that the interests of interstate or foreign commerce would be affected by such proposed construction, such person, association, corporation, State, or municipality shall not proceed with such construction until it shall have applied for and shall have received a license under the provisions of this Act. If the commission shall not so find, and if no public lands or reservations are affected, permission is hereby granted to construct such dam or other project works in such stream upon compliance with State laws. [41 Stat. L. 1075.]

SEC. 24. [Public lands included in proposed projects — reservation from entry, etc.] That any lands of the United States included in any proposed project under the provisions of this Act shall from the date of filing of application therefor be reserved from entry, location, or other disposal under the laws of the United States until otherwise directed by the commission or by Congress. Notice that such application has been made, together with the date of filing thereof and a description of the lands of the United States affected thereby, shall be filed in the local land office for the district in which such lands are located. Whenever the commission shall determine that the value of any lands of the United States so applied for, or heretofore or hereafter reserved or classified as power sites, will not be injured or destroyed for the purposes of power development by location, entry, or selection under the public-land laws, the Secretary of the Interior, upon notice of such determination, shall declare such lands open to location, entry, or selection, subject to and with a reservation of the right of the United States or its permittees or licensees to enter upon, occupy, and use any part or all of said lands necessary, in the judgment of the commission, for the purposes of this Act, which right shall be expressly reserved in every patent issued for such lands; and no claim or right to compensation shall accrue from the occupation or use of any of said lands for said purposes. The United States or any licensee for any such lands hereunder may enter thereupon for the purposes of this Act, upon payment of any damages to crops, buildings, or other improvements caused thereby to the owner thereof, or upon giving a good and sufficient bond to the United States for the use and benefit of the owner to secure the payment of such damages as may be determined and fixed in an action brought upon the bond in a court of competent jurisdiction, said bond to be in the form prescribed by the commission: Provided, That locations, entries, selections, or filings heretofore made for lands reserved as water-power sites or in connection with water-power development or electrical transmission may proceed to approval or patent under and subject to the limitations and conditions in this section contained. [41 Stat. L. 1075.]

SEC. 25. [Offenses — violation of provisions of Act, contracts, etc.] That any licensee, or any person, who shall willfully fail or who shall refuse to comply with any of the provisions of this Act, or with any of the conditions made a part of any license issued hereunder, or with any subpoena of the commission, or with any regulation or lawful order of the commission, or of the Secretary of War, or of the Secretary of Commerce as to fishways, issued or made in accordance with the provisions of this Act, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof shall, in the discretion of the court, be punished by a fine of not exceeding $1,000, in addition to other penalties herein prescribed or provided by law; and every month any such licensee or any such person shall remain in default after written notice from the commission, or from the Secretary of War, or from the Secretary of Commerce, shall be deemed a new and separate offense punishable as aforesaid. [41 Stat. L. 1076.]

SEC. 26. [Actions in equity by Attorney General — jurisdiction and procedure — revocation of licenses — sale of property, etc.] That the Attorney General may, on request of the commission or of the Secretary of War, institute proceedings in equity in the district court of the United States in the district in which any project or part thereof is situated for the purpose of revoking for violation of its terms any permit or license issued hereunder, or for the purpose of remedying or correcting by injunction, mandamus, or other process any act of commission or omission in violation of the provisions of this Act or of any lawful regulation or order promulgated hereunder. The district courts shall have jurisdiction over all of the above-mentioned proceedings and shall have power to issue and execute all necessary process and to make and enforce all writs, orders, and decrees to compel compliance with the lawful orders and regulations of the commission and of the Secretary of War, and to compel the performance of any condition imposed under the provisions of this Act. In the event a decree revoking a license is entered, the court is empowered to sell the whole or any part of the project or projects under license, to wind up the business of such licensee conducted in connection with such project or projects, to distribute the proceeds to the parties entitled to the same, and to make and enforce such further orders and decrees as equity and justice may require. At such sale or sales the vendee shall take the rights and privileges belonging to the licensee and shall perform the duties of such licensee and assume all outstanding obligations and liabilities of the licensee which the court may deem equitable in the premises; and at such sale or sales the United States may become a purchaser, but it shall not be required to pay a greater amount than it would be required to pay under the provisions of section 14 hereof at the termination of the license. [41 Stat. L. 1076.]

SEC. 27. [State laws relating to water as affected by this Act.] That nothing herein contained shall be construed as affecting or intending to affect or in any way to interfere with the laws of the respective States relating to the control, appropriation, use, or distribution of water used in irrigation or for municipal or other uses, or any vested right acquired therein. [41 Stat. L. 1077.]

SEC. 28. [Amendment of Act — reservation of right — effect of amendment on licenses.] That the right to alter, amend, or repeal this Act is hereby expressly reserved; but no such alteration, amendment, or repeal shall affect any license theretofore issued under the provisions of this Act, or the rights of any licensee thereunder. [41 Stat. L. 1077.]

SEC. 29. [Repeal of inconsistent statutory provisions — sec. 18 of Act of Aug. 8, 1917, repealed.] That all Acts or parts of Acts inconsistent with this Act are hereby repealed: Provided, That nothing herein contained shall be held or construed to modify or repeal any of the provisions of the Act of Congress approved December 19, 1913, granting certain rights of way to the city and county of San Francisco, in the State of California: Provided further, That section 18 of an Act making appropriations for the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes, approved August 8, 1917, is hereby repealed. [41 Stat. L. 1077.]

For sec. 18 of Act of Aug. 8, 1917, here expressly repealed, see 1918 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. 775.

SEC. 30. [Title of Act — “The Federal Water Power Act.”] That the short title of this Act shall be “The Federal Water Power Act.” [41 Stat. L. 1077.]

1918 Supp., p. 25, sec. 12.

Loan secured by first mortgage as affected by state law creating potentiality of encumbrances for seed grain and feed.—Under the provisions of the Federal Farm Loan Act, a federal land bank has authority to make a loan secured by a first mortgage on farm land in North Dakota, if at the date when the mortgage is executed there is no other actual lien or encumbrance then in existence, notwithstanding the Seed and Feed Bonding Act of North Dakota creates as to all farm lands in the state a potentiality of encumbrances for seed grain and feed which may displace the lien of a first mortgage. It clearly lies within the discretion of the Farm Loan Board, however, to refuse to approve such classes of first liens on farm lands as it may deem undesirable security for loans by reason of the potentiality of accrual of liens under the statute in question or otherwise. (1918) 31 Op. Atty-Gen. 605, wherein it was said:

"The effect of the statute in question is in substance to make it possible for any owner of farm land in North Dakota at any time after giving a first mortgage to bring into existence by his voluntary action a lien which by virtue of the statute will take precedence over the mortgage which he has previously executed. In other words, the statute creates as to all farm lands in the state a potentiality of encumbrance which may displace the lien of a first mortgage. Such a potentiality, however, is not uncommon in the legislation of the various states of the Union. Thus in Oklahoma (section 7606 of the Revised Laws of Oklahoma, 1910) provision is made whereby any owner of real estate in any county in which a permanent highway is proposed to be constructed may contribute a sum which by his written agreement may be divided into ten annual instalments and assessed on his real estate annually and collected in the same manner as taxes; and it is provided that after the filing of the pledge of contribution and its acceptance by the board of county commissioners 'the same shall become and be a lien upon said property with all the effect of any tax that may be levied against the same;' so also in Florida (section 2208 of the Compiled Laws of Florida, 1914) persons loaning money or advancing goods or merchandise to aid another in the business of planting, farming, timber getting, etc., acquire a lien on the crops, products, and lumber produced 'through the assistance of said loan or advances,' which lien is a 'statutory lien of prior dignity to all encumbrances' excepting laborers' and landlords' liens. In both of these instances the Act which brings the lien into being may be a voluntary act of the mortgagor, performed subsequent to the execution by him of a first mortgage. I am of opinion that such a potentiality does not prevent a first mortgage from being a 'first lien' within the meaning of the Federal Farm Loan Act, if at the date when the mortgage is executed there is no other actual lien or encumbrance then in existence. If, therefore, at the time when the mortgage on North Dakota farm lands is executed, the lien shall not have actually accrued under the terms of the statute, and if there is no other existing encumbrance, such mortgage would, in my opinion, constitute a 'first lien' when made, notwithstanding the possibility of its subsequent displacement, in case the landowner should subsequently act in such manner as to give rise to the lien provided for by the statute. Being such a 'first lien,' the federal land bank would have authority to make a loan to the person who tenders such mortgage as security."

Validity of contract pertaining to sale of farm loan bonds.—A contract between the Federal Farm Loan Board and certain investment houses, in stipulating that all issues of bonds of the federal land banks for a period of six months from June 1, 1917, should bear interest at the rate of $4\frac{1}{2}$ per cent, was not in conflict with the second subsection of this section, which provides that farm land mortgages shall carry "a charge on the loan at a rate not exceeding the interest rate in the last series of farm loan bonds issued by the land bank making the loan." So the provision of a contract to the effect that certain bonds issued by the federal land banks and not disposed of to investment houses should be sold by the issuing banks at the fixed price of $101\frac{1}{2}$ was within the purview of the powers conferred by the Federal Farm Loan Act. (1917) 31 Op. Att-Gen. 122.

1918 Supp., p. 28, sec. 14.

Loans to corporations.—Joint-stock land banks are not permitted to make loans either through national farm loan associations or through agents except to natural persons and cannot therefore lend to corporations. (1919) 31 Op. Atty-Gen. 494, wherein it was said:

"It results from the facts that loans by federal land banks through national farm loan associations can be made only to members of such associations and that corporations cannot become such members, that federal land banks cannot loan to corporations through national farm loan associations. Federal land banks are authorized to loan otherwise than through national farm loan associations only under the circumstances indicated by section 15, which provides that loans may be made through agents when it shall appear that national farm loan organizations are not likely, because of peculiar local conditions, to be formed in any given locality. But in the second paragraph of section 15 it is provided that loans made through agents 'shall be subject to the same conditions and restrictions as if the same were made through national farm loan associations.' I see no reason for interpreting the words 'conditions and restrictions' so as to exclude from their meaning the limitation running deeply into the structure and intention of the statute upon the character of the person to whom loans may be made. I come more quickly to this conclusion, because the provisions authorizing loans through agents were designed to meet special situations in which, because of peculiar local conditions, the normal method of making loans through national farm loan associations was impractical, and not to supply an ordinary alternative to that method of extending credit."

1918 Supp., p. 33, sec. 21.

Certificate signed by Farm Loan Commissioner.—Under the provision of this section which requires every farm loan bond to contain a certificate signed by the Farm Loan Commissioner, the certificate may be signed by an engraved facsimile signature of the Farm Loan Commissioner. (1917) 31 Op. Atty-Gen. 146, wherein it was said:

"The requirement of the act is met if the signature of the Farm Loan Commissioner be written, stamped or engraved on the bond under circumstances which make it his own conscious and deliberate act. If he were accustomed to sign his name by a stamp rather than with pen and ink there can be no question that he might authorize this stamp to be affixed in his presence by another person in his behalf. Upon the same principle of physical agency he may authorize the Director of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing from time to time to affix his signature by engraving to certificates upon bonds identified by number or other description, so that the act of the director would be in effect the act of the commissioner himself. It is enough that the signature shall have been affixed by direction of the Farm Loan Commissioner; that he shall have adopted it as his own; and that he shall have satisfied himself before the bonds have finally issued that the certificate so signed is true in point of fact."

1918 Supp., p. 36, sec. 26.

Constitutionality of provision relating to first mortgage and farm loan bonds.—That portion of this section which exempts first mortgages executed to federal land banks and farm loan bonds from state, municipal, and local taxation, is constitutional. (1917) 31 Op. Atty-Gen. 103, wherein it was said:

"The question, therefore, is whether a state tax upon the bonds and first mortgages contemplated by the Federal Farm Loan Act is a tax upon the operations of the system created by the act so that such a tax may hamper it in its efficient and successful operation; or, looking at it more narrowly, whether the above question is of sufficient doubt to make the declaration of Congress that such a tax would hamper the operations of the system conclusive upon the courts. I do not deem it necessary to analyze the act in detail. It is sufficient to say that the mortgages and farm loan bonds are of the very essence of the system created by it. The original capital of the federal land bank is to be loaned, through the agency of national farm loan associations, to bona fide cultivators of the soil on first mortgages on farm lands. When a sufficient amount in such mortgages has accumulated, they are to be turned over to a 'registrar' appointed by the farm loan board, and, with the approval of that board, farm loan bonds are issued by the land bank and sold. With the proceeds further loans are made on mortgages, which mortgages in their turn become the basis for an additional issue of bonds. This continuous flow and reflow of mortgages and bonds constitute the prime function of the whole system.

"A tax upon these bonds and mortgages would, therefore, be a tax upon the most important operations of the system, and might hamper it to so great an extent as to render it unsuccessful. In other words, it might be found impossible to raise capital by means of the bonds, and it might be found impossible to loan money on the mortgages at the reasonable rate of interest desired, if these two fundamental instrumentalities were taxed by the states. At any rate, Congress might well think so, and its declaration upon the subject is conclusive."

ALASKA

Vol. I, p. 301, sec. 2. [First ed., vol. X, p. 27.]

Mandamus to compel approval of application for patent.—The refusal of the Secretary of the Interior and the Commissioner of the General Land Office to approve and pass to patent applications for certain Alaska coal claims will not be controlled by mandamus, where such action was taken after a painstaking consideration and review of the evidence, and a determination of its probative strength, the deduction being that what was done was for prospecting purposes merely, and did not satisfy the statutory requirements, which contemplated, they decided, as the basis of a valid location, the opening and developing of a producing mine. Alaska Smokeless Coal Co. v. Lane, (1919) 250 U. S. 549, 40 S. Ct. 33, 64 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1917) 46 App. Cas. (D. C.) 443.

Vol. I, p. 325. [Act of March 3, 1903.] [First ed., vol. I, p. 25.]

Entry of soldier as limited to one hundred and sixty acres.—The prohibition in this act extending the homestead laws to Alaska, that not more than 160 acres of land shall be entered in a single body by means of soldiers' additional homestead rights, may not be evaded by a mere resort to two entries by the same person for two tracts separately surveyed, but contiguous to the extent of having a common boundary one-half mile in length, each containing 160 acres or less. U. S. v. Poland, (1920) 251 U. S. 221, 40 S. Ct. 127, 64 U. S. (L. ed.) — (reversing C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1916) 231 Fed. 810, 145 C. C. A. 630), wherein the court said:

"In approaching the consideration of the provision whose meaning and purpose are in question it is well to recall what soldiers' additional homestead rights are and what use could be made of them outside Alaska when the provision was adopted. They are rights to enter and acquire unappropriated non-mineral public land without settlement, residence, improvement, or cultivation, and without payment of any purchase price. They are not personal to the original beneficiaries, but are transferable at will, and the number that may be assigned to the same person is not limited. A single right is always for less, and generally much less, than one hundred and sixty acres, but rights aggregating many times that number of acres may be and often are held by a single assignee. When the provision was adopted there were almost no restrictions upon the use of such rights outside of Alaska. Indeed, the only restriction of any moment was one, uniformly respected, preventing the inclusion of more than one hundred and sixty acres in a single entry. But the number of such entries that might be made by the same person was not restricted, nor was there any limitation upon the amount of land in a single body that might be entered in that way. Thus an assignee having rights aggregating six hundred and forty acres could use them in entering that amount of land in a compact body one mile square, if only he did so through four entries of one hundred and sixty acres each. And, if he had rights the aggregate of which was sufficient, he could in a like way enter a body of land three miles square or even an entire township. See R. S. secs. 2289, 2304, 2306 [8 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 543, 586, 588]; Webster v. Luther, 163 U. S. 331, 16 Sup. Ct. 963, 41 L. Ed. 179; Diamond Coal Co. v. United States, 233 U. S. 236, 243, 34 Sup. Ct. 507, 58 L. Ed. 936; Robinson v. Lundrigan, 227 U. S. 173, 178, 179, 33 Sup. Ct. 255, 57 L. Ed. 468; 3 Land Dec. 472; Edgar Boice, 29 Land Dec. 599, and Edgar O'Keefe, Id. 643; 30 Land Dec. 285; 31 Land Dec. 441; 32 Land Dec. 418; Ole B. Olsen, 33 Land Dec. 225; 45 Land Dec. 236, par. 3; General Circular of 1904, pp. 11, 26-28.

"With this understanding of the circumstances in which the provision was incorporated into the Act of 1903 extending the homestead laws to Alaska, we think the meaning and purpose of the provision are manifest. It is in form a proviso and says 'no more than one hundred and sixty acres shall be entered in any single body' by means of soldiers' additional homestead rights. A purpose to prevent the use of these rights in entering a large acreage in a single body hardly could be more plainly expressed. There is nothing in the provision indicating that it is concerned merely with what may be taken by a single entry; and to construe it in that way would make it practically useless, for a large acreage in a single body still could be taken by merely resorting to two or more entries. Besides, the amount of land that could be taken by a single entry had long been limited to one hundred and sixty acres, and of course to say that no greater amount should be taken in a single body by a single entry would add nothing to that limitation. But the provision does not speak of a single entry but only of the amount that may be 'entered in any single body,' and if it is to have any real effect it must be construed according to the natural import of its words; that is to say, as limiting the amount of land in a compact or single body that may be entered by means of soldiers' additional homestead rights, whether the entering be by one or several entries. We conclude therefore that the provision, while leaving one who holds several rights free to exercise all of them and to make as many entries as his rights will sustain, prohibits him from using them to enter and acquire more than one hundred and sixty acres in a compact or single body."

Vol. I, p. 336, sec. 1. [First ed., 1916 Supp., p. 7.]

Authority of President to direct purchase of stock and bonds of privately owned railroad.—The President had plenary authority to direct the Secretary of the Interior to execute a contract for the purchase of all the certificates of stock and all the first mortgage bonds issued by the Alaska Northern Railway Co., such purchase being, in effect, an acquisition of said railroad line within the meaning of this Act. (1915) 31 Op. Atty.-Gen. 597.

Action against United States for malicious prosecution.—A suit for malicious prosecution may not be maintained against a railroad which has been purchased by the United States under the provisions of this Act, for the United States cannot be sued for a tort, nor can a judgment creditor in such an action interfere with its property by seizing it on execution. Ballaine v. Alaska Northern R. Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1919) 259 Fed. 183, 170 C. C. A. 251, 8 A. L. R. 990.

1918 Supp., p. 51, sec. 1. [Intoxicating liquors, etc.]

Seizure of liquors en route from Alaska to California.—In Northern Commercial Co. v. Brenneman, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1919) 259

Fed. 514, 171 C. C. A. 10, intoxicating liquors en route from Alaska to California after January 1, 1918, but which were still in Alaska, were held to be liable to seizure by government officers under the provisions of this Act. The court said:

"As has been shown, by its first section it is expressly declared, among other things, that on and after the 1st day of January, 1918, it shall be unlawful for any person, company, or corporation, his, its, or their agents, etc., to have in his, its, or their possession in Alaska any intoxicating liquor, or to transport or otherwise dispose of the same, except under conditions not here applicable, and by section 14 that it shall be unlawful for any person to ship, transport, deliver, receive, or have in his possession any such liquor (with certain exceptions also inapplicable to the present case), with the further provision in section 23 that no property right of any kind shall exist in alcoholic liquors or beverages illegally received, possessed, or stored, as provided in and by that act, and that in all such cases such liquors are forfeited to the United States and subject to seizure and destruction.

"In view of those clear and unmistakable provisions of the statute, we are unable to sustain the contention of the appellant that the court was in error in sustaining the demurrer to the complaint."

ALIENS

Vol. I, p. 364, sec. 4067. [First ed., vol. I, p. 435.]

Review on habeas corpus.—The authority of the President under this section to promulgate regulations by proclamation or public act is plenary and not reviewable, but where no hearing is provided for after the arrest of a person alleged to be an alien enemy, the question whether he is such may be reviewed on habeas corpus. Ex p. Gilroy, (S. D. N. Y. 1919) 257 Fed. 110.

Burden of proof.—A person arrested under this section as an alien has the burden of showing that he is under illegal restraint, and, on habeas corpus, he must satisfy the court that he is not a native, citizen, denizen, or subject of the hostile nation or government. Ex p. Risse, (S. D. N. Y. 1919) 257 Fed. 102; Ex p. Gilroy, (S. D. N. Y. 1919) 257 Fed. 110.

Decision of draft board regarding citizenship as binding on reviewing court.—The decision of a local board under the Selective Service Law (see vol. IX, p. 1136) that a registrant is an American citizen, is an adjudication binding on the court on a review of the action of the executive authorities under this section in so far as the same facts are before it as were before the local board. Ex p. Gilroy, (S. D. N. Y. 1919) 257 Fed. 110, wherein it was said:

"With all the facts, therefore, before the local and district boards, those responsible bodies decided, in effect, upon the assumption of Alexander's citizenship, that there was nothing which he had done to forfeit that citizenship. We, therefore, have the unusual situation of a man being inducted into the army because he is a citizen of the United States, serving therein so as to gain an honorable discharge, and then being arrested and detained because he is an alien enemy, and one of the grounds for detention being that he had so acted in his relation to a foreign enemy government as to lose his American citizenship, and that ground having been definitely rejected by the executive authorities charged by statute, inter alia, with the duty of determining this very point.

"Whether the determination of the local and district boards is in the first place an adjudication, and, secondly, a binding adjudication, is a novel question. Under section 4067, the executive is empowered to apprehend and detain alien enemies. Under the Selective Service Law the executive, in raising an army from civil life, is empowered to appoint boards, who must determine, among other things, whether a person is or is not an alien enemy.

"In so far as concerns the relation of the United States to an individual as to citizenship status for war purposes, I am of opinion that the decision of the local board, affirmed by the district board, is an adjudication. In so far as the same facts are before the local board as are before the court on a review of the action of the executive authorities under section 4067, I am of opinion that the adjudication is binding. Of course, there are no parties, but the determination is the same in both cases, and, although by different agencies of the executive, it is upon the same question; i. e., whether a person has shown that he is not an alien enemy subject or citizen."

ANIMALS

Vol. I, p. 377, sec. 1. [First ed., 1909 Supp., p. 43.]

Connecting carrier.—In U. S. v. Cleveland, etc., R. Co., (N. D. Ohio 1920) 202 Fed. 775, it appeared that the defendant as to three shipments merely permitted a section of its track to be used, and in two cases merely switched the shipment over its line from the New York Central Railroad Company's line to the Union Stockyards, with which the New York Central had a contract to feed, water, and rest cattle in compliance with this law. In holding that such facts constituted a good defense to a prosecution for a violation of this section, the court said: "The defendant, as well as the Stockyards Company, was an agency availed of by the New York Central Railroad Company to comply with the law. Its lines did not form any part of the line of road over which the cattle were to be conveyed from one state to another. If the failure of the Stockyards Company to perform the labor of unloading the stock with due promptness is a matter of importance, this failure must be imputed, not to the defendant, but to the New York Central, whose agency it was, and on which the duty rests to comply with the law."

Violation of Act as negligence.—Violation of the Act is evidence of negligence in an action by the shipper for damages to a shipment of mules and horses which ate off each other's manes and tails in transit, being kept forty hours without food. Hines v. Morgan, (Ark. 1920) 218 S. W. 672.

Vol. I, p. 386, sec. 2. [First ed., 1909 Supp., p. 44.]

Nature of duty.—The duty imposed by this section is a unitary one, and a shipper by partially feeding, without governmental inspection, cattle at other times and places than at the end of the 28-hour transit, cannot relieve the railroad from the duty of providing proper feed at the rest pens at that time. Hence, where the railroad pursuant to this duty furnishes feed to the cattle in the rest pens, the shipper is liable therefor. It may not, however, recover for such portion of the feed as it placed in the cars for the cattle instead of in the rest pens. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Swift, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1919) 258 Fed. 289, 169 C. C. A. 305. Regarding the nature of the duty imposed by this section, the court said:

"The law gives the owner and shipper of cattle the option of performing the statutory duty of feeding his cattle in transit, but if he does not assume that statutory duty the act compels the railroad to perform it. Manifestly, the statute does not contemplate a divided, dual duty, but a single, unitary one, which the owner primarily has the right to perform; or, if he does not assume the duty, the railroad must. To hold the duty was a divisible one would result, not only in neglect of the cattle, but in the absence of that governmental inspection of the cattle in transit which safeguards them from unnecessary suffering. From this it follows that if the duty is a unitary one, if the shipper does not assume that duty in its entirety, and if it is cast on the railroad, the shipper cannot hamper the railroad with conditions, or by any voluntary part performance on its part add to or detract from the railroad's obligation to perform the statutory duty in its entirety. Now, the statute compels the railroad, after a transit of 28 hours, to unload the cattle 'in a humane manner, into properly equipped pens for rest, water, and feeding, for . . . at least five consecutive hours,' and that 'the animals so unloaded shall be properly fed and watered during such rest.' In carrying out that statutory requirement, the railroad has provided at Pittsburgh, at the terminus of a run which is approximately 28 hours from the great cattle shipping point of Chicago, suitable pens, with facilities for rest, water, and feed. The government has its inspectors at Pittsburgh, to see that the provisions of the law are complied with, and, as we have noted, the unquestioned fact is that a 250-pound feed given at Pittsburgh would comply with the statute and fit the cattle for the next long-hour run of the journey east. The railroad having thus provided water, food, and rest facilities at Pittsburgh, and the proper amount of food for the cattle at that point being 250 pounds, and the cattle owner not having exercised his primary right of assuming the duty in its entirety, it inevitably follows, in our judgment, that no voluntary act of the shipper in partially feeding, without governmental inspection, the cattle at other times and places can lessen the duty of the railroad to provide proper food at the rest pens at the end of the 28-hour transit. It follows, therefore, that when Swift & Co., who had volunteered to place 150 pounds of food in the cars before the cattle started from Chicago, sought to prevent the railroad from furnishing more than 100 pounds of food to the cattle at the end of the 28-hour run in Pittsburgh, this was an unwarranted effort to prevent the railroad from performing its full statutory unitary duty at Pittsburgh."

ARTICLES FOR THE GOVERNMENT OF THE NAVY

Vol. I, p. 418, sec. 1624. [First ed., vol. I, p. 418.]

Discharge from naval service as preventing trial by court-martial.—A person discharged from the naval service before proceedings are instituted against him for violations of the Articles for the Government of the Navy, excepting Article 14, cannot thereafter be brought to trial before a court-martial for such violations, though committed while he was in the service. (1919) 31 Op. Atty-Gen. 521.

Vol. I, p. 423, art. 8, par. thirteenth. [First ed., vol. I, p. 463.]

Receiving gold, silver or jewels as creating contract obligation.—The mere exercise by the commanding officer of a naval vessel of his discretion under this article to receive gold, silver or jewels on board for the protection of private rights, does not create a contract obligation on the part of the United States, enforceable in the court of claims, to preserve and return the deposit when demanded; nor will such contract be implied from the provision of the Navy Regulations, sec. 1020, which but comprehensively recognizes that compensation due for services rendered as the result of the exercise of the discretion of the officer to permit the articles in question to be taken on board should be applied, not for the benefit of the United States in virtue of any contract relation with the subject, but for the benefit of the officers and men designated in the proportions stated in the regulations. Cartas v. U. S., (1919) 250 U. S. 545, 40 S. Ct. 42, 64 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1913) 48 Ct. Cl. 161.

BAIL AND RECOGNIZANCES

Vol. I, p. 492, sec. 1020. [First ed., vol. I, p. 523.]

Discretion of the court.—The remission of the penalty of a forfeited recognizance is under the provisions of this section within the discretion of the trial judge. Hence, where defendants in a criminal prosecution fail to appear when called for trial, and the government is subjected to considerable expense by their failure, a finding by the trial judge that public justice required that the penalty of the forfeiture be enforced is within his discretion and will not be disturbed by an appellate court on a writ of error. U. S. v. Fidelity, etc., Co., (C. C. A.

3d Cir. 1919) 258 Fed. 444, 169 C. C. A. 460.

Wilful default.—In U. S. v. Jacobson, (E. D. Pa. 1919) 257 Fed. 760, it appeared that the defendant was indicted for the offense of keeping a house of ill fame within one of the military districts; that she was financed in such undertaking by unknown parties, who provided her bail on her arrest, and that she failed to appear for trial, thereby causing the United States considerable expense. It was held that under the evidence her default must be regarded as wilful and that the forfeiture of the bail would not be remitted under this section.

BANKRUPTCY

Vol. I, p. 504. [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 464.]

Suspension of state insolvency laws—In general.—To same effect as original annotation, see In re Brinn, (N. D. Ga. 1919) 262 Fed. 527.

What state laws are superseded.—"A statute in order to be such an insolvency law as is suspended by the federal Bankruptcy Law must provide for the discharge of the debtor." Greene v. Rice, (1919) 32 Idaho 504, 186 Pac. 249, holding further that an act is not an insolvency law because it contains a provision that in case of an attachment "any creditor of the defendant, who, within sixty days after the first posting and publication of such notice shall commence and prosecute to final judgment his action for his claim against the defendant, shall share pro rata with the attaching creditor in the proceeds of defendant's property where there is not sufficient to pay all judgments in full against him."

Raising question.—The contention that a state insolvency law is superseded by the federal Bankruptcy Act cannot be raised for the first time on a motion for a rehearing in the appellate court. Driver v. Carey, (Ark. 1920) 220 S. W. 667.

Vol. I, p. 511, sec. 1a (15). [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 465.]

Inability to meet obligations.—A debtor is insolvent when the aggregate of his property shall not, at a fair valuation, be sufficient in amount to pay his debts (3 R. C. L. p. 275, § 98), and not when he is unable to meet his obligations as they mature in the ordinary course of business. Schuetz v. Swank, (1920) 265 Pa. St. 576, 109 Atl. 531.

Evidence of facts constituting insolvency.—"Direct and detailed evidence of the facts constituting insolvency is not essential. Owing to its nature, insolvency is not always susceptible of direct proof. It may, and in many cases must, be proved by the proof of other facts, from which the ultimate fact of insolvency may be presumed or inferred." Rosenberg v. Semple, (C. C. A. 3rd Cir. 1919) 257 Fed. 72, 168 C. C. A. 284.

Who are secured creditors.—Creditors who have furnished materials to a bankrupt and who have served attested accounts on the owners, have recorded their claims, and are also protected by surety bonds under the provisions of state statutes, are secured creditors within the meaning of this section. In re Ferrand, (E. D. La. 1920) 263 Fed. 908.

Right to exercise original jurisdiction.—To same effect as original annotation, see In re Vadner, (D. C. Nev. 1918) 259 Fed. 614, holding that the jurisdiction of the bankruptcy court is exclusive but that it does not extend to all suits, at law or in equity, affecting a bankrupt's estate.

Equitable jurisdiction.—To same effect as original annotation, see Martin v. Oliver, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 260 Fed. 89, 171 C. C. A. 125; In re De Ray, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1919) 260 Fed. 732, 171 C. C. A. 470, holding that a bankruptcy court has jurisdiction to set aside an allowance for services and expenses of an attorney of a trustee, when it satisfactorily appears that the allowance was procured through fraud.

Under amendment of 1910.—A bill in equity by a trustee in bankruptcy to recover property conveyed in fraud of the Bankruptcy Act may be entertained by the district court, and since the amendment of the Bankruptcy Act by the Act of June 25, 1910 (1 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 504, note) the bankruptcy court has jurisdiction of a suit to recover a preference regardless of the amount involved or the citizenship of the parties. Gooch v. Stone, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1919) 257 Fed. 631, 168 C. C. A. 581.

The equity rules of the Supreme Court are not rules of court affecting the administrative work of bankruptcy. In re Hughes, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 262 Fed. 500.

Election of directors of corporation to choose bankruptcy, instead of state, court for winding up of affairs.—The fact that the directors of a corporation choose a bankruptcy court in which to wind up its affairs in preference to having a state court appoint a receiver for it, is not a fraud, and does not warrant the bankruptcy court in refusing jurisdiction. In re Dressler Producing Corp., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 262 Fed. 257.

Vol. I, p. 521, sec. 2 (2). [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 472.]

Jurisdiction of court.—Where a creditor submits his claims to the bankruptcy court and consents to a determination of their validity by the court, he is bound by its decision, and if ordered to repay money paid to him on the claims, he must do so. Commercial Security Co. v. Holcombe, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1920) 262 Fed. 657.

Vol. I, p. 522, sec. 2 (3). [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 472.]

Receiver's powers and duties in general.—Right to property consigned to bankrupt.—

A receiver in bankruptcy has the right to take property consigned to the bankrupt from a carrier on its arrival at its destination, and such taking ends the right of stoppage in transitu by the consignor. In re Arctic Stores, (D. C. N. J. 1919) 258 Fed. 688, wherein it was said: "During the time intervening between the adjudication and the qualification of the appointed trustee, the title, while nominally in the name of the bankrupt, was in custodia legis, awaiting administration. The receiver from his appointment was not only the proper person, but the only person, until the appointment and qualification of the trustee, who could legally take possession of this pulp and the other property of the bankrupt. He might properly be held to be the 'legal successor in interest of the buyer,' within the meaning of the New Jersey Uniform Sale of Goods Act, sec. 70, and whose taking property from a carrier ends the transit under section 58 of that act. However, and regardless whether that be so, the receiver's conduct in thus taking the pulp must be treated as in the due administration of the bankruptcy law and on behalf of the trustee to be appointed.

"Upon such appointment the trustee's right to the possession of such pulp would relate back to the time the receiver took it over.

"To accept petitioner's contention that there was no one between the time of adjudication and the qualification of the trustee to do any act either on behalf of the bankrupt, who by the adjudication was shorn of all power to do anything in respect to the property but recently subject to its dominion, or of the trustee, who could not be appointed for at least 11 days, and might not be for several months, after the adjudication, is to hold that there is a hiatus in the administration of bankruptcy estates during which certain creditors might secure a preference over other creditors, a bare statement of which is sufficient to reject such contention.

"That the receiver in bankruptcy has the right to take property from a carrier on its arrival at its destination, and that such taking ends the right of stoppage in transitu, has been held by the following cases: In re Allen (D. C. M. D. Pa.) 178 Fed. 879, 24 Am. Bankr. Rep. 574; In re White (D. C. M. D. Pa.) 205 Fed. 393, 29 Am. Bankr. Rep. 358. This was also the view of District Judge Chatfield in Re Darlington Co. (D. C. E. D. N. Y.) 163 Fed. 385, 20 Am. Bankr. Rep. 800. In this connection see also Conyers v. Ennis, 6 Fed. Cas. No. 3,149, and Millard v. Webster, 54 Conn. 415, 8 Atl. 470.

"From the foregoing it follows that whether the right of stoppage in transitu be held to have ended on the arrival of the car at its billed destination, or upon the removal of its contents by the receiver, the petitioner's claim that it is exclusively entitled to the proceeds of the sale of the pulp must be denied, as its notice to stop delivery was not given until after the last of these two acts had taken place."

Vacation of order appointing receiver on application of state receiver.—Where directors of a corporation, notwithstanding the issuance of an injunction by a state court enjoining them from exercising any of the privileges and franchises of the corporation and appointing a receiver, file a voluntary petition in bankruptcy in behalf of the corporation, and the referee in bankruptcy also appoints a receiver, and it is represented that the appointment of the federal receiver is contrary to the general practice of the federal courts in the district of his appointment, the receiver appointed by the state court will be directed to apply to the judges of the federal court to vacate the order appointing the receiver, and will be directed until such application can be made to retain control of the assets. Cavagnaro v. Indian Tire, etc., Co., (1919) 90 N. J. Eq. 532, 107 Atl. 643.

Vol. I, p. 529, sec. 2 (7). [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 476.]

Recovery of concealed property after bankrupt's discharge.—Where a bankrupt's estate is closed without a final meeting of his creditors on ten days' notice as required by sections 55f and 58 of the Bankruptcy Act, such closing is void and the estate remains open. Accordingly, where after the bankrupt's discharge it is discovered that he has concealed assets from his trustee, the latter may recover them, although because of lapse of time the court has no longer power to revoke the discharge and criminal prosecution against the bankrupt for such concealment is barred. In re Levy, (E. D. Pa. 1919) 261 Fed. 432, wherein the court said:

"The question whether the trustee should have leave to file an amended petition before the referee depends upon whether, the estate never having been technically closed, the referee, after the bankrupt's discharge, has jurisdiction in a summary proceeding to make an order upon the bankrupt or upon the Standard Jobbing Company to pay over the sums in their possession or control belonging to the bankrupt estate, for it would be of no avail otherwise to proceed further.

"It must be determined therefore whether the discharge of the bankrupt has any other effect than that included within the definition of section 1, or that declared by section 17 of the Bankruptcy Act. The definition in section 1 (12) is:

"'Discharge' shall mean the release of a bankrupt from all of his debts which are provable in bankruptcy, except such as are excepted by this act."

"Section 17, as amended March 2, 1917 (39 Stat. L. 999, c. 1) provides that a discharge in bankruptcy shall release a bankrupt from all of his provable debts, except such as are therein mentioned. Nowhere in the Bankruptcy Act is there any express limitation upon the power of the court to make and enforce an order upon a bankrupt to pay over money or to turn over other assets which are in his possession or control, while the estate remains open.

"For fraudulent concealment of assets from the trustee before discharge, he is subject to the penalty of refusal of his discharge and, after discharge, to revocation of the discharge if applied for within one year (section 15). This period had elapsed before the petition to reopen the estate was filed and presumably before the trustee had knowledge of the alleged concealment.

"Section 29b (1) prescribes punishment by imprisonment for concealing while a bankrupt or after his discharge from his trustee any of the property belonging to his estate in bankruptcy subject to the limitation in paragraph (d), by which criminal proceedings are barred.

"Does the fact that the bankrupt has been discharged from his debts, and that the court has no longer power to revoke the discharge, and that criminal prosecution is barred, exempt him from the jurisdiction of the court through summary proceedings to order him to pay over money in his possession or within his control which is part of his estate in bankruptcy?

"On adjudication, title to the bankrupt's property became vested in the trustee (sections 21e, 70), with actual or constructive possession, and placed in the custody of the bankruptcy court, and the court may put the trustee in actual possession, where possession is withheld by the bankrupt or one not claiming adversely to him. This proposition is decisively settled in Mueller v. Nugent, 184 U. S. 1, 22 Sup. Ct. 269, 46 L. Ed. 405. In that case the order was made against Nugent upon the ground that the property was in his possession as the bankrupt's agent. If the bankrupt had already been discharged, could Nugent have pleaded the discharge as a bar to the jurisdiction of the court to compel him to surrender property the title to which was by law vested in, and which was in constructive possession of, the trustee, and in the custody of the bankruptcy court? Manifestly not, unless title in the trustee lapses upon the discharge of the bankrupt. If title continues in the trustee, then, while the estate is still open, jurisdiction of the court to cause the estates of bankrupts to be collected, and to determine controversies relating thereto (section 2 [7]), is not to be rendered nugatory through the concealment by the bankrupt of his property, even though he be successful in continuing its concealment until by limitation of law he is freed of indebtedness to creditors and immune from criminal prosecution. He does not hold concealed property as a debt from which his discharge has freed him, but holds it without right against the trustee having title not divested by the bankrupt's discharge."

Petition for payment of concealed assets.

—A petition by a trustee in bankruptcy for an order compelling the bankrupt to pay to him a certain amount of money alleged to have been concealed, is insufficient when unsupported by any averment or proof of possession or control of the money by the bankrupt. In re Levy, (E. D. Pa. 1919) 259 Fed. 316.

Vol. I, p. 531, sec. 2 (8). [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 476.]

Reopening of estate—Notice to bankrupt.—Where an order allowing the reopening of a bankrupt estate is limited to distribution purposes, it in no way affects the bankrupt and may be made without notice to him. In re Levy, (E. D. Pa. 1919) 259 Fed. 314.

Similarly, a restraining order issued with an order to reopen a bankrupt estate may be made without notice to the bankrupt, where it is apparent that he has no interest in assets of the estate alleged to be unadministered. In re Levy, (E. D. Pa. 1919) 259 Fed. 314. In this case, in denying a motion to vacate the restraining order, the court said: "The only possible interest, however, which a bankrupt would have in unadministered assets, is by virtue of his claim to his exemption, or to deny the assets in question to be the assets of the bankrupt estate, by setting up that the assets are property acquired by the bankrupt after his discharge, or for some other reason. No ground for the vacation or modification of the restraining order is advanced, except that it was made without notice to the bankrupt. The averment of the truth of this fact is itself denied. We need make no findings upon this point, however, as on the face of the proceeding the bankrupt has no interest in the assets of the bankruptcy estate. On the face of the proceedings the property to be affected belongs to the estate, and not only does the bankrupt not aver an interest, but it is asserted in the answer, the facts set up in which are admitted for the purposes of this argument, that he has specifically withdrawn from and repudiated all claims to an ownership interest."

Who may apply for reopening.—Creditors of a bankrupt, who have proved claims against his estate, may apply for a reopening of it on the ground that unadministered assets of the estate have been discovered. In re Levy, (E. D. Pa. 1919) 259 Fed. 314. In denying a motion to vacate the order permitting the reopening, the court said: "The finding upon which the order was predicated was that unadministered assets of the estate had come to light. The petition to vacate is made on behalf of the bankrupt. He was granted his discharge. The prayer of his petition is based upon the averments that the order was made without notice to him, and that it was made upon the petition of persons not creditors of the estate. The latter averment is in turn based upon the distinction that, although they were at one time creditors of the bankrupt, having not only provable but proved claims, yet as the bankrupt had been granted his discharge he had ceased to be a debtor, and ex vi termini they had ceased to be creditors. It is, of course, not denied that they have an interest in the assets of the bankrupt estate, but the distinction made is fortified by the further distinction that they have such interest qua owners, but not qua creditors. The latter distinction may be accepted without in any way carrying the consequence of a denial of the right of such creditors to apply for the reopening of the case. The attempt to distinguish between the status of a creditor before and after discharge may be met with the comment that they are creditors, within the meaning of and as defined in the bankruptcy statute, and with the further comment that the distinction sought to be made is for present purposes of no practical value."

Procedure on reopening.—Where a bankrupt estate is reopened because of an alleged concealment of assets of the estate by the bankrupt, and the matter is referred to a referee, the power of the referee is confined to such procedure as will enable the trustee to collect and distribute unadministered assets. This includes authority to proceed by plenary suit but not by summary order upon the bankrupt. In re Levy, (E. D. Pa. 1919) 259 Fed. 314.

Vol. I, p. 535, sec. 2 (13). [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 479.]

Violation of restraining order as contempt.—Where after the filing of a petition in bankruptcy, the bankruptcy court issues an order restraining the sale of certain property of the bankrupt under an execution on a judgment by a state court, a sale of such property thereafter is a contempt, although the property has been set aside to the bankrupt as exempt and in the judgment he has waived his right to exemption. In re Braun, (M. D. Pa. 1919) 259 Fed. 309.

Vol. I, p. 535, sec. 2 (15). [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 479.]

Power to vacate orders.—To same effect as original annotation, see In re De Ray, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1919) 260 Fed. 732, 171 C. C. A. 470, holding that an order allowing a claim for compensation to the attorney of a trustee in bankruptcy might be vacated before the closing of the estate.

Vol. I, p. 538, sec. 2 (20). [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 480.]

Bill to enjoin creditors not appearing in bankruptcy proceedings from suing in another court for fraudulent representations.—A decree in bankruptcy proceedings which confirmed a composition agreement by a bankrupt partnership, and provided that one of the partners, who asserted that he was but a special partner, should be released, upon compliance with the terms of such composition, from any further liability to the receiver of the estate, and dismissed petitions to have him declared liable as a general partner, only determines against everyone that his property shall not be administered in the bankruptcy proceedings, and does not give ancillary jurisdiction to the bankruptcy court of a bill to enjoin creditors who did not appear in the bankruptcy proceedings, assent to the composition, or attempt to prove a claim, from bringing suit against him in another Federal district court, based on grounds of fraudulent representations believed to be true until after such decree, although such suit can only be maintained on the theory that he is liable as a general partner. Poll v. McCabe, (1919) 250 U. S. 573, 40 S. Ct. 43, 64 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 512, 168 C. C. A. 18.

Absence of fraudulent intention—Transfer of exempt property.—Fraudulent intent cannot be predicated upon a transfer by a bankrupt of exempt property. Marine Nat. Bank v. Swigart, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1920) 262 Fed. 854.

Preferences in general.—To same effect as original annotation, see In re Jones, (N. D. N. Y. 1919) 259 Fed. 927.

Payment as preference—Payment of claims of stockholder.—Where the owner of the entire capital stock of a corporation transfers all of its assets to himself in payment of his claims against it, leaving other debts of the corporation unpaid, the transfer is a preference and is an act of bankruptcy within the meaning of this section. Boston West Africa Trading Co. v. Quaker City Morocco Co., (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1919) 261 Fed. 665, affirming (D. C. Mass. 1919) 255 Fed. 924.

Necessity of intent to prefer—Intent is that of debtor.—To same effect as original annotation, see In re Jones, (N. D. N. Y. 1919) 259 Fed. 927, wherein it was said: "It is immaterial in this proceeding whether or not the bank and Mrs. Bard knew Jones was insolvent, or whether they had reasonable cause to believe he was insolvent, and that his transactions would result in a preference. If Jones knew he was insolvent, and if he intended to prefer Mrs. Bard, he committed an act of bankruptcy."

II. APPOINTMENT OF RECEIVER OR TRUSTEE (p. 558)

The word "applied," as used in this section, does not mean "consented." Accordingly, where a bankrupt did not apply for the appointment of a receiver but merely consented to the application of his creditors for such an appointment, which was not made, he cannot be regarded as having committed an act of bankruptcy in violation of this paragraph. In re Big Pines Lumber Co., Inc., (S. D. Cal. 1919) 257 Fed. 141. The court said: "The petitioning creditors desire the court to hold that the word 'applied' means applied for or consented to the appointment of a receiver. The alleged bankrupt here did nothing in that case but consent to the appointment of a receiver. If Congress meant that if a person consented to the appointment of a receiver, it should be made an act of bankruptcy, it might easily have so stated. The cases relied upon by the creditors are cases wherein the application for a receiver was made on behalf of the bankrupt, or where the bankrupt actually petitioned for the appointment of a receiver."

What constitutes application for receiver.—The fact that a corporation in its answer to a bill of complaint asking for the appointment of a receiver, admits the allegations in the bill and joins in the application for the appointment of a receiver, is not tantamount to an application for a receiver under this section, where the allegations in the bill show that the corporation is solvent and that the application is made for the purpose of averting insolvency. In re Connecticut Brass, etc., Corp., (D. C. Conn. 1919) 257 Fed. 445, wherein, on motion to dismiss an involuntary petition in bankruptcy against a corporation based on the above fact, the court said:

"The argument of the petitioning creditors against the motion resolved itself into the proposition that, as the alleged bankrupt had joined in the application for the appointment of the receivers, and had admitted in its answer the allegations of the bill of complaint, such conduct is tantamount to applying for a receiver under the Bankruptcy Act, and numerous cases are cited to support this proposition.

"A further reason advanced against the granting of the motion is based on the claim that the allegations set forth in the involuntary petition, and quoted supra, are sufficient to bring the petitioners within the meaning of the Bankruptcy Act. We will dispose of these contentions in their order.

"In support of the first proposition counsel cite and rely upon the following cases: In re Spalding, 139 Fed. 244, 71 C. C. A. 370; In re Pickens Mfg. Co. (D. C.) 158 Fed. 894; In re Maplecroft Mills (D. C.) 218 Fed. 659; Exploration Mercantile Co. v.

Pacific Hardware & Steel Co., 177 Fed. 825, 101 C. C. A. 39; Doyle-Kidd Dry Goods Co. v. Sadler-Lusk Trading Co. (D. C.) 206 Fed. 813.

"An examination of all of these cases shows that the decisions there reached were based upon an allegation of insolvency, or it appeared that the person or corporation was insolvent, and for that reason joined in the application for the appointment of a receiver. None of the cases cited are cases involving an equitable receivership, where it appears on the face of the bill that the assets are in excess of liabilities. The cases cited and relied upon in support of the petitioning creditors' argument are not apposite to the case at bar.

"Here we have an equitable receivership, which is intended to avert insolvency. The allegations in the bill show, not insolvency, but solvency. It would be going too far to say that a solvent corporation, at least solvent so far as the record shows, committed an act of bankruptcy by applying for the appointment of a receiver, or joining in an application for the appointment of a receiver, simply because it had not the ready cash to meet all its obligations and immediate demands as they mature in the ordinary course of business, and because creditors were threatening attachments.

"The authorities are too clear and conclusive to discuss the question further, as the differentiation between the two sets of facts—i. e., solvency and insolvency—is so emphasized as to make it clear to him who reads. In re Douglas Coal & Coke Co. (D. C.) 131 Fed. 769; In re Wm. S. Butler & Co., 207 Fed. 705, 125 C. C. A. 223.

"The law governing this situation is settled. Nowhere is it more clearly stated than by Judge Hazel in Re Edward Ellsworth Co. (D. C.) 173 Fed. 699. On page 700 he said: 'The inquiry presented is whether the corporation proceeded against, by admitting the material allegations of the bill in the equity action and joining in the application for the appointment of receivers, can be held in a legal sense to have applied therefor pursuant to section 3a, subd. 4, of the Bankruptcy Act, . . . as amended by Act February 5, 1903, ch. 487, § 2, 32 Stat. L. 797. . . . 'If the company, while insolvent, had voluntarily brought an action to wind up its affairs for the benefit of its creditors, and had applied for the appointment of receivers to take charge of its property, the superior right of the bankruptcy court could not safely be questioned; but the interposition of an answer in an action brought by a contract creditor, admitting therein the truth of the allegations of the bill and joining in the prayer for relief, is not believed to be the equivalent of the term "being insolvent, applied for a receiver or trustee for its property." In the equity action the complainants applied for receivers on the ground that the Edward Ellsworth Company was unable to pay its debts as they matured, and that it would be to the advantage of creditors and stockholders to have its affairs wound up. Nowhere in the bill is it asserted that the corporation is insolvent, as that term is defined by section 1, subdivision 15, of the Bankruptcy Act. In fact the bill contains an affirmative allegation that the defendant is solvent. Such averments, together with the admission by the corporation of their truth and its consent to the appointment of receivers of its property, undoubtedly vested the Circuit Court, in view of the diversity of citizenship of the parties, with power and authority to act in the premises. In re Metropolitan Railway Receivership, 208 U. S. 90, 28 Sup. Ct. 219, 52 L. ed. 403.

"The second question raises a question simply of pleading. To allege that a corporation is insolvent is to plead a conclusion. Facts must be pleaded, not conclusions."

Insolvency essential—In general.—To same effect as original annotation, see In re Connecticut Brass, etc., Corp., (D. C. Conn. 1919) 257 Fed. 445.

Vol. I, p. 561, sec. 3a (5). [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 491.]

In general—Insolvency unnecessary.—To same effect as original annotation, see In re Dressler Producing Corp., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 262 Fed. 257, wherein it was said:

"A solvent corporation, as a person, may have its property distributed among its creditors in the manner provided by the Bankruptcy Act. Hanover Nat. Bank v. Moyses, 186 U. S. 181, 22 Sup. Ct. 857, 46 L. ed. 1113. The claim of the appellants, that at the time the directors admitted that the company was insolvent, and unable to meet its obligations as they matured and arose, they were without authority to so act, and that, therefore, such a consent is of no value in the bankruptcy proceedings, is without force, and is not a reason why the motion to dismiss the petition should be granted. If there is a question whether a fraud has been perpetrated, and the authority of the board of directors to sign the consent, which was filed in the voluntary proceedings in bankruptcy, is questioned, it is left open for trial by the order sought to be revised.

"We are of the opinion that the action of the board of directors here was justified upon the affidavits presented, and that the District Judge correctly disposed of the question presented in the court below. Matter of United Grocery Co. (D. C.) 239 Fed. 1016; Matter of Cohn (D. C.) 220 Fed. 956."

Admission by corporation—A letter by the clerk of a corporation to the corporation's creditors advising them that the only course open to them to secure payment of their claims is to bring involuntary proceedings in bankruptcy and that, if such proceedings are brought, the company will admit its insolvency, and its willingness to be adjudged bankrupt on that ground, is not such an unqualified admission of insolvency as is required by this section. Nor does the fact that the stockholders of the corporation subsequently ratify the action of the directors in authorizing the clerk to write such letter, make it an "unqualified admission." In re Standard Shipyard Co., (D. C. Me. 1920) 262 Fed. 522.

Necessity of insolvency.—"It has frequently been held that a creditor cannot intervene to oppose an adjudication under an ordinary voluntary petition in bankruptcy on the ground that the would-be bankrupt is insolvent. The act does not require that the bankrupt should be insolvent. A solvent person may have his property distributed among his creditors in the manner provided by statute, if he so desires. Hanover Nat. Bank v. Moyses, 186 U. S. 181, 22 Sup. Ct. 857, 46 L. ed. 1113, 8 Am. B. R. 1; In re Jehu (D. C. Iowa) 2 Am. B. R. 498, 94 Fed. 638; In re Ives (C. C. A. 6th Cir.) 7 Am. B. R. 692, 113 Fed. 911, 51 C. C. A. 541; In re Carleton (D. C. Mass.) 8 Am. B. R. 270, 115 Fed. 246; Collier on Bankruptcy, pp. 141, 840, 856.

"I am aware in the Carleton Case, supra, Judge Lowell states that in the District Court of Massachusetts, in an unreported case, it was held that a creditor may have an adjudication set aside, if the whole proceeding is a fraud on the act, and an abuse of process. Neither the facts nor the reasoning in that case are disclosed, so it is impossible to say how the rule was applied, or what embarrassment to a particular creditor occasioned by a voluntary bankruptcy proceeding was deemed sufficient to require a court to set aside an adjudication.

"If an insolvent person owing more than one debt files a voluntary petition after his property has been attached by one of his creditors, the latter undoubtedly is embarrassed, for otherwise he might have collected his claim in full; still it would be impossible to regard the proceeding as a fraud on the act. An unworthy motive for the exercise of a legal right is not sufficient to extinguish the right." In re Pyatt, (D. C. Nev. 1918) 257 Fed. 362.

"Any person, except a municipal, railroad, insurance, or banking corporation, is entitled to the benefits of the Bankruptcy Act as a voluntary bankrupt. If such a person owes debts, however small, he may file a petition. It is not necessary for him to allege or prove insolvency; and, furthermore, his petition cannot be opposed by his creditors." In re Vadner, (D. C. Nev. 1918) 259 Fed. 614.

Corporations—A public service corporation is included within the provisions of this section, and if actually bankrupt, its right to secure the benefits of the Bankruptcy Act is not impaired or defeated because it is exercised at the instance of another corporation which holds the majority of its stock. Holland v. Holland City Gas Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1919) 257 Fed. 679, 168 C. C. A. 629.

Power of directors when corporation in hands of receiver.—After the issuance of an injunction by a state court enjoining a corporation, its directors and officers, from exercising any of its privileges and franchises, directors who meet and pass a resolution authorizing the filing of a voluntary petition in bankruptcy, and officers who execute such a petition are guilty of contempt. Moreover a state receiver appointed on the awarding of the injunction will be directed to appear in the federal court and move to strike from the files the petition in bankruptcy upon the ground that those purporting to act as directors had no power to act as such, and that their acts are in no respect binding on the corporation, and, the acts, the resolution, and proceedings being in violation of the order of a court of competent jurisdiction, they must be considered as void. Cavagnario v. Indian Tire, etc., Co., (1919) 90 N. J. Eq. 532, 107 Atl. 643, wherein it was further held that the receiver might appear and not submit in any other particular to the jurisdiction of the federal court.

I. GENERALLY (p. 569)

Computation of indebtedness.—In computing the total indebtedness of an alleged bankrupt in order to determine whether he owes debts amounting to not less than $1,000, claims paid by preferential or fraudulent transfers should be counted. Boston West Africa Trading Co. v. Quaker City Morocco Co., (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1919) 261 Fed. 665, affirming (D. C. Mass. 1919) 255 Fed. 924. Regarding this question, the court said:

"The appellant's counsel has addressed to us an elaborate argument, asking us to overturn the established practice of nearly 20 years—that in computing the total indebtedness in order to determine whether the alleged bankrupt owes debts amounting to not less than $1,000, claims paid by preferential or fraudulent transfers shall be counted. It would require extraordinary reasons to justify us at this late day in attempting to change what has so long been regarded as the accepted interpretation of the Bankruptcy Act (Act July 1, 1898, c. 541, 30 Stat. 544).

"We are not at all impressed with the soundness of the contention. If sustained, it would open a wide door to fraud. We regard it as inconsistent with the general principles of equality which underlie the whole Bankruptcy Act. The question was carefully considered by Judge Dodge in the Massachusetts District Court in the case of In re Jacobson (D. C.) 181 Fed. 870. We are satisfied with that decision and with the reasoning upon which it is based. See, also, 7 Corpus Juris, 67, 68, § 96; In re Norcross, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 644; In re Cain, 2 Am. Bankr. Rep. 379; In re Tirre (D. C.) 95 Fed. 425; In re McMurtrey (D. C.) 142 Fed. 853."

Vol. I, p. 587, sec. 5f. [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 506.]

Partnership tort.—Where a tort is done in the course of partnership business, for the benefit of the firm and without benefit to the partners as individuals, and the firm and partners are put into bankruptcy, the tort claim is not provable against the partners. Schall v. Camors, (1920) 251 U. S. 239, 40 S. Ct. 135, 64 U. S. (L. ed.) — (affirming (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1918) 250 Fed. 6, 162 C. C. A. 178) wherein the court said:

"It is insisted by petitioners, further, that because the proofs of the individual claims establish the responsibility of each partner for the frauds, they are liable in solido not only as partners, but individually, and that, irrespective of whether the claims are provable in tort for the fraud, they are provable and were properly proved both against the individual partners and against the firm as claims in quasi contract or equitable debt. But as the basis of a liability of this character is the unjust enrichment of the debtor, and as the facts show that no benefit accrued to the individuals as a result of the frauds beyond that which accrued to the firm, the logical result of the argument is that out of one enrichment there may arise three separate and independent indebtednesses. Doubtless it would be conceded that a single satisfaction would discharge all of the claims; but we are dealing with a situation where by reason of insolvency it is not to be presumed that claims will be satisfied in full; and, as already pointed out, the effect of sustaining the right to double proof would be to give petitioners not only a right to share in the partnership assets on equal terms with other partnership creditors, but a participation in the individual assets on equal terms with other individual creditors and in preference to other partnership creditors. Section 5 of the Bankruptcy Act (30 Stat. 547, 548) establishes on a firm basis the respective equities of the individual and firm creditors. Hence the distinction between individual and firm debts is a matter of substance, and must depend upon the essential character of the transactions out of which they arise. And since in this case the tort was done in the course of the partnership business, for the benefit of the firm and without benefit to the partners as individuals, no legal or equitable claim as against the individuals that might be deemed to arise out of it, by waiver of the tort or otherwise, can displace the equities of other creditors, recognized in the Bankruptcy Act, and put petitioners in a position of equality with others who actually were creditors of the individual partners, and of preference over other firm creditors. Reynolds v. New York Trust Co., 188 Fed. 611, 619, 620, 110 C. C. A. 409, 39 L. R. A. (N. S.) 391."

Creditors of individual partners.—"Where a bankrupt is a copartnership, the members or some of the members of which are themselves partnerships, the creditors of such a constituent firm are entitled to have their debts first paid out of its assets before the creditors of the bankrupt copartnership may participate therein, precisely as the individual creditors of an ordinary copartnership have the first claim upon his assets." Reidsville Bank v. Burton, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1919) 259 Fed. 218, 170 C. C. A. 286.

Vol. I, p. 590, sec. 5g. [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 507.]

Notes—Firm notes signed or indorsed by partners.—Every creditor who holds a note of a bankrupt firm upon which an individual member has, as joint maker, surety, or indorser, made himself individually liable, is entitled to prove his claim both against the partnership and the individual estate. Reidsville Bank v. Burton, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1919) 259 Fed. 218, 170 C. C. A. 286.

Vol. I, p. 591, sec. 5h. [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 508.]

Right of unadjudicated partner.—The bankruptcy of a partner does not deprive the other partner of implied power to convey the firm real estate in settlement of the firm's business or to dispose of his own interest. Denny v. Lee, (Tex. 1920) 221 S. W. 947.

III. Matters affecting right to exemption.

IV. Recognition of state and federal exemption laws.

III. MATTERS AFFECTING RIGHT TO EXEMPTION (p. 596)

Breach of agreement with creditor.—In Peyton v. Farmers' Nat. Bank, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1919) 261 Fed. 326, it was held that the bankrupt was entitled to exemption of an automobile as a family carriage under Art. 3785 Texas Rev. Stat., as against the contention of an objecting creditor that the automobile had been bought with funds procured by the bankrupt from the sale of grain, which had been mortgaged by the bankrupt to the objecting creditor and the proceeds of the sale of which the bankrupt had agreed to pay to the objecting creditor. The court said:

"The bankrupt was entitled to have it set aside to him as exempt, unless the trustee in bankruptcy could assert the objecting creditor's claim. That claim was neither a transfer under section 70e of the act nor a lien obtained by legal proceedings, or at all, under section 67 of the act. It was therefore not vested in the trustee, and, being the right of the individual creditor alone, it could not interfere with the right of the bankrupt to have the automobile declared exempt from administration in the bankrupt court. The jurisdiction of the bankrupt court terminated when the automobile was set aside to the bankrupt. The right of the individual objecting creditor to follow the proceeds of the sale of the grain into the automobile would have to be asserted in the state court; the bankrupt's discharge having been stayed for that purpose. Lockwood v. Exchange Bank, 190 U. S. 294, 23 Sup. Ct. 751, 47 L. ed. 1061. The case of Parlin & Orendorff Implement Co. v. Moulden, 228 Fed. 111, 142 C. C. A. 517, L. R. A. 1917B, 130, was one in which the agreement of the bankrupt was with all his creditors, and not one alone, and so inured to the trustee."

IV. RECOGNITION OF STATE AND FEDERAL EXEMPTION LAWS (p. 601)

"Exemptions which are prescribed by the state laws."—The bankruptcy court will follow the jurisprudence of the state in which it is administering, upon the matter of exemptions. Hence, where under the state law a debtor's exemptions may be charged with property that he conceals or withholds from his creditors at the time of a levy against him, the bankruptcy court will follow that rule in determining the bankrupt's exemptions. Libby v. Beverly, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1920) 263 Fed. 63. Commenting on the purpose of the rule, the court said:

"The purpose of the rule is not to punish the bankrupt for committing fraud or for making preferential transfers, but it rests upon the theory that the unaccounted for assets are still in the possession of the bankrupt at the time of the filing of his petition, and should have been surrendered to his trustee for the benefit of his creditors, and that, if the bankrupt fails to make such surrender, he may be made to do so by the bankrupt court. To avoid circuitry, his failure to surrender will be treated as a forced selection of the assets concealed or unaccounted for, as a part of his exemptions. This principle justifies the action of the District Court with reference to the moneys wholly unaccounted for. The amount of $300 paid his wife, shortly before bankruptcy, is in a different attitude. It is conceded that it was paid to liquidate a just debt owing by the bankrupt to his wife. It was an unlawful preference under the Bankruptcy Law, having been made within four months of the filing of the petition, and while the bankrupt was insolvent. That alone would not justify a charge against the bankrupt's exemption in equal amount. The case of Florida Loan, etc., Co. v. Crabb, 45 Fla. 306, 33 So. 523, holds that the concealment or removal beyond the reach of his creditors of a part of his personal property by a debtor in an attachment as a preliminary to claiming his constitutional exemptions will, where the property remains so concealed, be treated as a selection pro tanto by the debtor of his exemptions."

State law adopted—Florida.—Libby v. Beverly, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1920) 263 Fed. 63.

Homestead exemptions—Texas.—To the same effect as first paragraph of original annotation, see Peyton v. Farmers' Nat. Bank, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1919) 261 Fed. 326, wherein it appeared that a house and lot claimed by the bankrupt, as a living homestead, was purchased by him immediately before the filing of his petition in bankruptcy, the deed having been executed two days before that event. The court said:

"The bankrupt, at the time of the purchase, had other property which was suitable for his homestead, and was therefore called upon to indicate his selection. No preparatory steps to occupy the purchased premises were taken by him before bankruptcy. The attitude of the case is therefore that of one claiming a homestead without occupancy or tangible preparation to that end, and without having declared his intention to occupy the premises as a home. The authorities are against the sufficiency of such a showing for a homestead exemption. Franklin v. Coffee, 18 Tex. 413, 70 Am. Dec. 292; Murphy v. Lewis (Tex. Civ. App.) 198 S. W. 1062; Blackwell v. Lasseter (Tex. Civ. App.) 203 S. W. 620; Markum v. Markum (Tex. Civ. App.) 210 S. W. 841; Barnes v. White, 53 Tex. 628. In the case of Gardner v. Douglass, 64 Tex. 76, relied upon by petitioner, there was a showing of a declaration of intention, and a subsequent occupancy of the premises as a home, both of which are lacking in this case."

The bankrupt also claimed exemption of a building in which he was conducting his business on the ground that it was a business homestead, and of the machinery therein as tools and apparatus of his trade. Regarding these claims, the court said:

"The District Court allowed the building in which the bankrupt was conducting his mill business to him as a business homestead, but denied the bankrupt's exemptions in the machinery and accessories claimed by him as exempt because a part of it, or as tools and apparatus of his trade. The bankrupt was a miller, and conducted his business as a miller in a building on ground leased to him by the Cotton Belt Railroad Company. The District Court held that the building, though it was not realty, in view of the tenure by which it was held, was a business homestead as personalty. It further held that, being personalty, it did not carry its contents, though they were fixtures, as a part of it, and as exempt with it. The District Court relied upon the case of Cullers v. Henry & James, 66 Tex. 494, 1 S. W. 314, as controlling, and it seems to us to be so. In that case a ginhouse, which was built on leased land, was allowed the debtor as a business homestead, though it was held to be personalty. . . . In the same case the Supreme Court said with reference to the claim that the machinery was exempt as tools of trade under article 2395, Revised Statutes of Texas: 'The proposition that the mill and gin machinery are exempt as tools of trade cannot be seriously insisted upon. That it was urged that they were part of the homestead ought to be a sufficient answer to a claim so diametrically opposite. No authority has been cited which has gone far enough to embrace as tools of trade this kind of property, and the analogies and reason of the law do not persuade us to pioneer such extreme doctrine.' . . . In the case at bar the mill machinery was propelled by an electric motor. The reason for the distinction and for the exclusion of machinery attached to a business homestead from the benefit of the exemption laws, because the business homestead consisted of personalty, may not be obvious; but we are bound by the decisions of the Supreme Court of Texas which construe the exemption provisions of its constitution and statute. The appurtenances of the mill, which were on the mill lot, but not contained in the mill building, are likewise to be excluded from the benefit of the business homestead."

I. SCHEDULE OF ASSETS (p. 612)

Interest as beneficiary under will of living person.—An interest of a bankrupt as beneficiary under the will of his mother who was still alive at the time of the bankruptcy proceedings, need not be included in his schedule of assets. In re Seal, (E. D. N. Y. 1919) 261 Fed. 112.

II. SCHEDULE OF CREDITORS AND LIABILITIES (p. 614)

Duty to schedule creditors and liabilities—Assignee of claim against bankrupt.—Where a claim against a bankrupt was assigned by the creditor to a third person previous to the filing of the schedule and the bankrupt was not notified of the assignment, such assignee cannot complain because the claim was not scheduled. Morency v. Landry, (N. H. 1919) 108 Atl. 855.

Subsequent use of evidence—A deposition made by a bankrupt pursuant to this section should not be offered in evidence in a subsequent criminal prosecution against him for defrauding a national bank, but it may be excluded only if objection to its introduction is made by him. Bain v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1920) 262 Fed. 664.

- III. Stay as dependent on dischargeability of debt.

- V. Where state court has complete jurisdiction.

I. IN GENERAL (p. 630)

Stays after discharge.—This section only applies to staying suits against a bankrupt prior to his discharge. Hence, after he has been discharged, a bankruptcy court will not issue an order under this section restraining further action in supplementary proceedings in a state court to discover property of the bankrupt so as to render it liable to execution under a judgment against him in the state court for breach of promise to marry. In re Madden, (D. C. N. J. 1919) 257 Fed. 581.

Bankruptcy as ground of removal.—A person who is involved in litigation in which the decision has been, or is likely to be, adverse, cannot cause the suits against him to be removed to a federal court and there tried anew by filing a voluntary petition in bankruptcy. In re Vadner, (D. C. Nev. 1918) 259 Fed. 614.

II. DISCRETION AS TO GRANTING STAYS
(p. 631)

Stay discretionary.—To same effect as original annotation, see In re Vadner, (D. C. Nev. 1918) 259 Fed. 614.

Stay after adjudication.—"During the interval which elapses after petition filed and before adjudication or dismissal, the application to stay must be granted. The language is mandatory. After adjudication, whether a stay shall be granted is discretionary with the court. In the present case no application for a stay was made until long after the adjudication. The bankrupt, Vadner, therefore, was not entitled to a stay as a matter of right." In re Vadner, (D. C. Nev. 1918) 259 Fed. 614.

Suits for the recovery of fraudulently or preferentially conveyed property do not come within the provisions of this section and cannot be stayed. In re Vadner, (D. C. Nev. 1918) 259 Fed. 614.

III. STAY AS DEPENDENT ON DISCHARGEABILITY OF DEBT (p. 632)

Stay of actions on dischargeable debts.—To same effect as original annotation, see In re Vadner, (D. C. Nev. 1918) 259 Fed. 614.

Stay of actions on nondischargeable debts.—A bankruptcy court is powerless to enjoin a state court from punishing a bankrupt for refusing to obey the order of the latter court to pay alimony, or to relieve him from his obligation to pay instalments of alimony, since alimony is a nondischargeable debt. In re Pyatt, (D. C. Nev. 1918) 257 Fed. 362.

IV. STAY OF PROCEEDINGS ON VALID LIENS
(p. 635)

Stay denied.—To same effect as original annotation, see In re Brinn, (N. D. Ga. 1919) 262 Fed. 527, holding that the enforcement of a judgment of a state court rendered more than four months prior to the filing of the petition, would not be enjoined. The court said:

"In such cases the bankruptcy court will not ordinarily interfere by injunction, whether before or after actual levy, though in exceptional cases, such, for instance, as might authorize the interference of a court of equity where bankruptcy had not occurred, the bankruptcy court may properly intervene. The referee properly refused an injunction, if for no better reason than because the ground on which it was sought, to wit, that the judgments in question had been rendered within four months prior to the petition in bankruptcy, was not in fact true."

V. WHERE STATE COURT HAS COMPLETE JURISDICTION (p. 636)

Suit to replevy property not claimed by bankrupt's estate.—A court of bankruptcy is without jurisdiction to enjoin the prosecution in a state court of a suit to replevy certain bonds alleged to have been converted by the bankrupt, and as to which no claim of ownership is made by him. In re Amy, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 263 Fed. 8.

Vol. I, p. 643, sec. 12a. [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 540.]

Consent by corporation to offer of composition by its trustees.—In In re O'Gara Coal Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1919) 260 Fed. 742, 171 C. C. A. 480, it was contended that a corporation adjudicated a bankrupt had no authority to elect officers and directors nor to consent to a reorganization and composition offered by its creditors, while its affairs were being conducted in the bankruptcy court. The court, in overruling this contention, said:

"The provisions in the Bankruptcy Act providing for a composition clearly indicate that the Congress did not intend to deny to corporations the right to protect their own interest, including the right to elect directors. To give the bankrupt companies the right to propose compositions is inconsistent with a denial of the right of stockholders and directors to maintain the corporate existence and to take action necessary to the submission of such proposals."

Vol. I, p. 645, sec. 12b. [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 541.]

Deposit—Return on failure to confirm.—Where money deposited by the bankrupts is borrowed by them for the purpose of composition, and there is no evidence of bad faith or intentional delay on their part, the money should be returned to them if the composition is not confirmed. In re Morris, (D. C. Mass. 1919) 258 Fed. 712.

Costs.—"Costs" as used in this section embrace statutory fees and such other expenses as have been incurred in the case. They do not include a loss to creditors caused by delay in converting the assets into cash. In re Morris, (D. C. Mass. 1919) 258 Fed. 712.

Vol. I, p. 651, sec. 12e. [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 545.]

Effect of confirmation.—To same effect as original annotation, see American Imp. Co. v. Lilienthal, (Cal. App. 1919) 184 Pac. 692.

A composition is not alone a contract between the bankrupt and his unsecured creditors, but also, on its confirmation, a judgment of the court having definite legal results. Such confirmation adjudicates that it is for the best interest of the unsecured creditors, whether assenting majority or dissenting minority, that the percentage offered be accepted. By this adjudication unsecured creditors are bound, and the bankrupt is discharged thereby from their claims. Hence, although a creditor may have his claim reinstated if it has been unauthorizedly withdrawn, yet if he omits to do so, he cannot escape the effect of the confirmation. Cobb v. Livonia First Nat. Bank, (N. D. Ga. 1920) 263 Fed. 1000.

A composition proceeding as provided by the Bankruptcy Act, and as ordinarily put into effect by the payment into court of the sum of money necessary to meet the claims of all creditors on the basis of agreement, has, upon confirmation by the court, the effect of restoring the bankrupt to his estate, free from the claims of creditors, and restores to him his right of action upon choses in action. A composition is in a sense a substitute for bankruptcy proceedings, and in a composition the creditor gets, not his share of the bankrupt's estate, but what he bargained for, and has no right to claim more. Cumberland Glass Co. v. De Witt, 237 U. S. 447, 35 Sup. Ct. 636, 59 L. Ed. 1042.

An agreement of composition, entered into by a number of creditors, each acting on the faith of the engagement of the others, will, in the absence of the statute, be binding upon them all; for each has the undertaking of the others as a consideration for his own engagement; and the creditor who breaks the agreement perpetrates a fraud upon those who adhere to it. 1 Smith's Lead. Cas. (9th ed.) pp. 612, 628, 629. The effect of the Bankruptcy Act in this regard is to treat all creditors as a class and to enforce the will of the majority upon the minority. In other respects the right of contract remains unimpaired. Merchants' Bank v. Zadek, (Ala. 1919) 84 So. 715.

Necessity of order of discharge.—"It does not seem to be necessary at all that there shall be any order of discharge after an order confirming the composition, for the order of confirmation operates effectually to discharge the bankrupt from his debts other than those not affected by a discharge." Oilfields Syndicate v. American Imp. Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1919) 260 Fed. 905.

Liens remaining unaffected.—Where there has been a composition, and an order of confirmation, the bankrupt takes back his property in the same condition that it was in when the bankruptcy was initiated, and liens which would be valid and unassailable in the ordinary course of bankruptcy proceedings are protected in composition arrangements and are not discharged or affected. Hence, a judgment lien acquired more than four months prior to the filing of an involuntary petition in bankruptcy remains unaffected on the confirmation of a composition offered by a bankrupt. Oilfields Syndicate v. American Imp. Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1919) 260 Fed. 905. In passing upon this question the court said:

"Section 67c of the Bankruptcy Act provides in substance that a lien created by statute, including an attachment by mesne process which was begun against a person within four months before the filing of a petition in bankruptcy against such person, shall be dissolved by the adjudication of such person to be a bankrupt if (1) it appears that the lien was obtained while defendant was insolvent or if its existence and enforcement will work a preference; or (2) the party to be benefited thereby had reasonable cause to believe defendant was insolvent and contemplated bankruptcy; or (3) such lien was sought and allowed in fraud of the provisions of the Bankruptcy Act; or if the dissolution of the lien would militate against the interest of the estate of such person, the lien shall not be dissolved, but the trustee, for the benefit of the estate, shall be subrogated to the rights of the holder of the lien and empowered to perfect and enforce the same as the holder might have done had not bankruptcy proceedings intervened. Section 67, subdivision 'f,' provides that all judgments or other liens obtained through legal proceedings against a person who is insolvent, or at any time within four months prior to the filing of a petition in bankruptcy against him, shall be deemed null and void in case he is adjudged a bankrupt, and the property affected by the judgment or other lien shall be deemed wholly discharged and released from the same, and shall pass to the trustee as a part of the estate of the bankrupt, unless the court shall order that the right under the judgment or levy or lien shall be preserved, and thereupon the same may be passed to the trustee to be preserved by him for the benefit of the estate, provided nothing in the section shall operate to destroy or impair the title obtained by such levy, judgment, or other lien of a bona fide purchaser for value, who shall have acquired the same without notice or reasonable cause for inquiry.

"In behalf of the appellant two theories are advanced: one, that if the provisions of subdivisions e and f apply to compositions, inasmuch as there has been no adjudication in the present case, the lien of the judgment was wiped out as an incident of the judgment by the satisfaction by the composition; another, that the lien of the judgment was extinguished by the satisfaction and discharge of the judgment by the composition under the sections of the act having to do with compositions, without regard to the question of adjudication. If either of these contentions is well founded, then the lien and judgment which were obtained and duly recorded more than four months prior to the filing of the petition in bankruptcy are discharged. A result in general would be that in a case where a bankrupt has availed himself of the composition statute, and has compounded with his creditors, and has obtained approval of the composition, but against whom there has been no adjudication in bankruptcy, a judgment creditor with a lien more than four months old, and who has not participated in the bankruptcy proceedings, has never filed a claim, and never received a dividend from the composition, occupies a position with respect to the right to preserve the lien of a judgment less favorable than he would have had if there had been an adjudication and discharge of the bankrupt from his debts.

"We cannot believe that such is the true construction of the act. Section 17 of the Bankruptcy Act, as amended, provides that a discharge in bankruptcy shall release the bankrupt from all of his provable debts, except such as are due for taxes, liabilities for obtaining property by false pretenses, and for debts that have not been duly scheduled in time for proof and allowance, unless the creditor had notice of the bankruptcy proceedings. Section 63 provides that debts of the bankrupt may be proved and allowed against his estate which are: (1) 'A fixed liability, as evidenced by a judgment or an instrument in writing, absolutely owing at the time of the filing of the petition against him, whether then payable or not,' etc.; (2) debts founded upon open account or upon contract; (3) debts founded upon provable debts reduced to judgment after the filing of the petition and before consideration of the bankrupt's application for a discharge.

"In Metcalf v. Barker, 187 U. S. 165, 23 Sup. Ct. 67, 47 L. Ed. 122, the Supreme Court, after quoting section 67f of the act, said: 'In our opinion the conclusion to be drawn from this language is that it is the lien created by a levy or a judgment, or an attachment, or otherwise, that is invalidated, and that, where the lien is obtained more than four months prior to the filing of the petition, it is not only not to be deemed to be null and void on adjudication, but its validity is recognized. When it is obtained within four months the property is discharged therefrom, but not otherwise. A judgment or decree in enforcement of an otherwise valid pre-existing lien is not the judgment denounced by the statute, which is plainly confined to judgments creating liens. If this were not so, the date of the acquisition of a lien by attachment or creditors' bill would be entirely immaterial.'

"And the court, in sustaining this view, referred to section 63a and to section 17, saying that they would be wholly unnecessary if section 67f were to be taken literally. First Nat. Bank v. Staake, 202 U. S. 141, 148, 26 Sup. Ct. 580, 50 L. Ed. 967; Globe Bank v. Martin, 236 U. S. 288, 35 Sup. Ct. 577, 59 L. Ed. 583. . . .

"The appellant would draw a distinction between the discharge of an indebtedness, and its consequent effect upon a lien acquired in judicial proceedings by a discharge of the bankrupt after an adjudication in bankruptcy, where there has been no composition, and a discharge of the indebtedness by settlement pursuant to a composition. But, it being well settled that where a lien has been obtained through judicial proceedings prior to the four months period, the lien is not dissolved by the adjudication, and that an order of confirmation shall discharge the bankrupt from his debts other than those not affected by a discharge, the bankrupt who has made the composition finds that as to liens which were existing beyond the four months period he is in no better position than if there had been an adjudication in bankruptcy. In either case the effect is not to discharge the liens acquired. In either event the lien is intact. Metcalf v. Barker, supra. Personal liability on the judgment is discharged, but nothing more. 3 R. C. L. § 119; 7 C. J. § 311."

So while a composition releases a bankrupt from personal liability for a judgment debt it does not destroy the lien of the judgment on lands to which the lien attached more than four months prior to the filing of the petition. American Imp. Co. v. Lilienthal, (Cal. App. 1919) 184 Pac. 692.

Confirmation as concluding creditor from attacking conveyance as fraudulent.—A deed executed by a bankrupt may not be attacked as a fraud on creditors after the confirmation of a composition, where it appears that at the time of the confirmation the deed was recorded and its validity was not attacked in the composition proceedings. In such case the right of general creditors to attack it for fraud was, by the court's judgment, substituted by their right to receive payment of a certain percentage of their debts from the composition fund. The same rule applies to an attack by a creditor holding a judgment against the bankrupt prior to the confirmation. Cobb v. Livonia First Nat. Bank, (N. D. Ga. 1920) 263 Fed. 1000.

Dismissal on confirmation.—To same effect as original annotation, see In re Bickmore Shoe Co., (N. D. Ga. 1920) 263 Fed. 926.

Reinvesting property rights.—The effect of a composition "is to supersede the bankruptcy proceedings, and reinvest the bankrupt with all his property free from the claims of his creditors. . . . While the bankrupt is reinvested with all his property by the composition its effect in that regard is no more than to place it back in his hands as it was before the insolvency proceedings were instituted. Strictly speaking, no adjudication of bankruptcy having been made, defendant was never divested of his property." American Imp. Co. v. Lilienthal, (Cal. App. 1919) 184 Pac. 692.

Action for accounting by creditors against trustee under composition agreement.—A trustee in a composition agreement may be required to account to the creditors where he has failed to carry out the terms of the agreement and has wrongfully disposed of the debtor's property. Merchants' Bank v. Zadek, (Ala. 1919) 84 So. 715.

Composition set aside for fraud—Overvaluation of assets.—Where under the provisions of a composition agreement, a bankrupt surrenders all his assets, the fact that he overvalued them does not constitute fraud justifying a vacation of the composition. In re Kass, (E. D. N. Y. 1916) 263 Fed. 138.

Representations by a receiver regarding the value of the assets of the bankrupt's estate do not bind the bankrupt or his estate, nor do they form a basis for vacating a composition on the ground of fraud. In re Kass, (E. D. N. Y. 1916) 263 Fed. 138.

Laches as barring vacation of composition.—In In re Kass, (E. D. N. Y. 1916) 263 Fed. 138, it was held that a creditor was barred by laches from vacating a composition on the ground of fraud, where it appeared that he did not file his petition until thirteen months after the acceptance of the composition and did not aver in the petition when he discovered the alleged fraud.

Vol. I, p. 653, sec. 14a. [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 547.]

To whom application must be made.—Under this section an application by a bankrupt for a discharge must be made to the judge of the court of bankruptcy in which the proceedings were commenced. In re Hughes, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 262 Fed. 500.

Extension allowed because of unavoidable delay—Bankrupt's attorney in military service.—The fact that the bankrupt's attorney entered military service and that the attorney who subsequently represented him overlooked the requirement of this section regarding the time within which an application for discharge must be filed, is not a sufficient excuse for failure to file such application. In such a case the provisions of the Soldiers and Sailors' Civil Relief Act (1918 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. 810) do not apply. In re Weldon, (N. D. Ia. 1920) 262 Fed. 828.

Debts dischargeable in second bankruptcy proceeding.—In Monk v. Horn, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1920) 262 Fed. 121, "the appellee was adjudged bankrupt on January 25, 1917, on a voluntary petition filed by him in a proceeding in which no application for a discharge was filed, and which was closed prior to January 25, 1919, when he filed in the same court another voluntary petition, under which he was again adjudged bankrupt. In 1914 the appellant recovered a judgment against the bankrupt, which was a provable debt against the estate of the bankrupt in each of the bankruptcy proceedings. He objected to the granting of an application for discharge made by the bankrupt in the second proceeding, in so far as that application sought a discharge from the debt evidenced by the judgment mentioned, and prayed that that debt be excluded from the operation of any discharge that might be granted under the application therefor. The court ordered a discharge, from the operation of which the debt owing by the bankrupt to the appellant was not excluded.

"This court has decided that, under the provision of section 14 of the Bankruptcy Act prescribing the time within which an application for a discharge may be made, a bankrupt, after the expiration of 18 months from adjudication, is not entitled, in a second proceeding, to a discharge from debts provable in the first. In re Bacon, 193 Fed. 34, 113 C. C. A. 358; Bacon v. Buffalo Cold Storage Co., 225 U. S. 701, 32 Sup. Ct. 836, 56 L. Ed. 1264. It appears from the opinion rendered by the district judge in the instant case that the ruling just referred to was not followed, because it was considered to be inconsistent with the ruling of the Supreme Court in the case of Bluthenthal v. Jones, 208 U. S. 64, 28 Sup. Ct. 192, 52 L. Ed. 390. What was decided in the last-cited case was that a debt was not excluded from the operation of a discharge by the fact that in a former proceeding, on the same creditor's objection, a discharge was refused, where that creditor, though notified of the second proceeding and that his same debt was scheduled therein, did not participate in any way in that proceeding. The ground of that decision was that the creditor lost the benefit, in the second proceeding, of the refusal of a discharge in the first proceeding, by failing to plead it or bring it to the attention of the court in the later proceeding.

"It was not decided in that case that the creditor did not have a valid ground of objection to the granting of the discharge applied for in the second proceeding. It was decided that the creditor's debt was not excluded from the operation of a discharge which was granted without objection from him. The question of the sufficiency of an objection to an application for a discharge, because it was not made within the time prescribed by section 14 of the Bankruptcy Act, was not involved in that case. Nothing said in the opinion rendered in that case indicates that the court had that question in mind. We do not think that the decision in that case is in conflict with the above referred to decision of this court.

"We are of the opinion that the ruling in the case of In re Bacon, supra, was correct. Subdivision a of section 14 of the Bankruptcy Act creates a limitation in favor of creditors having debts provable against an estate in bankruptcy. Subdivision b of that section prescribes the grounds on which an application for discharge may be refused. There is nothing to indicate that the latter provision was intended to control or supersede the former one. The former provision fixes a period of time beyond which a creditor affected by the bankruptcy is not required to remain prepared to prove the existence of a ground of objection to a discharge of the bankrupt. It well may be inferred that it was contemplated that an application for a discharge from any debt affected by an adjudication of bankruptcy should be made within the stated period, whether made in the first proceeding in which such debt was provable, or in a subsequent proceeding.

"The provision has the effect of preventing a bankrupt from withholding for an unreasonable length of time from creditors affected by the adjudication of bankruptcy the opportunity of proving the existence of a ground justifying a refusal of the discharge applied for. To give to a subsequent adjudication of bankruptcy the effect of enlarging the time within which a discharge from debts affected by a former adjudication could be applied for would amount to a destruction of the limitation created by the statute. The conclusion is that the court erred in overruling the appellant's motion to exclude his debt from the operation of the discharge applied for and granted."

I. Generally.

III. Hearing and proof.

I. GENERALLY (p. 662)

Construction.—The Bankruptcy Act, in so far as it relates to the discharge of the bankrupt, should be given a strict construction in his favor. In re Rosenfeld, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 262 Fed. 876. The court said: "When an application for the discharge is presented it may be opposed by a party in interest. In this case it is opposed by one from whom it is claimed that the bankrupt obtained property upon a materially false statement. That the party opposing is in this case 'a party in interest' is of course conceded. The Bankruptcy Act is very liberal towards the bankrupt as to his discharge; and the act in so far as it relates to his discharge is to be given a strict construction in favor of the bankrupt. The purpose of the act is to release honest debtors from the burden of their debts."

III. HEARING AND PROOF (p. 670)

Specifications of objection must be proved—In general.—To same effect as original annotation, see In re Gottlieb, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 262 Fed. 730, wherein it was said: "In matters of discharge every objecting creditor starts out with the burden of proving that which he alleges. In re Miller, 212 Fed. 920, 129 C. C. A. 440. But when a set of facts is shown which unexplained would lead a reasonable man to believe the allegations of the objector, the bankrupt must explain, and a deficit in assets far less than that demonstrably existing here has been held sufficient for that purpose in this court. In re Loeb, 232 Fed. 801, 146 C. C. A. 559; In re Schultz, 250 Fed. 103, 162 C. C. A. 275. Nor is any creditor called upon to prove the substance of his objection beyond a reasonable doubt; a fair preponderance is enough. In re Garriety, 247 Fed. 311, 159 C. C. A. 404."

Fair preponderance of evidence required.—Specifications of objection by creditors must be proved by a fair preponderance of the evidence. Thompson v. Lamb, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1920) 263 Fed. 61.

Vol. I, p. 677, sec. 14b (1). [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 557.]

"Offense punishable by imprisonment."—The fact that the bankrupts have committed an offense punishable by imprisonment under the law of a state, does not bar their discharge under this section, unless the offense is also similarly punishable under the Bankruptcy Law. In re Oliner, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 262 Fed. 734.

Making false oath.—In In re Kappes, (E. D. N. Y. 1919) 258 Fed. 653, the discharge of a bankrupt was opposed on the ground that he had made a false oath in his schedules. The evidence was held to be insufficient to sustain the objections, and the referee's report recommending the granting of the discharge was confirmed.

Omissions and inaccuracies in schedules.—In In re Jutkovitz, (E. D. N. Y. 1919) 259 Fed. 915, it was held that where objections to a bankrupt's discharge had been made on the ground that he had failed to include certain persons in the schedule of his creditors, releases from such persons were inadmissible in evidence on a hearing to determine his right to a discharge.

Intention to conceal.—To same effect as original annotation, see Thompson v. Lamb, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1920) 263 Fed. 61.

"Failed to keep books of account"—Intention presumed.—To same effect as original annotation, see Thompson v. Lamb, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1920) 263 Fed. 61, wherein it was said: "The bankrupt is without doubt charged with intending the natural and probable consequences of his acts and omissions. In re Janavitz (C. C. A. 3d), 219 Fed. 876, 135 C. C. A. 546; In re Arnold (D. C. N. J.) 228 Fed. 75. But the presumption on which this charge is based is rebuttable, either by evidence showing why the bankrupt did not keep more complete books and records or by evidence of the bankrupt's conduct and of the circumstances preceding and attending his bankruptcy. We think the presumption has been rebutted by the evidence in this case. While the bankrupt's lack of method in keeping books of account justified this inquiry into his purpose, we cannot find that it was pursued by him with intent to cover up his financial condition."

Fraud of partner.—On the bankruptcy of a partnership, where it appears that one of the partners omitted to make entries in the firm's books of account with intent to conceal its financial condition, he will be denied his discharge. But his acts will not be allowed to prejudice his partner's right to a discharge where it is shown that he was ill at the time the acts of concealment took place, that he did not participate therein and knew nothing of them. In re Harrell, (N. D. Ga. 1920) 263 Fed. 954.

Nonproduction of books of account does not establish by inference the fact that they have been destroyed or concealed. This is especially true where it is not shown that the bankrupt's failure to produce his books was attended by any inculpatory act or circumstance. Thompson v. Lamb, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1920) 263 Fed. 61.

Vol. I, p. 689, sec. 14b (3). [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 560.]

False statement in writing—Person to whom made.—In order for a false statement to come within the provisions of this section it must have been made to the person from whom the credit was obtained. Accordingly, a false statement made by private bankers to a state comptroller, in order that he might permit them to continue in business, does not bar their discharge in bankruptcy. In re Oliner, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 262 Fed. 734. In discussing the effect of such a statement on the bankrupt's right to a discharge, the court said:

"Is the statement filed with the state comptroller within the terms of section 14, subd. (b), cl. 3, above set forth? That provision was considered in Firestone v. Harvey, 174 Fed. 574, 98 C. C. A. 420. The Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit, speaking through Judge Lurton, after quoting the language of subd. 3 of sec. 14b, said: 'This ground for denying a discharge was evidently leveled particularly at the practice of making false statements of one's financial condition by a buyer or borrower, for the purpose of obtaining from the person to whom such false statement is made, in writing, the articles or money desired "on credit." The false statement in writing which is enough to deny a discharge implies a statement knowingly false, or made recklessly, without an honest belief in its truth, and with a purpose to mislead or deceive, and thereby obtain from the persons to whom it is made property upon credit.'

"It was held in In re Tanner (D. C.) 192 Fed. 572, that the obtaining of a surety or indemnity bond by a bankrupt by means of a materially false statement is not the obtaining of 'property' on credit, within the meaning of the provision of the clause under consideration.

"The provision was also considered by this court in In re Zoffer, 211 Fed. 936, 128 C. C. A. 434. We held in that case, in an opinion written by Judge Lacombe, and concurred in by Judges Cox and Ward, that a false statement in writing, made by the bankrupt to the agent of a commercial agency, merely that the agency might fix a credit rating in its books, and not requested by any customer, is not ground for denial of a discharge. The court in its opinion quoted from the report of the judiciary committee of the Senate concerning the measure in which it was said: 'Any tendency to make the bankrupt act unduly harsh is to be avoided. It is a sufficient ground of opposition to discharge that the bankrupt has obtained property from a creditor by a materially false statement in writing, where that statement was specifically asked for by the creditor or by the creditor's representative. General statements to mercantile agencies, not specifically asked for by prospective creditors, ought not to be ground of opposition to discharge; it makes the provision too harsh, in the estimation of your committee.'

"We are unable to distinguish this case in principle from In re Zoffer. Neither the state comptroller nor the superintendent of banks, like the mercantile agency, obtained the report at the request of any depositor or prospective depositor. Neither of those officials was the representative of a creditor from whom any money or property was obtained.

"The obtaining of a license from the comptroller of the state of New York, or from the state superintendent of banking, is not the obtaining of 'property' within the meaning of the clause under consideration. If it be said that moneys deposited with bankers thus licensed are obtained from depositors, on the faith of the statement filed either with the comptroller or the superintendent of banking, the answer is:

"(1) That there is no evidence that a single depositor ever knew or heard of the statement, or relied upon it.

"(2) That under the Bankruptcy Act the statement must be made to the person—in this case the depositors—from whom the credit was obtained."

Extension of credit on faith of statement.

—Where a bankrupt, in order to obtain a loan from a bank, signed a false financial statement prepared by the cashier of the bank, who had been the bankrupt's financial agent and who alone acted for the bank in granting the loan, and the bank accordingly extended credit to the bankrupt on its books, it was held that the bankrupt was guilty of making a materially false statement in writing for the purpose of obtaining credit, and should not be granted a discharge. Bank of Commerce, etc. v. Matthews, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1919) 257 Fed. 292, 168 C. C. A. 376.

So a false financial statement by a bankrupt to a bank, upon which he obtains a loan, is sufficient ground for refusing him his discharge. Cleland v. Iowa Loan, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 260 Fed. 653, 171 C. C. A. 417.

Obtaining money by false statements regarding security.—Where a bankrupt, in order to secure a loan of money, evidenced by his notes given at the time, gave the lender a written mortgage upon a described automobile, which he did not own, it was held that the transaction did not amount to obtaining the money on a materially false statement in writing within the meaning of this section, but that the bankrupt's discharge did not release the debt in view of the provisions of section 17a (2). In re Hudson, (S. D. Ala. 1920) 262 Fed. 778. The court said:

"The Bankruptcy Act was primarily written to cover ordinary mercantile dealings; so the words used in the act are to be given the construction and meaning ordinarily understood in mercantile dealings, and not the strict technical construction which they may be susceptible of. A loan upon given security is not ordinarily contemplated when merchants speak of obtaining money, goods, or property on credit. The fact that Congress used these words to denote the ordinary credit dealings between merchant and customer is indicated by the construction placed upon this subdivision by all the text-writers, such as Collier, Brandenburg, and Remington.

"In discussing this provision, they all treat it as a provision intended by Congress to deny a discharge where the money or goods were secured on some representation by the borrower, such as the statements ordinarily given to the mercantile agencies—a statement of facts made as a basis of credit between a customer and a merchant. None of these writers, so far as I have been able to ascertain, have considered that the provision written in subdivision 3 goes further than this and covers a special loan secured by collateral pledged or mortgage given at the time, which loan may have been obtained upon a false representation of fact.

"The fact that these writers have all so construed this provision, and have not conceived that it went far enough to include money or property obtained by false pretenses or false representations, is persuasive evidence that the language used by Congress was not intended to include such a state of facts, and is supported by the further fact that Congress wrote into the Bankruptcy Act, in section 17, the following:

"A discharge in bankruptcy shall release a bankrupt from all of his provable debts, except such as . . . (2) are liabilities for obtaining property by false pretenses or false representations, or for willful and malicious injuries to the person or property of another, or for alimony due or to become due, or for maintenance or support of wife or child, or for seduction of an unmarried female, or for breach of promise of marriage accompanied by seduction, or for criminal conversation."

"It will be observed that the statement of facts in this case brings the parties directly under the first paragraph of subsection 2 of section 17. In that it was a liability or debt created by obtaining money by false pretenses or false representations, and hence the debt or liability so created would not be released by the discharge, even if granted. Congress would scarcely have provided that a debt or liability created by a given state of facts should be a ground for objecting to a discharge, and at the same time have excepted the debt so created from the discharge when granted. It is manifest that these two provisions, if so construed, would be inconsistent, because, if an obligation so created was excepted from the discharge when granted, it could hardly be a ground for objecting to the granting of the discharge, which would not cancel or release such debt or liability.

"Again, it is hardly conceivable that Congress would have grouped a number of classes of obligations or debts and excepted them from release by the discharge, and yet have provided that a debt or obligation so created in the manner specified by one of these classes only should be a bar to the release, and not have given the same effect to the debt created by the other enumerated classes. For instance, to construe it as contended by the objecting creditor, we would have a debt or obligation created by buying property under false pretenses or false representations, which would be a bar to any discharge; but, if the debt or obligation was created through willful or malicious injuries to the person or property of another, it would be merely excepted from the operation of the discharge when granted, but would be no ground for objection to the granting of any discharge whatever. I cannot conceive that Congress intended to draw such distinctions between the two classes of debts enumerated.

"I am satisfied that what Congress intended to do was to except from the effect of the discharge one class of debts or obligations created by obtaining property under false pretenses or false representations, as these words are used in the various statutes of the various states, making this state of facts a crime, and that the words used in subsection 3 of section 14 were intended to be limited to such dealings between merchants or individuals, where a written statement of facts was made by the borrower as a basis of credit, as ordinarily understood in mercantile dealings, and that the language they have used, where given its ordinary meaning, does just what Congress intended.

"I therefore hold that, where the facts set up bring the parties under the provisions of subdivision 2 of section 17, the debt or obligation is not released by the discharge, and hence such facts present no ground for objecting to the granting of a discharge."

Intent—The word "false."—To same effect as original annotation, see In re Rosenfeld, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 262 Fed. 876, holding that the unintentional omission of a debt from a financial statement on which the bankrupt obtained credit, did not make the statement false within the meaning of this section.

Omissions from statement.—The omission by a bankrupt from a financial statement of debts owing by him to certain of his relatives, does not make such statement "materially false" where it does not purport to contain all of his debts. In re Rammage, (S. D. Cal. 1919) 260 Fed. 893, wherein the court said:

"The statement prepared by the bankrupt did not, on its face, in any wise, by writing in the hand of the bankrupt or at all, purport to contain a complete and exhaustive account of his business with respect either to his assets or to his liabilities. It did contain a statement of certain things—merchandise on hand, etc., and certain other things; bills owing by him, etc. If there had been any statement in writing, made or signed by him, to the effect that the items given constituted all of his then present indebtedness, a situation would have occurred which would have justified a denial of his discharge; or if he had stated that he had $6,000 of 'merchandise,' instead of $4,500 worth, as was the fact, a similar result would have been reached. The statute requires, however, in order that discharge may be denied, that the bankrupt must have obtained property on credit 'upon a materially false statement in writing made by him.' The 'materially false statement' thus required is not to be found in writing, in the statement of his business tendered by the bankrupt. There is nothing in the statement at all, as heretofore suggested, to the effect that the figures given were inclusive of all indebtedness, or that no other indebtedness was subsisting. In other words, there is no 'false' statement upon the face of the writing.

"It may be, although there is little justification for such conclusion, that the bankrupt intended to misrepresent the situation with respect to his total indebtedness, and intended wholly to conceal the debts owing to his family; but, whether that be the case or not, he has not violated the express language of the statute. He did not incorporate a 'false statement' into the writing made by him. He may not lawfully be denied a discharge because of mere implications or inferences arising out of his verbal expressions, or even out of the general situation. There must have been falsity evidenced in writing.

"This conclusion seems to be sustained by the well-considered opinion of the Circuit Court of Appeals of the Eighth Circuit in International Harvester Co. v. Carlson, 217 Fed. 736, 739, 133 C. C. A. 430."

Concealment, etc., of assets—In general.—To same effect as original annotation, see In re Jutkovitz, (E. D. N. Y. 1919) 259 Fed. 915, holding that the evidence was sufficient to establish a concealment by the bankrupt.

What constitutes concealment, removal, or destruction of property—Concealment of valueless property.—To same effect as original annotation, see In re Hughes, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 262 Fed. 500.

Mingling funds deposited for transmission.—The fact that private bankers accept money for transmission to foreign countries with the knowledge that they are insolvent, and do not transmit it, but mingle it with their own funds and deposit it in their own names in another bank, does not constitute a concealment of assets within the meaning of this section. In re Oliner, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 262 Fed. 734.

Intent—Intent alone insufficient.—To same effect as original annotation, see In re Hughes, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 262 Fed. 500, holding that a transfer by the bankrupt to her husband of an interest which she believed she owned in certain real property, though made with intent to conceal, did not constitute a concealment within the meaning of this section, where it appeared that in reality she had no interest in the property. The court said:

"It follows that this bankrupt concealed nothing, because there was nothing to conceal; yet when she swore to her schedules she thought the property value existed. She had (we may assume) 'intent' as fully as if her intended act could either help her or harm her creditors. She had the emotion of concealment, but all about nothing.

"It is a mistake, and a widespread one, to regard a discharge in bankruptcy as a reward of virtue, or its denial as a punishment for general moral turpitude. Discharge is a legal right attaching to the status of bankrupt, which right the statute requires the court to recognize, unless it be affirmatively shown that the applicant has done one or more of the acts enumerated specifically or by reference in section 14 of the statute. The mental operation of thinking property is owned, and desiring to conceal it, when in fact no such property exists, does not fall within any of the prohibitions of that section, which, when speaking of concealed or transferred property, always means something that is or ought to be (in common parlance) 'assets of the estate.'"

The six years is measured backward.—To same effect as second paragraph of original annotation, see In re Rubin, (D. C. N. J. 1919) 259 Fed. 607. In discussing the cases in the original annotation, the court said:

"The only question necessary for decision is whether the date of such application or the time of some later proceeding based thereon, controls. The bankrupt contends that the time of the actual determining of the application presents the date from which the six-year period is to be reckoned backward. He cites In re Little (C. C. A. 7) 137 Fed. 521, 70 C. C. A. 105, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 640; In re Jordan (D. C. E. D. Pa.) 142 Fed. 292, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 449; In re Haase (D. C.) 155 Fed. 553, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 528, affirmed 164 Fed. 1022, 90 C. C. A. 667, 21 Am. Bankr. Rep. 928. The judicial expressions contained in these cases relied upon by the bankrupt were held to be obiter in In re Dunphy (D. C.) 206 Fed. 680, 30 Am. Bankr. Rep. 760.

"In In re Little, supra, the question to be decided was whether a second petition in bankruptcy could be entertained within six years from the time of the petitioner's discharge in a voluntary bankruptcy. The decision was that the court's jurisdiction in bankruptcy existed, regardless of whether the bankrupt was entitled to his discharge or not. In the course of the opinion, Judge Jenkins said: 'The expression "within six years," as we think, measures the time between the first and second discharge, and not between the first discharge and the filing of the second petition in bankruptcy.' 137 Fed. 522, 13 Am. Bankr. Rep. 640.

"This is clearly obiter.

"In In re Jordan, supra, Judge McPherson referred to this language with approval and said: 'The section evidently has reference to the judge at the moment when he is about to enter a decree granting or refusing a discharge, and directs him to grant it, unless (inter alia) within six years the bankrupt has been discharged in voluntary proceedings. As it seems to me, this can only mean six years before the time when the second decree is under consideration, and is about to be entered, and I should so hold, even without the authority and the reasoning of In re Little, 142 Fed. 293, 15 Am. Bankr. Rep. 449.'

"This, too, was obiter, as in that case the application for discharge was made more than six years after the earlier discharge was granted, and the objections thereto could have been overruled on the ground that the application for the discharge was made after the six years had expired.

"In In re Haase, supra, the time of making the application for a discharge is not stated, and it is impossible from the brief opinion to say whether the question there was as circumscribed as it is here. The syllabus indicates that 'the commencement of the second proceeding' was rejected as the date from which the six years was to be measured backward; but that Judge Hough agreed with Judges Jenkins and McPherson is manifest, for he said, with reference to clause 5 of section 14b: 'I cannot perceive how this language bears any construction other than that the six years is measured backward from the time of hearing.'

"This case was affirmed (per curiam in open court) without any written opinion.

"In In re Dunphy, supra, relied upon by the objecting creditor, Judge Hale treated all these quoted judicial expressions as dicta and held that 'The six years is measured backward from the date of the filing of the application for discharge, not from the hearing of the application by the court.' (Syllabus.)

"Collier (11th ed., p. 398) and Remington (vol. 3, p. 757) are to the same effect. In choosing between the date of filing the application for discharge and the date of the actual hearing thereof as the time which ends the six-year period, I think In re Dunphy presents the sounder view and is the more likely to reflect the legislative intention.

"A discharge does not necessarily follow the adjudication. Without a petition therefor, none will be granted. Only when such application is made is the judge directed to investigate and determine whether a discharge should be allowed, and a previous discharge within the six years, however brought to the judge's attention, works a denial of the pending application. By General Order 31 and Official Form No. 57 the applicant for a discharge, generally stated, is required to set forth that he has fully complied with all the requirements of the bankruptcy acts. This order and form were adopted and prescribed by the Supreme Court under section 30 of the Bankruptcy Act of 1898, before the passage of the amendment of 1903 (Act Feb. 5, 1903, c. 487, § 4, 32 Stat. 797), which later act inserted clause 5 in section 14b of said act.

"Complying with all the requirements of the bankruptcy acts," when asserted by an applicant for a discharge, since that amendment went into effect, may properly be construed to include a representation that he has not been granted a discharge within six years. Under such a representation the time of the expiration of the six-year period is necessarily confined to a date then definitely known, either the date of the application for the discharge, or an earlier one, say the filing of the petition in the pending bankruptcy proceedings. Such representation should not be held to relate to some future time incapable of being then fixed, and which for one reason or another might be carried beyond the six-year limit.

"Applying for a discharge is a separate proceeding, depending solely upon the initiative of the bankrupt, and no good reason appears why the court's judgment thereon, no matter when rendered, should be based on conditions which did not exist when that particular proceeding was begun. Much might be said in favor of taking the date when the petition in bankruptcy is filed as the one from which the six-year period is to be reckoned backward; but, as the time of making the present application for discharge is within such period, it is not necessary to consider the earlier date, and that question may well be left open until an answer thereto becomes essential."

Revocation of discharge—Fraud of bankrupt.—The fraud referred to in this section is fraud in the procurement of the discharge, and not fraud which, upon objection by the trustee or the creditors, would have prevented the bankrupt from receiving his discharge. In re Weintrob, (E. D. N. C. 1920) 263 Fed. 904.

Time of filing application to revoke.—To same effect as original annotation, see In re Weintrob, (E. D. N. C. 1920) 263 Fed. 904, wherein it was said: "Passing, however, the failure to allege or show fraud on the part of the bankrupt in procuring the discharge, the petitioners are confronted with what appears to be an insuperable obstacle to their application, in that more than two years elapsed between the date of the discharge and filing this petition, whereas the statute fixes one year as the time within which the application must be made. This is not a mere statute of limitation, but an essential prerequisite to the proceeding. The requirement that the applicant be not guilty of undue laches is an additional prerequisite to the right to ask the court to revoke the discharge, and does not dispense with the requirement that the application be made within one year after a discharge shall have been granted."

"Counsel call attention to cases in which the courts have reopened bankruptcy cases more than one year after the discharge to enable the trustee to secure and administer property, either concealed or of which he had no knowledge. In re Shaffer (D. C.) 104 Fed. 982; In re Pierson (D. C.) 174 Fed. 160; Traub v. Marshall Field Co., 182 Fed. 622; 105 C. C. A. 488. In these cases the application was not made to revoke a discharge, but to 'reopen the estate' for the purpose of bringing assets into its administration. This power is conferred by section 2(8), and no limitation is imposed upon the court in respect to the time within which it is to be exercised. This distinction is noted by the courts in the cases cited by counsel. In In re Shaffer, supra, Judge Purnell is careful to say that granting the order to reopen the estate did not affect the discharge, saying: 'The order discharging Shaffer therefrom stands. No act of his can affect it. More than a year having elapsed, no creditor can attack it. As far as the bankruptcy is concerned, therefore, these creditors are barred.'

"While, as said by counsel, the case is, as to the creditors, a hard one, the statute is the source from which the court derives its power to grant the order of revocation, and it may not disregard its positive limitations."

Effect of allegations in petition for revocation.—On a motion to dismiss, because of laches, a petition of a bankrupt's creditors for a revocation of his discharge, an averment in the petition that they had no notice or knowledge that the discharge had been granted until a short while before filing the petition, must be taken as true. In re Weintrob, (E. D. N. C. 1920) 263 Fed. 904.

Composition assented to by creditor as releasing surety.—In Neslor v. Grove, (1919) 90 N. J. Eq. 554, 107 Atl. 281, the facts showed that a corporation became bankrupt and a composition with creditors was approved by the bankruptcy court. Thereafter, a surety of the bankrupt corporation settled with the creditor to whom he became liable by the contract of suretyship by giving his note and indorsing over the note of another. It was held that the surety was not released by the composition. The court said: "We need not consider whether a composition assented to by the creditor would release the surety, or whether, like an ordinary discharge in bankruptcy, it would not alter the liability of the surety. Bankruptcy Act, § 16. Under similar statutes it has been held in other jurisdictions that a creditor who assents to a composition does not thereby discharge the surety. Megrath v. Gray, L. R. 9 C. P. 216, 43 L. J. (U. S.) C. P. 63, Lord Coleridge; Ex parte Jacobs, L. R. 10 Ch. 211, 44 L. J. Bkty. 34, Lord Justice James; Simpson v. Henning, L. R. 10 Q. B. 406, 44

L. J. Q. B. 143; Hill v. Trainer (1880) 49 Wis. 537, 5 N. W. 926.

"The point has not been decided under the Bankruptcy Act of 1898, but the reasoning of the cases cited is applicable. The question, however, is one of the construction of a federal statute, and would more properly be decided by a federal court, especially as it is not necessary for us to decide it now."

Form of judgment in action on bond against three obligors one of whom was a discharged bankrupt.—In Wilcox v. Hersch, (R. I. 1920) 110 Atl. 409, which was an action of debt on bond against three defendants one of whom in a special plea alleged a discharge in bankruptcy, it was held it was proper to enter judgment for plaintiffs in the penal sum of the bond against the defendants, with a perpetual stay of execution against the bankrupt defendant.

All provable debts released—Debts due to nonresident creditors.—Debts due to nonresident creditors when properly scheduled are discharged. Morency v. Landry, (N. H. 1919) 108 Atl. 855, wherein the court said:

"The Bankruptcy Act of July 1, 1898, provides that 'a discharge in bankruptcy shall release a bankrupt from all of his provable debts,' duly scheduled by the bankrupt, with the name of the creditor if known, with certain exceptions not material here. Section 17a. The act also refers in terms to the claims of those residing outside the United States, as entitled to share in the dividends declared. Section 65d. The plain conclusion from these provisions seems to be that debts due to nonresident creditors, when properly scheduled, are discharged, so far as Congress has the power to enact that such a result shall follow. That Congress has the power to so provide, as far as future proceedings in this country are concerned, has not been questioned, and is not open to doubt.

"But it is argued that, while Congress might enact such a law, it has not done so. The chief contention made in favor of this conclusion is that, prior to the enactment of the present statute, earlier bankruptcy acts containing provisions of similar purport had been construed as not affecting the right of the nonparticipating foreign creditor to thereafter maintain a suit in our courts.' Hence it is said that Congress intended to express a like purpose here.

"The claim that prior to 1898 similar provisions in earlier bankruptcy laws had been authoritatively construed favorably to the plaintiff's contention is not borne out by the cases cited. The question has never been passed upon by the Supreme Court of the United States. The case in that court which is relied upon (Ogden v. Saunders, 12 Wheat. 213, 6 L. Ed. 606) raised questions as to the constitutional limitation upon the power of the several states to enact insolvency laws. No question of the meaning of any national bankruptcy law or of the power of Congress to enact the same was involved, and the subject was not considered.

"Phelps v. Borland, 103 N. Y. 406, 9 N. E. 307, 57 Am. Rep. 755, deals with the effect to be given here to a discharge of a foreign debtor in his own country. It does not involve the question now under consideration, and the matter is not referred to in the opinion.

"In Lizardi v. Cohen, 3 Gill (Md.) 430, the question was whether a discharged bankrupt was a competent witness as to a London contract. It was held that the contract was not discharged, and that therefore the witness was interested and incompetent. The decision is put upon the ground stated by Judge Story (Conf. of Laws, § 342) 'that the discharge of a contract, by the law of a place where the contract was not made, or to be performed, will not be a discharge in any other country.' It does not discharge the obligation so as to make the debtor disinterested. He is still liable in the 'other country.' Whether the debt was discharged locally was a question not necessary to the decision, and not discussed.

"The only case cited holding that under the bankruptcy law of 1867 (Act Cong. March 2, 1867, c. 176, 14 Stat. 517) a discharge did not bar a subsequent suit here by a foreign creditor is McDougall v. Page, 55 Vt. 187, 45 Am. Rep. 602, decided in 1882. But it was admitted in the opinion that the holding was contrary to the decisions in other states, and that the question had not been passed upon by the Supreme Court of the United States. Add to this the facts that two judges dissented from the Vermont decision, and that in 1884 still another decision opposed to it was announced (Moore v. Horton, 32 Hun [N. Y.] 393), and it becomes evident that there was not, in 1898, any authoritative interpretation of the act of 1867, such as is now claimed. The matter had not been passed upon by the court of last resort, and the views of others were conflicting. So far as the authorities go, their weight is against rather than for the plaintiff upon the issue of how the earlier laws had been understood at the time the present law was enacted.

"The argument that a law making the discharge efficient locally as to a foreign creditor gives the domestic creditors undue advantages compels the foreign creditor to pursue his debtor into other lands, and undertakes to make a foreign discharge effective in another country where the creditor resides, is based upon a misconception of the effect of the discharge, so far as it relates to foreign creditors who do not participate in the bankruptcy proceedings. Such creditors are not thereby compelled to pursue their debtor into foreign lands. But if they do so pursue him, they are bound by the limitation of remedy which applies to those resident there. Neither does the law undertake to make the discharge effective against the creditor in proceedings brought at his place of residence in Canada. It merely places him on an equality with our own citizens in proceedings in our courts. It is manifest that such a law is not so devoid of just principle that it is always to be inferred that there was no intent to enact it."

Discharge of individual bankrupt from firm debts.—Where a member of a firm files a petition in bankruptcy in his individual capacity and a creditor's claim against the firm is scheduled in his list of creditors and the creditor appears before the referee and examines the bankrupt and has full opportunity to prove the claim against the individual estate of the bankrupt but fails to do so, the debt if a provable one is discharged by a discharge in bankruptcy. Gordon v. Texas Co., (1920) 109 Atl. 368, wherein the court said: "Since this was a provable debt against the plaintiff's individual estate, was it affected by his discharge 'from all debts which are made provable by the Bankruptcy Act against his estate'?" In answer to this question we quote from the note to Horner v. Hamner, L. R. A. 1918E 471: "It seems to follow from the fact that joint debts are provable in an individual proceeding that a discharge therein is effectual as to such claims, since the more recent Bankruptcy Acts provide that a discharge shall relieve a bankrupt from all of his provable debts." After conceding that there has not been complete harmony among decided cases, the annotator concluded that "the late cases, in the main, support the right of the individual bankrupt to a discharge from firm debts."

"In re Kaufman (D. C.) 136 Fed. 262, a case decided in the District Court for the Eastern District of New York in 1905, and frequently cited with approval, presents facts and law peculiarly applicable to the case at bar. The bankrupt filed his individual petition, although previously he had been a member of a partnership. With his petition he filed a schedule of creditors, in which were individual creditors and creditors of the partnership. Notice was sent to all creditors whose names appeared in the schedule. A partnership creditor, although in receipt of notice, did not prove his claim against the individual estate of the bankrupt. The bankrupt was examined and in due time, upon his individual application, was discharged from all debts and claims which were made provable by the Bankruptcy Act against his estate, and which existed on the date of filing his individual petition.

The court held that the creditor above referred to was permitted, if he had any claim against the individual estate of Kaufman, growing out of partnership relations, to prove such claim; and upon his failure to do so his right to collect from Kaufman a judgment against the partnership was foreclosed by the discharge of Kaufman as an individual. The court also declared that the creditor had full opportunity to prove his claim against the bankrupt as an individual, which he neglected to do, and in default thereof the creditor was 'debarred from thereafter claiming that the estate of the individual, or the individual himself, is liable for the payment' of the claim. The Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit cited the Kaufman Case in In re Diamond, 149 Fed. 407, 79 C. C. A. 227, and declared full concurrence in the reasoning and conclusion therein expressed.

"In New York Inst. v. Crockett, 117 App. Div. 269, 102 N. Y. Supp. 412, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 233, it was held that since partnership debts are provable against the individual estate of a bankrupt partner they are discharged by a complete, unlimited discharge of the bankrupt's provable debts, at least when the business has no assets, and the creditor has notice of the proceedings; and this although the debt was scheduled without any reference to the copartnership. To the same effect is the opinion in Berry Bros. v. Sheehan, 115 App. Div. 488, 101 N. Y. Supp. 371, 17 Am. Bankr. Rep. 322.

"In the case at bar, as we have seen, the Texas Company's claim was scheduled in the plaintiff's list of creditors. That company appeared before the referee in bankruptcy and examined the plaintiff. It had full opportunity to prove its claim against the individual estate of the plaintiff, and if it failed to do so, we must hold that under the decisions above cited it is debarred from any attempt now to collect its claim from the plaintiff individually or from the plaintiff's estate."

Revival of discharged debt — Moral obligation supporting new promise.—To same effect as original annotation, see Cobb v. Livonia First Nat. Bank, (N. D. Ga. 1920) 263 Fed. 1000, holding that a debt may be revived by a new promise after a composition.

I. FALSE PRETENSES OR REPRESENTATIONS (p. 716)

Effect of amendment on sec. 63.—The class of provable claims in bankruptcy, as set forth in the provisions of section 63, was not enlarged so as to include mere tort claims by anything in the amendment to section 17 made by the Act of February 5, 1903, confessedly designed to restrict the scope of a discharge in bankruptcy. Schall v. Camora, (1920) 251 U. S. 239, 40 S. Ct. 135, 64 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1918) 250 Fed. 6, 162 C. C. A. 178.

What fraud prevents bar by discharge.—The kind of fraud which exempts from a discharge is positive fraud or fraud in fact, involving moral turpitude or intentional wrong. Sanger v. Barrett, (Tex. Civ. App. 1920) 221 S. W. 1087.

Effect of accepting note.—The acceptance of a note from one who procures a sum of money by fraud, as an evidence of the debt thereby created, after the fraud has been discovered, does not take the case out of this section. Gregory v. Williams, (Kan. 1920) 189 Pac. 932.

Waiver of tort.—Filing a claim for the price of goods the sale of which was procured by false representations is not a waiver of the cause of action for deceit. Sanger v. Barrett, (Tex. Civ. App. 1920) 221 S. W. 1087.

Sufficiency of evidence.—In Brooks v. Pitts, (Ga. App. 1919) 100 S. E. 776, the holding was as follows: "While it is true that a discharge in bankruptcy does not release a bankrupt from liability for obtaining property by false pretenses or false representations (Orr Shoe Co. v. Uphaw, 13 Ga. App. 501, 79 S. E. 362 [2]; Brandt v. Klement, 20 Ga. App. 664, 93 S. E. 255 [1]), and that false representations may consist in the purchasing of goods with no present purpose of paying for them, and in contemplation of a fraudulent insolvency, and that it is a question for the jury to determine from the evidence whether the circumstances adduced, even though they be slight, are sufficient to carry conviction of the existence of fraud perpetrated by false pretenses (Atlanta Skirt Mfg. Co. v. Jacobs, 8 Ga. App. 299, 68 S. E. 1077 [2]), still there was in this case no evidence whatever to show that the goods, for the purchase price of which the present suit was brought, were obtained by false pretenses or representations, consisting in the purchase thereof with no present purpose of paying therefor, and in contemplation of a fraudulent insolvency, or the insolvency of the defendant was in fact fraudulent. The mere fact that the defendant procured credit and promised to pay for an ordinary current purchase of goods and subsequently failed to meet his obligation prior to the time that he voluntarily went into bankruptcy (some thirty-four days thereafter) is not of itself sufficient to bring the case within the ruling above announced, for ordinarily promises to perform some act in the future will not amount to fraud in legal acceptance, although subsequently broken without excuse, and especially is this true of a promise to pay money. Otherwise any breach of contract would amount to fraud. Atlanta Skirt Mfg. Co. v. Jacobs, supra. The statement of the plaintiff that he heard, a week or ten days after the sale, that the defendant was contemplating taking bankruptcy, was hearsay, and, even though admitted without objection, is without probative value."

II. WILFUL AND MALICIOUS INJURIES (p. 720)

Wilful and malicious injuries—Wilful and malicious injury defined.—To the same effect as the original annotation, see Wellman v. Mead, (Vt. 1919) 107 Atl. 396.

Driving automobile against another.—In Bazemore v. Stephenson, (Ga. App. 1919) 100 S. E. 234, the court said: "The sole question in this case is whether the evidence authorized a finding by the jury that the defendant wilfully and intentionally drove his automobile against the automobile in which the plaintiff was riding, so as to constitute . . . a malicious tort. . . . The record fails to disclose any evidence which would have authorized such a finding. The plaintiff himself testified, in effect, that he did not know, and could not say, that the defendant deliberately or intentionally did so. The court, therefore, did not err in directing a verdict for the defendant."

A conversion of property by wrongful sale under a chattel mortgage to the injury of the rights of a holder of the notes secured thereby is a wilful and malicious injury to property. Sabinal Nat. Bank v. Bryant, (Tex. 1920) 221 S. W. 940.

III. MISCELLANEOUS (p. 722)

Liabilities for alimony.—To same effect as original annotation, see In re Pyatt, (D. C. Nev. 1918) 257 Fed. 362.

Support of wife or child.—To same effect as original annotation, see In re Vadner, (D. C. Nev. 1918) 259 Fed. 614.

The phrase "for maintenance or support of wife or child" refers only to the bankrupt's wife or child. It does not include a debt of the bankrupt as surety on a bond given by his brother to the latter's wife as security for the payment to her of certain sums for her support. Such a debt is dischargeable. In re Sullivan, (N. D. N. Y. 1920) 262 Fed. 574. Regarding the dischargeability of such a debt, the court said:

"Subdivision (2) was added by the amendment of 1903, after the decisions of In re Hubbard (D. C.) 98 Fed. 710, and Dunbar v. Dunbar, 190 U. S. 345, 23 Sup. Ct. 757, 47 L. Ed. 1084. This evidently refers to the bankrupt's wife or child, and such debts are now not dischargeable, whether provable or not. But in the case at bar the form of the bond and the fact that it was given as security to a private party shows that the debt is not for breach of public duty, but for failure to meet a contract of guaranty.

"It must be held that section 17 of this statute is not broad enough in language to expressly include in the exceptions a debt such as that now under consideration, if no other part of the statute prohibits that result. Debts due the United States or due a municipality have priority. Taxes are not dischargeable. An obligation upon a bail bond to produce a defendant in court would, if reduced to judgment or treated as a liquidated debt, be dischargeable in bankruptcy; but the United States or the state would have priority in distribution in so far as the assets might be available therefor. Public policy merely requires that the sovereign shall be protected, it does not provide or require that debts to the public, except taxes, shall be nondischargeable. It is for this reason that taxes are made liens upon property.

Under these circumstances it would seem that a penalty provided for in a bond to secure a private individual must be treated as a debt, when the condition of the bond has been met so that the obligation is payable. Unless the bond is so worded as to give the sovereign priority, it is of no higher rank than an obligation to pay an annuity or any other item which is necessary for the support of an individual. In the case at bar the support of the wife and child may have been required so as to protect the public, but the public could not collect upon this bond, or sue therefor, except in the name of the mother (the plaintiff in the action), to whom the bond ran. The possibility that the mother or child might become a public charge would be a sufficient motive for excepting such debt from the bankruptcy statute, if that motive so appealed to Congress; but the present bankruptcy statute does not in terms so provide, and a debt of this sort must be held provable, and therefore dischargeable."

Knowledge of bankrupt proceedings.—In Brooks v. Pitts, (Ga. App. 1919) 100 S. E. 776, it was held that the defendant, having introduced in evidence a certified copy of his discharge in bankruptcy, and it being admitted by the plaintiff that he had actual knowledge of such bankruptcy proceedings in ample time to have proved his debt against the bankrupt, the evidence demanded a verdict for the defendant.

Pleading discharge in action on nonscheduled debt as throwing on plaintiff burden of proof that debt was excepted from discharge.—Cases almost uniformly hold that, where the bankrupt is sued on a debt existing at the time of the filing of the petition, the introduction of the order of discharge makes out a prima facie defense, the burden being then cast upon the plaintiff to show that because of the nature of the claim, failure to give notice or other statutory reason, the debt sued on was by law excepted from the operation of the discharge. Morency v. Landry, (N. H. 1919) 108 Atl. 855 (following Kreitlein v.

Ferger, (1915) 238 U. S. 21, 35 S. Ct. 685, 59 U. S. (L. ed.) 1184), wherein the facts showed that the plaintiff's intestate had a claim against the bankrupt by assignment which was not duly scheduled, and it was held that the plaintiff had the burden of showing that the bankrupt, when he filed his petition, knew of the assignment, since the duty of the bankrupt to schedule the assignee as creditor was dependent on the assignee notifying him of the assignment.

Vol. I, p. 728, sec. 17a (4). [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 578.]

"Officer" as including bank director.—The director of a banking corporation is an "officer" and a discharge in bankruptcy cannot be pleaded in bar to a suit in equity by stockholders against a negligent director for losses occasioned by mismanagement of the bank's affairs, where the demands sued for were unliquidated and had not been reduced to a judgment at the time such discharge was granted. Boyd v. Applewhite, (Miss. 1920) 84 So. 16.

Vol. I, p. 738, sec. 18b. [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 581.]

Motion to dismiss petition.—In the case of In re Connecticut Brass, etc., Corp., (D. C. Conn. 1919) 257 Fed. 445, it was contended that the court could not entertain a motion to dismiss an involuntary petition in bankruptcy because such motion was not made within five days after the return day as required by this section. The court said: "The answer to this objection is simple. A court of bankruptcy is a court of equity, and in the equity court a motion to dismiss, made in good faith and raising substantial questions vitally affecting the merits, may be entertained by the court at any time within a reasonable time, and may be made even on its own motion. And further, if section 59f is read in connection with section 18b, it is clear that there is no merit in the objection made by the petitioning creditors."

Vol. I, p. 740, sec. 18c. [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 582.]

Motion to dismiss petition.—Since a motion to dismiss a petition in bankruptcy is under equity rule 29 in lieu of a demurrer, and sets forth no facts, but raises only a question of law, it need not be verified as provided in this section. In re Connecticut Brass, etc., Corp., (D. C. Conn. 1919) 257 Fed. 445.

Vol. I, p. 741, sec. 18d. [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 583.]

Effect of adjudication.—An adjudication gives complete jurisdiction.—To same effect as original jurisdiction, see In re Diamond,

(C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1919) 259 Fed. 70, 170 C. C. A. 138, wherein the court said:

"Upon the adjudication of bankruptcy, the District Court acquired jurisdiction essentially exclusive to administer the estate of the bankrupts generally, including the determination of claims to or liens upon their property, as well as questions of disbursement and distribution generally. In re Watts & Sachs, 190 U. S. 1, 27, 23 Sup. Ct. 718, 724, 47 L. Ed. 933; U. S. Fidelity Co. v. Bray, 225 U. S. 205, 217, 32 Sup. Ct. 620, 56 L. Ed. 1055; In re Martin (C. C. A. 6) 193 Fed. 841, 846, 113 C. C. A. 627. The property so subject to its jurisdiction included that in its constructive as well as in its actual possession. . . . This exclusive jurisdiction the bankruptcy court was not at liberty to surrender (Fidelity Co. v. Bray, supra, 225 U. S. at page 218, 32 Sup. Ct. 620, 56 L. Ed. 1055); and after bankruptcy supervened the state court (broadly speaking) no longer had power, unless under circumstances of emergency not applicable to the order here, to so dispose of the bankrupts' estate, in whole or in part, as to deprive the bankruptcy court of power to determine finally the propriety of such disposition."

Vol. I, p. 745, sec. 18e. [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 585.]

Vacating adjudications.—The fact that a bankrupt filed a voluntary petition a short time before the death of his mother, under whose will he expected to inherit a substantial amount of property, is not sufficient ground for vacating his adjudication. In re Swift, (N. D. Ga. 1919) 259 Fed. 612.

Res judicata.—An adjudication by the federal court in involuntary bankruptcy proceedings, initiated on the petition of a creditor, that the debtor proceeded against is not insolvent, such adjudication being founded on a verdict of a jury impaneled under this section, is not res judicata of the question of the validity of the claim of the creditor so initiating the proceeding. Granite City Bank v. Tvedt, (Minn. 1920) 177 N. W. 767, wherein the court said: "It appears that some time prior to the commencement of the action involuntary bankruptcy proceedings were initiated against defendant in the federal court of South Dakota on the petition of plaintiff herein, in which it was alleged and stated that plaintiff was a creditor of defendant, and that she was insolvent and unable to pay her debts. Defendant appeared in the proceeding and by her answer put in issue the alleged indebtedness to plaintiff, the petitioning creditor, and also the allegations of her insolvency, and demanded, as she had the right under section 19a of the Bankruptcy Act, a jury trial of the issue of insolvency. Her demand was granted by the court, and that issue was thereafter in the due course of procedure duly submitted to a jury. The jury found that defendant was not insolvent, and judgment dismissing the proceedings was thereupon duly rendered and entered by the federal court. The contention of defendant that the judgment in that proceeding is res judicata of the question as to the validity of the note in suit is not sustained. It seems clear that the judgment can have no such effect. The question was not in fact litigated in that proceeding, defendant had no right to a trial of that feature of the bankruptcy proceeding before the jury (3 Ruling Case Law, 208), and the trial was limited to the single issue of insolvency. With that question determined in favor of defendant, the proceedings were at an end, and nothing remained but to dismiss them; which was accordingly done. The validity of the note was not involved in the issue tried, nor was the determination thereof necessary to a decision of the issue of insolvency. Morris v. Franklin Coal Co., (D. C.) 125 Fed. 998. The judgment therefore is not res judicata thereof. State ex rel. v. Great Northern Railway Co., 134 Minn. 249, 158 N. W. 972; In re Lachenmaier, 203 Fed. 32, 121 C. C. A. 368. The question would probably be different in a case where an adjudication of bankruptcy is made, for that conclusion, presumptively at least, would include a finding of the existence of creditors and perhaps the validity and extent of their respective claims. Brandenburg, Bankruptcy (4th ed.), § 648. But the trial and determination of the preliminary question of insolvency in this case went no further and embraced no other specific issue, presumptively or otherwise. 15 Ruling Case Law, 980; In re Julius, 217 Fed. 3, 133 C. C. A. 328, L. R. A. 1915C 89."

Scope of section.—This section covers all controversies at law and in equity concerning property acquired or claimed by the trustee. In re Vadner, (D. C. Nev. 1918) 259 Fed. 614.

Jurisdiction of bankruptcy court — Enjoining replevin suit in state court.—A bankruptcy court has no jurisdiction to enjoin the prosecution in a state court of a suit to replevy certain bonds alleged to have been converted by the bankrupt, and as to which no claim of ownership is made by him. In re Amy, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 263 Fed. 8.

Jurisdiction of state courts — Suits to set aside fraudulent conveyances.—In In re Vadner, (D. C. Nev. 1918) 259 Fed. 614, it was contended that since a bankrupt could not have instituted an action to set aside a conveyance made by himself for a fraudulent purpose, a state court could not retain jurisdiction after the intervention of the trustee in bankruptcy, because under this section a trustee can bring and prosecute suits only "in the courts where the bankrupt, whose estate is being administered by such trustee, might have brought or prosecuted them if proceedings in bankruptcy had not been instituted."

Answering this contention, the court said: "This argument is without merit. It confuses jurisdiction or the power to decide with the principles on which the decision shall be made. If sound, it would be destructive of the power of the trustee to recover by suit any property fraudulently transferred by the bankrupt, because it would apply to all courts. If the bankrupt before bankruptcy had brought such an action, the court would have taken jurisdiction, and thereafter decided against him, because his participation in the fraud precluded relief."

I. JURISDICTION OF ADVERSE CLAIMS (p. 761)

Bona fide adverse claims.—To same effect as original annotation, see Monroe County v. Keil, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1919) 259 Fed. 76, 170 C. C. A. 144; In re Continental Producing Co., (S. D. Cal. 1919) 261 Fed. 627, wherein it was held that a referee had no jurisdiction to consider without a creditor's consent a counterclaim asserted against him by the bankrupt, and to render an affirmative judgment against him.

Against agent or general assignee of bankrupt.—To same effect as second paragraph of original annotation, see In re Diamond, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1919) 259 Fed. 70, 170 C. C. A. 138.

The possession of a bankrupt's estate by a state court's receiver is not adverse to the bankrupt and any controversy between the bankruptcy court's receiver and the state court's receiver is within the jurisdiction of the bankruptcy court. In re Diamond, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1919) 259 Fed. 70, 170 C. C. A. 138. In discussing this question the court said: "The fact that petitioner disbursed the $1,175 fund under the state court's order of October 29th did not convert a formerly nonadverse holding into one of an adversary character; for he then knew of the bankruptcy proceedings and of the efforts of the bankruptcy court then and there being made to prevent such action. Bryan v. Bernheimer, supra, 181 U. S. at pages 191 and 193, 21 Sup. Ct. 557, 45 L. Ed. 814. The proposition that the bankruptcy court had no power to authorize its receiver (as distinguished from a trustee) to take possession of the fund is answered by what is said in Bryan v. Bernheimer, supra, 181 U. S. at page 195, 21 Sup. Ct. 557, 45 L. Ed. 814, and in Lazarus v. Prentice, 234 U. S. 263, 266, 34 Sup. Ct. 851, 58 L. Ed. 1305. We see no merit in the proposition that the bankruptcy receiver, by going into the state court (as was highly proper in the observance of due comity) to ask that court to direct its receiver to turn over the fund to the bankruptcy receiver, thereby elected that remedy, so submitting himself to the jurisdiction of the state court and inviting the order complained of. The course taken by the bankruptcy receiver was designed to prevent that very action.

"The pendency of proceedings in the state appellate court for review of the state court's action of November 21st, setting aside its previous order for compensation, is not and could not well be urged against the jurisdiction of the bankruptcy court. The commendable action of the state court last referred to terminated any conflict between the federal and state courts. The legality of that order and of its predecessors, as affecting the jurisdiction of the bankruptcy court, is one arising under the bankruptcy law, which it is our duty to decide."

Injunction to restrain forfeiture of lease.—A bankruptcy court has no jurisdiction of a petition by a trustee in bankruptcy to restrain the lessors of a coal lease, held by the bankrupt as sublessee, from enforcing under the terms of the lease a forfeiture thereof, for alleged default in failing to pay royalties on coal mined by the lessee during a specified period, and failure to pay certain taxes likewise covenanted to be paid by the lessee. In re Elk Brook Coal Co., (M. D. Pa. 1919) 261 Fed. 445.

II. JURISDICTION AS AFFECTED BY POSSESSION (p. 765)

Possession of property gives jurisdiction thereover—Possession by act of officers.—To same effect as original annotation, see Monroe County v. Keil, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1919) 259 Fed. 76, 170 C. C. A. 144.

Possession of, or under, assignee for creditors.—To same effect as original annotation, see Galbraith v. Vallely, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 261 Fed. 670, holding that property may be recovered from an assignee by a summary proceeding.

III. JURISDICTION BY CONSENT (p. 767)

Effect of consent.—To same effect as original annotation, see In re Tietje, (E. D. N. Y. 1920) 263 Fed. 917, wherein it was held that a creditor by filing his proof of claim in the bankruptcy court submitted to the jurisdiction of the court the question of the amount due him.

V. SUMMARY AND PLENARY JURISDICTION (p. 770)

Necessity of plenary action.—To same effect as original annotation, see Morris v.

U. S., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1919) 261 Fed. 175; In re Diamond, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1919) 259 Fed. 70, 170 C. C. A. 138; Eisenberg v. Weisskopf, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1919) 258 Fed. 617, 170 C. C. A. 71 (following In re Goldstein, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1914) 216 Fed. 887, 133 C. C. A. 91); In re Franklin Brewing Co. (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 263 Fed. 512 (wherein it was held that a claim by the trustees of a bankrupt corporation against the executors of a deceased officer of the corporation to recover money alleged to have been illegally paid to him, was an adverse claim which could not be disposed of by summary proceedings); Martin v. Oliver, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 260 Fed. 89, 171 C. C. A. 125 (wherein the court said: "An adverse claimant, whose lien attaches within four months prior to the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, and which is not conditioned by the insolvency of the debtor at the time such lien attached, has all the rights and privileges of an adverse claimant whose lien attached more than four months before the filing of the petition, because it is excluded from the provisions of section 67f, and is entitled to the trial of its claim in a plenary suit").

Summary jurisdiction.—To same effect as original annotation, see In re Diamond, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1919) 259 Fed. 70, 170 C. C. A. 138; In re Clayton, (D. C. N. J. 1919) 259 Fed. 911; In re Looschen Piano Case Co., (D. C. N. J. 1919) 261 Fed. 93, in which last cited case it was said:

"In cases in which third parties hold property which the trustee believes belongs to the bankrupt and is a part of his estate in bankruptcy, great care should be exercised, for it is a serious matter to adjudge by summary process that the property claimed by one person belongs to the estate in bankruptcy of another, and therefore must be surrendered to his trustee. At the same time it should be borne in mind that the interest of creditors must not be sacrificed by long and useless litigation. The bankruptcy court is clothed with power 'to cause the estate of bankrupts to be collected, reduced to money, and distributed, and determine controversies in relation thereto.' Power is also given to third parties, under certain conditions, to have their title to property litigated in a plenary suit; but the right to resort to such procedure does not preclude litigation of the rights of parties by summary proceedings in bankruptcy courts as distinguished from controversies by plenary suits, where the trustee applies for an order requiring third parties to turn over property in their possession, and bases his application upon the ground that the property in question belongs to the bankrupt and is held without color of right. If such application is made, the referee is bound to make the inquiry, and this inquiry requires a decision upon the merits. Mueller v. Nugent, 184 U. S. 1, 22 Sup. Ct. 269, 46 L. ed. 405. If the referee decides that the application is made in good faith, and the applicant has color of title, though it may be of doubtful validity, there should be a plenary suit to try the question. If the referee decides that the claim to the property by third parties is not made in good faith and is without actual merit or legal foundation, the referee should regard the property as subject to the jurisdiction of the bankruptcy court, as property of the bankrupt, and should order it in summary proceedings to be surrendered to the court or trustee. In re Holbrook Shoe & Leather Co. (D. C.) 165 Fed. 973, 976."

Validity of sale by bankruptcy.—The bankruptcy court has summary jurisdiction to decide whether an alleged sale of a life estate by a bankrupt to his son, was made in good faith or was merely a colorable claim. Gray v. Gudger, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1919) 260 Fed. 931, 171 C. C. A. 573.

State court receivers.—A bankruptcy court has power, by summary order, to compel a state court receiver to turn over money of the bankrupt to the bankruptcy court, to await its action upon the question of compensation, fees, and disbursements of the receiver. In re Diamond, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1919) 259 Fed. 70, 170 C. C. A. 138.

Waiver of objections to jurisdiction.—When an answer to the merits is not interposed until after an objection to the summary jurisdiction of a referee is overruled pleading to the merits is not a waiver of the objection. In re Looschen Piano Case Co., (D. C. N. J. 1919) 261 Fed. 93.

VI. JURISDICTION OF STATE COURTS (p. 772)

Jurisdiction of state courts.—An order of the bankruptcy court upon the receiver of a state court to deliver property to the bankrupt without first causing notice of the bankruptcy proceedings to be given to that court, and without causing a motion or application to be made to it for an order on its receiver to deliver over the property, is erroneous. Martin v. Oliver, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 260 Fed. 89, 171 C. C. A. 125. Regarding the state court's jurisdiction, the court said:

"That court had full jurisdiction of the parties to the suit before it, of the property in its possession, and of the issues, whether or not Lula M. Oliver was insolvent when the levy was made, and whether or not the property was exempt when the petition in bankruptcy was filed and the adjudication in bankruptcy was made. It proceeded with its suit, so far as this record shows, without any notice to it of the bankruptcy proceedings, or any motion, or application in or to it, regarding the possession or disposition of the property, either by the bankruptcy court or any of its officers, and rendered its final decree that the property was not exempt, that McNeill's lien upon it was valid, and that the property be sold to pay it. As the Supreme Court said in Jones v. Springer, 226 U. S. 148, 155, 33 Sup. Ct. 64, 65 (57 L. ed.

161), 'But in a case like the present, where, under an attachment levied before the petition was filed, the property had been put into the hands of a receiver, without notice of the petition, it is not true that all power and jurisdiction of the local court were ended before notice of the bankruptcy proceedings.' If the bankruptcy court or its officers took any right or title to this property or to its possession, they took it from Lula M. Oliver pendente lite, and subject to the actual possession and lawful custody of that property in the chancery court. If they had any such rights the Arkansas court, on a suitable application or motion, would undoubtedly have preserved and enforced them."

II. Controversies arising in bankruptcy proceedings.

IV. Review by United States Supreme Court of decisions of Circuit Courts of Appeals.

II CONTROVERSIES ARISING IN BANKRUPTCY PROCEEDINGS (p. 776)

Exclusiveness of section 24a.—To same effect as original annotation, see Youtsey v. Niswonger, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1918) 258 Fed. 16, 169 C. C. A. 154.

Sections 24b and 24a contrasted.—To same effect as original annotation, see In re Dressler Producing Corp., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 262 Fed. 257.

Motion to reopen case.—In Youtsey v. Niswonger, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1918) 258 Fed. 16, 169 C. C. A. 154, an appeal was taken from an order denying a motion to reopen a case on the ground that the bankrupt had made an error in scheduling his interest in certain land. In affirming the decision of the lower court, it was said:

"An ultimate controversy as to the title of the land, duly instituted as between the bankrupt estate and adverse claimants, would doubtless be a 'controversy' within section 24a. But such controversy was not ultimately submitted. While the denial of the motion was based upon an adverse construction of the bankrupt's claimed title, such decision was incidental to the denial of the motion to reopen. Had administration been reopened upon the court's conception that the bankrupt owned an estate in fee simple, the reopening of administration would not have been an adjudication in the trustee's favor or against adverse claimants. It would still have been necessary to an adjudication that further proceedings be instituted to test the title, with opportunity to all adversely interested to be heard, including, at least, the other son of the bankrupt and perhaps other contingent heirs. Indeed, the bankrupt's son and wife, who were heard in opposition to the motion to reopen, were evidently notified of the hearing, not as claimants of the fee, but only as purchasers of the life estate; and, as already said, even the purchasers were not made parties to this appeal. The motion to reopen was a proceeding of the most summary character, not even accompanied by possession on the part of the estate of the property in question. It would seem a strained construction to hold this proceeding, so far as it had gone, as of a plenary character, or more than merely a step in the course of administration. If of the latter character, it was reviewable by petition to revise, under section 24b. In re Jacobs, (C. C. A. 6) 241 Fed. 620, 154 C. C. A. 378; Barnes v. Pampel, (C. C. A. 6) 192 Fed. 525, 113 C. C. A. 81—remedies under sections 24a and 24b being mutually exclusive. Barnes v. Pampel, supra. We prefer, however, not to base our disposition of the case upon the nonappealability of the order below, for we think the bankrupt's claim of title on which the motion below was based is without merit."

Decisions held appealable.—A controversy between two claimants, whose claims have been allowed, as to the priority of their respective claims against the bankrupt's estate, is a proceeding arising in bankruptcy and appealable under this section. In re Ieterman, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 260 Fed. 543, 171 C. C. A. 327.

An order for the delivery of property to the petitioner in a reclamation proceeding presents a controversy arising in bankruptcy which is reviewable by an appeal under this section. In re Herbert, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 263 Fed. 351.

IV. REVIEW BY UNITED STATES SUPREME COURT OF DECISIONS OF CIRCUIT COURTS OF APPEALS (p. 788)

Decisions held not appealable.—An appeal will not lie to the federal Supreme Court from a decree of a federal circuit court of appeals which directs the dismissal by a bankruptcy court of a bill setting up as the ground of jurisdiction that it is ancillary to the bankruptcy proceedings. Pell v. McCabe, (1919) 250 U. S. 573, 40 S. Ct. 43, 64 U. S. (L. ed.) —, dismissing appeal (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 256 Fed. 512, 168 C. C. A. 16.

Vol. I, p. 791, sec. 24b. [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 611.]

Appeal or petition to revise as exclusive or optional right.—To same effect as first paragraph of original annotation, see Youtsey v. Niswonger, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1918) 258 Fed. 16, 169 C. C. A. 154.

Where an aggrieved party does not proceed to bring his appeal according to the rules laid down by the appellate court, that court will not entertain the appeal. Thus, where an appeal is taken when the proper appellate remedy is by petition to revise, the appeal will be dismissed. In re Reilly, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 258 Fed. 121, 169 C. C. A. 207.

Appeal united with petition.—To same effect as original annotation, see Monroe County v. Keil, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1919) 259 Fed. 76, 170 C. C. A. 144.

Questions and orders reviewable or not reviewable on petition.—An order denying a motion to dismiss bankruptcy proceedings is reviewable by petition to revise. In re Dressler Producing Corp., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 262 Fed. 257, wherein it was said:

"Petitions to revise bring up questions of law only; appeals, both of law and of fact. Elliott v. Toepfner, 187 U. S. 327, 23 Sup. Ct. 133, 47 L. ed. 200. A petition to revise calls up any order or judgment and judicial action in bankruptcy proceedings; appeals, final judgments only. Duryea Power Co. v. Sternbergh, 218 U. S. 299, 31 Sup. Ct. 25, 54 L. ed. 1047. If the question arises in an independent suit to determine the claim necessary for the settlement of the estate, or if it arises in one of the cases specified in section 25a, review may be had by appeal; but if the question pertains to and arises in a bankruptcy proceeding, and does not fall within either of the cases specified in section 25a, review may be had by petition to revise in matter of law. Under section 24a, a controversy arising between a trustee and a third party in respect to property either in the possession of the trustee or a third party, the review in the Circuit Court of Appeals is had on appeal and in the same manner as any other case; but in case of such controversy the revisory power is not available. On the review, the judgment in independent suits to recover assets, or to determine controversies arising relative to the bankrupt estate, the remedy is by appeal. We are of the opinion that the remedy of the aggrieved party here was by a petition to revise."

Summary proceedings are reviewable only by a petition to revise. In re Dressler Producing Corp., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 262 Fed. 257.

Assumption of jurisdiction to determine adverse claim.—To same effect as original annotation, see In re Dressler Producing Corp., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 262 Fed. 257; Monroe County v. Keil, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1919) 259 Fed. 76, 170 C. C. A. 144.

Decision that referee had no jurisdiction of bill filed by trustee to avoid alleged fraudulent transfers.—A decision of a bankruptcy court that the referee had no jurisdiction of a bill filed by the trustee to avoid certain transfers as in fraud of creditors is reviewable in the Circuit Court of Appeals by petition to revise under section 24b, although, had the District Court sustained the jurisdiction and passed upon the merits, the exclusive remedy would have been by appeal under section 24a, as the court thereby would have determined a controversy arising in bankruptcy proceedings. Weidhorn v. Levy, (1920) 253 U. S. 268, 40 S. Ct. 534, 64 U. S. (L. ed.) —, reversing (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1918) 253 Fed. 28, 165 C. C. A. 48.

Misrepresentations by trustee on sale of bankrupt's property.—A controversy regarding the fact whether a trustee in bankruptcy made misrepresentations in selling certain assets of the bankrupt estate, is a proceeding in bankruptcy, and should be brought to the attention of an appellate court by a petition to revise under this section. In re Reilly, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 258 Fed. 121, 169 C. C. A. 207.

"Matter of law."—To same effect as original annotation, see In re De Rau, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1919) 260 Fed. 732, 171 C. C. A. 470; In re Leterman, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 260 Fed. 543, 171 C. C. A. 327.

Presumptions as to evidence.—On a petition to revise orders of the bankruptcy court where there is no evidence in the record, it will be assumed that it supports the allegations of the petition on which the orders were made. Gray v. Gudger, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1919) 260 Fed. 931, 171 C. C. A. 573.

Vol. I, p. 812, sec. 25a. [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 623.]

Parties to appeal.—On an appeal by a creditor of a bankrupt from an order confirming a composition, neither the consenting creditors nor a representative fraction of them are necessary parties. In re Gottlieb, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 262 Fed. 730.

Questions of fact—Concurrent findings of referee or jury and court below.—To same effect as original annotation, see Thompson v. Lamb, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1920) 263 Fed. 61.

The report of a referee in favor of a claim, based on an oral hearing of conflicting evidence and confirmed by the bankruptcy court, will not be reviewed. In re Morrison, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1919) 261 Fed. 355.

Finding of judge.—Where the evidence is conflicting and the witnesses are not before it, an appellate court will not disturb a finding by a lower court that certain payments made by a bankrupt to one of his creditors were preferential, unless it is satisfied that the conclusion reached by the lower court was clearly wrong. Tremont Trust Co. v. Cohen, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1920) 263 Fed. 81.

A judgment denying an adjudication on the ground that the bankrupt has transferred his property with intent to hinder, delay and defraud his creditors, will not be disturbed by the appellate court unless it appears that the evidence clearly preponderates against it. Marine Nat. Bank v. Swigart, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1920) 262 Fed. 854.

Writ of error or appeal.—A judgment denying an adjudication of bankruptcy without a jury trial is reviewable only by appeal and not by a writ of error. And the fact that the bankrupt, after having demanded a jury, withdrew his demand, does not alter the case, since the necessity for writ of error relates only to an actual, not a potential, trial by jury. Marine Nat. Bank v. Swigart, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1920) 262 Fed. 854, wherein it was said:

"The question whether appeal or error is the proper remedy is more or less important as affecting the scope of our review, notwithstanding section 4 of chapter 448 of the Act of September 8, 1916 (39 Stat. p. 727), forbids dismissal of appeal or writ of error merely because the other remedy should have been taken. In our opinion appeal is the proper remedy. The statute (Bankr. Act, § 25a) expressly gives a right of appeal 'as in equity' from an order denying an adjudication of bankruptcy. It is only when a jury is had that writ of error is needed to enable review or rulings upon the trial. Loveland on Bankruptcy (4th ed.), pp. 1439 and 1441; Elliott v. Toepfner, 187 U. S. 327, 23 Sup. Ct. 133, 47 L. ed. 200. The fact that appellee, after having demanded a jury, withdrew his demand, does not alter the case. The necessity for writ of error relates only to an actual, not a potential, trial by jury. Upon this appeal the whole case is open for review, on both law and facts. Elliott v. Toepfner, supra; Merchants' Bank v. Cole, (C. C. A. 6) 149 Fed. 708, 79 C. C. A. 414. The limitation upon the scope of review recognized in Edwards v. La Dow, 230 Fed. 378, 383, 144 C. C. A. 520, as applicable to that suit at law, where waiver of jury was not in writing, has no application to the hearing of this petition for adjudication in bankruptcy, on which a jury is not required, unless specially claimed."

Judgment on composition.—To same effect as original annotation, see In re Gottlieb, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 262 Fed. 730; In re O'Gara Coal Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1919) 260 Fed. 742, 171 C. C. A. 480.

Sufficiency of evidence.—In Goerner v. Eastman, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1919) 261 Fed. 177, it was held that the evidence was sufficient to sustain an order of the bankruptcy court denying the bankrupt's application for a discharge on the ground that he had obtained money from a creditor upon a materially false statement in writing by him to such creditor.

Vol. I, p. 826, sec. 25a (3). [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 634.]

Assertion of lien on property in bankruptcy court's custody.—Where a creditor seeks to assert a lien on property which, at the time of the bankruptcy, passed into the possession of the bankruptcy court and the proceeds from the sale of which are constructively in its possession, a decree denying such lien presents a controversy in bankruptcy, reviewable by appeal, rather than by petition to revise. In re Sola e Hijo, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1919) 261 Fed. 822.

Vol. I, p. 829, sec. 25a (3). [Time for taking appeal—hearing.] [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 635.]

Provision as mandatory.—The provision of this section regarding the time within which an appeal must be taken is mandatory, and an appeal not taken within such time will be dismissed. Youtsey v. Niswonger, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1918) 258 Fed. 16, 169 C. C. A. 154.

Order not within section.—An appeal from an order denying a motion to reopen a case on the ground that the bankrupt made an error in scheduling his interest in certain land is one relating to a "controversy arising in bankruptcy," and is not limited to ten days by this section but may be taken within six months under section 24a. Youtsey v. Niswonger, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1918) 258 Fed. 16, 169 C. C. A. 154.

Conspiracy to violate this section, see notes under PENAL LAWS, sec. 37, post.

Nature of bankruptcy proceedings as affecting offense.—In a prosecution under this section it is immaterial whether the bankruptcy was voluntary or involuntary. Tugendhaft v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1920) 263 Fed. 562. The court said:

"In the part of the court's charge dealing with what was required to be found to support a verdict of guilty, the following statement was made: 'Now it is immaterial whether he is in voluntary or involuntary bankruptcy.'

"This statement was excepted to, and the making of it is assigned as error. The statute makes it a criminal offense for one knowingly and fraudulently to conceal while a bankrupt from his trustee any part of the property belonging to his estate in bankruptcy. Concealment in anticipation of bankruptcy was not charged, and is not a criminal offense. To support the charge made it is necessary to prove concealment after bankruptcy. If after bankruptcy the bankrupt does what the statute denounces, criminality attaches, whether the bankruptcy was voluntary or involuntary. The legal consequences of a concealment after bankruptcy being the same whether the bankruptcy was of the one kind or the other, the court was not in error in making the above-quoted statement."

Conspiracy to conceal.—Insolvent debtors may be convicted of a conspiracy to conceal their assets, so that their creditors cannot reach them through bankruptcy proceedings which the debtors are expecting to be instituted. Meyer v. U. S., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1919) 258 Fed. 212, 169 C. C. A. 280.

Indictment—Duplicity.—An indictment for a violation of this section which charges the bankrupt with several acts of concealment, is not duplicitous where it appears that such acts were merely component parts of a single continuous concealment. Tugendhaft v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1920) 263 Fed. 562.

Advice of counsel as defense.—In a prosecution for a violation of this section the fact that the defendant presented a claim on advice of counsel constitutes no defense where it appears that he did not fully and in good faith lay the facts in regard to the claim before his counsel. Levinson v. U. S., (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1920) 263 Fed. 257. Regarding such a defense, the court said:

"It is alleged to involve a situation where a man has in good faith submitted his claim to competent counsel and followed his advice, and is now convicted of a crime by reason of following such advice. Were the situation as above stated, a court might well pause before sustaining a sentence upon a defendant. But, when the facts of this case and the real issue are clearly grasped, it will be seen no such situation as above exists.

"In the first place, the statute provides: 'A person shall be punished by imprisonment, for a period not to exceed two years, upon conviction of the offense of having knowingly and fraudulently . . . presented under oath any false claim or proofs against the estate of a bankrupt.'

"Applying that statute to the present case, the issue was: Did the defendant present a claim for money loaned to the bankrupt, which he knew was false and fraudulent? Had he loaned his money to the company? If he had not, a claim presented for loaned money was false and fraudulent, and the presentation of such unfounded false claim was, by the statute, made a crime. Whether the defendant loaned the company money was a fact, and the defendant, and he alone, knew whether he had in fact loaned the money to the company. He says he loaned it, but the jury has found he did not, and consequently that when he testified he had loaned his money to the company, he was not telling the truth. When, therefore, the defendant went to counsel, and told counsel, as he no doubt did, that he had loaned his money to the company, he had not, as the point quoted below assumes, 'fully and in good faith laid the facts in regard to his claim against the Saunders Shoe Company before his counsel.'"

Admissibility of evidence.—In a prosecution for a violation of this section evidence of the books of the bankrupt company, the explanatory testimony of accountants who examined them, and statements as to the financial condition of the company made to credit companies and of which the defendant had knowledge, is admissible as being pertinent and helpful in determining whether the defendant really loaned his money to the bankrupt company as he claimed or paid it to the company in purchase of its stock. Levinson v. U. S., (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1920) 263 Fed. 257.

Referee's jurisdiction to determine counterclaims, see annotations to sec. 68a, infra, p. 445.

Review of proceedings had before referee.—A referee in bankruptcy is not in any sense a separate court nor endowed with any independent judicial authority. He is merely an officer of the court of bankruptcy, having no power except as conferred by the order of reference, read in the light of the Bankruptcy Act, and his judicial functions, however important, are subject always to the review of the bankruptcy court. Weidhorn v. Levy, (1920) 253 U. S. 268, 40 S. Ct. 534, 64 U. S. L. ed. —, reversing (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1918) 253 Fed. 28, 165 C. C. A. 48.

Review by referee of allowed claim.—In In re De Rau, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1919) 260 Fed. 732, 171 C. C. A. 470, it was contended that the referee alone had jurisdiction to re-examine a claim which had been previously allowed. Answering this contention, the court said:

"The proposition that the referee alone had jurisdiction to re-examine the claim does not impress us. It is not accurate to say that the action allowing the claim was solely that of the referee; in a much more proper sense it was directly the action of the district judge. It is shown not only by the referee's record, but by that in the office of the clerk of the District Court, that petitioner filed with the trustee a claim for $1,567.30; that the referee, in accordance with a then existing practice, certified the claim to the district judge, with recommendation that it be allowed at $1,536.05; that the judge allowed the claim at $1,356.05. The referee seems to have made no further order. It is immaterial that this practice of submitting to the district judge directly the allowance of claims of this nature, instead of having the allowance made by the referee subject to review under the act, was (as petitioner contends) not required by any actual rule of the District Court. It was apparently based upon an existing practice, presumably required by the district judge.

The latter had complete authority, notwithstanding the general reference, to take to himself the allowance of claims of this nature. The action had was as effectively that of the judge as if had under a positive order withdrawing that subject from the referee's consideration, or as if the referee had in the first instance allowed the claim, and the matter then been brought before the district judge for review."

Taking exceptions before referee—Necessity.—To same effect as original annotation, see In re Schwab, (E. D. N. Y. 1919) 258 Fed. 772, holding that where an exception is not taken to the overruling of an objection to a referee's jurisdiction, the objection will not be considered on a review of the referee's order by the court.

Ruling as to discharge.—Where a creditor files no exceptions to a referee's order recommending the bankrupt's discharge, he cannot obtain a review of such order by the bankruptcy court. In re Stubblefield, (W. D. Tex. 1919) 260 Fed. 591.

Determination on review—Petition not before referee.—Where an amended petition was not before a referee, the court cannot consider it on the reargument on a certificate for review. In re Levy, (E. D. Pa. 1919) 261 Fed. 432.

Weight of referee's findings of fact.—To same effect as original annotation, see In re Rosen, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1920) 263 Fed. 704; In re Bradley, (D. C. Conn. 1920) 263 Fed. 446; In re Devon Manor Corp., (E. D. Pa. 1919) 257 Fed. 766; In re Lake Chelan Land Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1919) 257 Fed. 497, 168 C. C. A. 501, 5 A. L. R. 557; In re Bass, (E. D. Pa. 1919) 257 Fed. 137.

Weight dependent on character of evidence.—To same effect as original annotation, see Walter v. Atha, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1919) 262 Fed. 76, holding that where the referee's finding is a deduction from established facts or uncontradicted evidence, the judge reviewing it is at liberty to draw his own inferences and deduce his own conclusions and that the same rule applies to a review by an appellate court.

Vol. I, p. 904, sec. 38a (4). [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 659.]

Jurisdiction of suit to set aside fraudulent transfer.—A referee in bankruptcy, by virtue of a general reference under General Orders in Bankruptcy No. 12, which provides that "thereafter all the proceedings, except such as are required by the act or by these General Orders to be had before the judge, shall be had before the referee," has no jurisdiction of a plenary suit in equity brought by the trustee in bankruptcy against a third party to set aside a fraudulent transfer or conveyance under § 70e of the Bankruptcy Act, (1 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 1212) and affecting property not in the custody or control of the court of bankruptcy. Weidhorn v. Levy, (1920) 253 U. S. 268, 40 S. Ct. 534, 64 U. S. (L. ed.) —, reversing (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1918) 253 Fed. 28, 166 C. C. A. 48.

Referee's commissions.—To same effect as original annotation, see In re Motridge, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1919) 258 Fed. 229, 169 C. C. A. 539, wherein an order of the District Court allowing a referee as commission one per cent of the total amount of the estate, was reversed, the court saying:

"We are of the opinion that the court below was in error. Section 40 of the original act of 1898 (Act July 1, 1898, c. 541, 30 Stat. 556) provided as compensation to referees 'from estates which have been administered before them one per centum commissions on sums to be paid as dividends and commissions,' and section 48 of that act provided that trustees should receive 'from estates which have been administered such commissions on all moneys disbursed by them as may be allowed by the courts.'

"Both of those sections were amended Feb. 5, 1903, the former being made to read as follows: 'Referees shall receive as full compensation for their services, payable after they are rendered, a fee of fifteen dollars deposited with the clerk at the time the petition is filed in each case, except when a fee is not required from a voluntary bankrupt, and twenty-five cents for every proof of claim filed for allowance, to be paid from the estate, if any, as a part of the cost of administration, and from estates which have been administered before them one per centum commissions on all moneys disbursed to creditors by the trustee, or one-half of one per centum on the amount to be paid to creditors upon the confirmation of a composition.'

"We agree with the Court of Appeals of the Fourth Circuit in the case of Bray, Trustee, etc., v. Johnson, Referee, et al., 166 Fed. 57, 91 C. C. A. 643, that there is no mistaking that language. By it Congress not only specifically declared what referees should receive, namely, one per centum on all moneys disbursed to creditors by the trustee, but by section 72 of the same act of February 5, 1903, further expressly provided: 'That neither the referee . . . nor the trustee shall in any form or guise, receive, nor shall the court allow them, any other or further compensation for their services than that expressly authorized and prescribed in this act.'

"Moreover, by section 2 of the General Order No. 35, prescribed by the Supreme Court for the enforcement of the Bankruptcy Law, it is also declared that: 'The compensation of referees prescribed by this act shall be in full compensation for services performed by them under the Act or under these General Orders.

Vol. I, p. 923, sec. 41b. [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 674.]

Appeal in forma pauperis.—A bankrupt may be permitted to prosecute an appeal in forma pauperis from an order of the bankruptcy court adjudging him to be in contempt for failure to pay over a certain sum of money to his trustee, where it appears that he questions the sufficiency of the evidence in the contempt proceedings as to his ability to pay the money. Henkin v. Fousek, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1920) 262 Fed. 957.

Modification of contempt order.—In In re Rosen, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1920) 263 Fed. 704, it was held that an order of the District Court requiring a bankrupt to pay over to his trustee a certain sum of money within 15 days, or in default thereof be committed to jail, should be modified by allowing the bankrupt to show cause after default why he should not be punished for contempt. The court said:

"Judge Sanborn ordered Rosen to pay over $1,900.47 within 15 days, and in the same order directed that in default thereof Rosen should be committed to jail. Inasmuch as Judge Sanborn saw fit to reduce the amount theretofore required to be paid by Rosen, he was entitled to a reasonable time thereafter in which to pay, which was given. Whether he should be held in contempt for failure to make such payment must have necessarily depended upon conditions existing at the expiration of that time. Re Baum, 169 Fed. 410, 94 C. C. A. 632.

"The order should be modified, by omitting that part which directs that the bankrupt, if he is in default in making said payment within 15 days, shall be committed to the county jail. The District Court is directed to enter an order, requiring the bankrupt, within 15 days after notice to him of the filing of the mandate in the District Court, to show cause why he should not be punished for contempt for failure to comply with the order of the District Court."

Vol. I, p. 933, sec. 46. [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 681.]

Ground for removal.—Although a trustee acted as trustee and attorney in fact for a bankrupt in paying his debts prior to the bankruptcy, this is not ground for his removal where it appears that on the adjudication he made a full accounting and turned over all the bankrupt's property remaining in his hands and it is not asserted that he has done anything since his appointment to justify removal. In re Holden, (N. D. N. Y. 1919) 258 Fed. 720.

Collection and reduction of assets.—It is the duty of the trustee in bankruptcy to take into custody for the benefit of creditors, such properties as belong to the bankrupt. In re Amy, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 263 Fed. 8.

Assessment of stockholders.—"There are two entirely separate and distinct branches of the proceedings to compel the payment by a stockholder of a bankrupt corporation of any moneys due on his stock, viz.: First, a determination by the court as to whether it is necessary to assess such stock for the purpose of paying the debts of the bankrupt and the necessary costs of administration, and, if so, then the fixing of the rate of the assessment and the levying of the same upon whatever stock may appear prima facie to be subject thereto; and, second, if a stockholder disputes his individual liability as prima facie determined, then the institution by the trustee of an appropriate suit or proceeding to fix definitely his liability or nonliability for the assessment and the amount thereof. The first branch is purely administrative and is binding upon any stockholder in any subsequent proceedings instituted to fix his personal liability; but in respect to the second branch the stockholder may make any defense which may affect his individual liability, other than the correctness of the administrative order." Bergdoll v. Harrigan, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1920) 263 Fed. 279, wherein it was held that the appearance of a stockholder at a hearing before a referee for the purpose of contesting the necessity and advisability of making an assessment did not subject him to the jurisdiction of the referee so as to permit the latter to finally adjudicate his liability to such assessment.

Trustee's right to collect assets.—Since the amendment of 1910.—To same effect as original annotation, see In re A. E. Savage Baking Co., (D. C. N. J. 1919) 259 Fed. 976, holding that where conditional sales of chattels were void as to the trustee and judgment creditors because not properly recorded, the referee should sell the chattels free and clear of all liens.

Trustee's right as execution creditor.—Where, although there is an absolute transfer of property by the bankrupt to one of his creditors with a lease back, the actual purpose of the transaction is to give the creditor security for a loan on property which the bankrupt had in his possession and never surrendered, the bankrupt's trustee, being vested with the rights of an execution creditor under the provisions of this section, is entitled to the proceeds from the sale of the property. Burnett v. Frederick, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1920) 263 Fed. 681. Regarding the trustee's right, the court said:

"Under these facts, the referee committed no error in denying Mrs. Burnett's petition. When the bankruptcy occurred, the bankrupt company was indebted (although the time for the payment of their claims had previously been extended to a date subsequent to the filing of the petition for adjudication) in a considerable amount to creditors whose debts antedated the Burnett transfer and lease. If one of these creditors had eventually secured judgment against the Drug Company, and had issued an execution thereon, and levied on these fixtures, and if Mrs. Burnett had given notice of the unrecorded and unnoted lien which the referee had found the facts of the case alone amounted to, would the execution of the Drug Company's creditor or this attempted lien of Mrs. Burnett's have prevailed? Under such facts, the attempted secret lien must yield, under the laws of Pennsylvania, to the superior right of the creditor's execution levied on the goods in the open, unchanged, and credit-inviting possession of the debtor. Such being the superior right of an execution creditor of the Drug Company to this property, when the bankruptcy occurred, sections 47a and 70e of the Bankrupt Law vested the right of the execution creditor in Frederick, the trustee."

Unrecorded conditional sale.—To same effect as original annotation, see In re Mutual Motors Co., (E. D. Mich. 1919) 260 Fed. 341, holding that an unrecorded conditional sale was void as to the trustee.

As against a chattel mortgage given by the bankrupt the trustee has the rights of a judgment creditor. Union First Nat. Bank v. Wegener, (1919) 94 Ore. 318, 181 Pac. 990, 186 Pac. 41, holding unrecorded chattel mortgage under which possession had been taken superior to rights of trustee. See to the same effect Kettenbach v. Walker, (1920) 32 Idaho 544, 186 Pac. 912, wherein it appeared that possession was taken less than four months before the filing of the petition.

Moneys paid for completing work commenced by bankrupt as recoverable by trustee.—Where a construction company, before bankruptcy, enters into a building contract whereby it engages to erect and complete a building on or before a specified date, with a provision authorizing the owner, upon failure or inability of the contractor to secure sufficient supplies, material, or labor to prosecute the work continuously and diligently to completion, to secure the same and deduct the cost thereof from any amount then due the contractor or which may thereafter be due him, and a subcontractor, fearing the insolvency of his principal, refuses to proceed with his part of the work, but later completes it after receiving verbal assurance from the owner, in accordance with the provision of the contract, that the latter will pay him out of the balance due the contractor, and he does so pay him, the sum so paid constitutes no part of the assets of the bankrupt, and recovery thereof may not be had at the suit of the trustee. Custard v. McNary, (W. Va. 1920) 102 S. E. 216.

Sale of property—Property in hands of third person having lien.—Property sold by a trustee not in his possession but in that of a person having a lien thereon cannot be recovered by the purchaser by an action of trover because the sale did not vest in him that title and that right to immediate possession which are necessary to the maintenance of such an action. American Bottle Co. v. Finney, (Ala. 1919) 82 So. 106.

Time as of which trustee takes status of creditor.—To same effect as original annotation, see Scales v. Holje, (Cal. App. 1919) 183 Pac. 308.

The rights of an ancillary receiver under this section are those of an execution creditor, and it is well settled that the priority rights of such creditors as against claims for superior liens must be determined by the laws of the state wherein the execution is levied. Hoyt v. Zibell, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1919) 259 Fed. 186, 170 C. C. A. 254.

Vol. I, p. 950, sec. 48 (d). [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 690.]

Compensation of state receivers.—The determination of the question of compensation of a receiver appointed by a state court to take charge of a bankrupt's property, rests with the bankruptcy court, although it will give due weight to any finding on the subject by the state court. In re Diamond, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1919) 259 Fed. 70, 170 C. C. A. 138, wherein the court said: "Any other rule would, pro tanto, take the ultimate distribution of the assets of the bankrupt estate out of the hands of the bankruptcy court."

Purpose.—The requirement that referees in bankruptcy shall execute a bond for the faithful performance of their duties is an assurance to persons interested that, within the penalty of any bond taken from them by the United States their rights will be protected against any act or omission on the part of referees resulting to their injury. U. S. v. Ward, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 257 Fed. 372, 168 C. C. A. 412.

Necessity of accounting for amounts collected for mailing notices.—A clerk of a District Court may not be required to account to the United States for amounts collected by him under a court order from bankrupt estates for mailing notices, in view of the provisions of this section, section 52a and General Order 35, and also by virtue of the general provisions regarding clerks of District Courts contained in R. S. secs. 839 and 844 (4 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 703, 707) and in the Act of June 28, 1902, ch. 1501 (4 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 735). U. S. v. United States Fidelity, etc., Co., (S.

D. Tex. 1919) 263 Fed. 442. Regarding these general provisions, the court said:

"The allegations of the plaintiff's petition, the accounting of the auditor, and the opinion of the Comptroller which underlies this suit, charge that these moneys in controversy constitute fees and emoluments under these general provisions.

"In United States v. Mason, 218 U. S. 517, 31 Sup. Ct. 34, 54 L. ed. 1133, the court says: 'The fees and emoluments are not received by the clerk as moneys or property belonging to the United States, but as the amount allowed him for his compensation and office expenses under the statutes defining his rights and duties, and with respect to the amount payable when the return is made the clerk is not trustee, but debtor.'

"In In re Loughney, (D. C.) 218 Fed. 981, the court declared that the amounts allowed a clerk for sending out notices are not fees, but expenses, while rule 10 of the Supreme Court in bankruptcy cases provides: 'Before incurring any expenses in publishing or mailing notices the clerk may require from the bankrupt, or other person in whose behalf the duty is to be performed, indemnity for such expense, and money advanced for this purpose by the bankrupt or other person shall be repaid him out of the estate as part of the cost of administering same.'

"In U. S. v. MacMillan, (D. C.) 209 Fed. 266, appears a clear and to my mind entirely satisfactory statement of the test for determining what moneys are fees and emoluments within the meaning of the statute; the court saying: 'What test is afforded in determining whether a sum of money received by an official is an emolument of his office? Certainly this: That the official do some act or perform some service pursuant to the obligation or sanction of his office to or for the benefit of the one paying the money charged to be an emolument; that the one paying the money has the right to exact from the official rendition of the service, and the official has the right to exact the money in return—under the official obligation or sanction of the particular office to which the emolument is claimed to attach. To put it another way: The payment moves to the official in consideration of the rendition by him of some official act or service; the official does the act or renders the service by virtue of his office. The official character of the act is his warrant for exacting the payment.'

"The moneys sought to be recovered in the case at bar were received by the clerk, not ex virtute officii, but under the authority of an order of the court allowing an expense theretofore incurred, which order would have been equally effective had it named as the recipient an entire stranger to the court, and to its general machinery. Neither the bankruptcy statutes nor the general statutes imposing duties upon the clerk form the basis or warrant for the collection of these funds. That warrant is found in the order of the District Court, which furnishes at once the reason and the justification for their retention by the clerk."

Who are secured creditors.—Creditors who have furnished materials to a bankrupt and who have served attested accounts on the owners, have recorded their claims, and are also protected by surety bonds under the provisions of state statutes, are secured creditors within the meaning of section 1(23) and are not entitled to vote at an election of the bankrupt's trustee. In re Ferrand, (E. Allowance of claims—Power of court.—In allowing or disallowing claims against estates in bankruptcy the court is bound by the established rules of law and equity, and cannot arbitrarily exercise its power in the allowance or disallowance of such claims. Thus, when a contract is illegal because contrary to a statute, and the parties thereto are in pari delicto, neither party will be permitted to have the aid of the court in obtaining any relief in regard to such contract, but it will leave the parties where it finds them. In re Springfield Realty Co., (E. D. Mich. 1919) 257 Fed. 785.

Claim of stockholder against corporation for purchase of stock.—A stockholder of a corporation may not, by an executory contract with the corporation to purchase his stock, change his position from that of a stockholder to a creditor, and share with its other creditors if it subsequently becomes bankrupt. Keith v. Kilmer, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1919) 261 Fed. 733.

Notes issued by corporation in payment for stock.—In In re Brueck, etc., (S. D. N. Y. 1919) 258 Fed. 69, a bankrupt corporation issued its notes in payment for its own stock when one of the stockholders severed his connection with it. He transferred the notes to a third party in extinguishment of a valid antecedent debt owing by him to such third party. It was held that the evidence was sufficient to place upon the holder the duty of making inquiry as to the manner in which the stockholder acquired the notes, that he could not be regarded as an innocent purchaser and that hence he was not entitled to have his claim on the notes allowed against the corporation. The court said:

"From the foregoing and other testimony to the same effect, and from the fact that the notes were signed by the corporation and were long-term notes, the inference was plain that the corporation had issued its notes in some manner in connection with the sale to it by Blum of his stock. The slightest inquiry of Blum would have disclosed the fact that the notes were issued for stock. In such circumstances, Rothenberg could have decided whether not to take the notes and extinguish the antecedent debt.

"The protection of the New York and similar statutes, reinforced by the decisions of the courts, is based on the proposition that the capital of the corporation is a trust fund for the benefit of its creditors, which cannot be depleted by the corporation by the purchase of its own stock. So important a safeguard should not be removed, nor impaired, where the circumstances are such as at once to excite inquiry by a man of ordinary business prudence. Surely, if Rothenberg had contemplated buying the notes for cash, he would have inquired as to the circumstances of their origin, and no less measure of inquiry should be expected where the consideration is the payment of an antecedent debt.

"As matter of law, then, the facts are such that Rothenberg cannot be regarded as an innocent purchaser. If, looking only at his testimony, the inference was not clear that the notes were for the purchase of the corporation's stock, he could not, in any event, close his eyes, but it was his affirmative duty, in order to protect himself (if he so desired), to make inquiry. Not being an innocent purchaser, he took the notes with all the risk which inhered in them as against Rothenberg."

Interest.—The bankruptcy court must adopt the interpretation given by the highest state court of the provisions of the state statute specifying the character of obligations which shall bear interest after they become due and the rate therefor. In re Morrison, (C. Re-examination and disallowance of claim on motion of court.—Where it appears that the allowance of a claim of an attorney for services to a trustee in bankruptcy has been procured through fraud, the bankruptcy court on its motion may re-examine the claim and disallow it. In re De Rau, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1919) 260 Fed. 732, 171 C. C. A. 470.

"Secured."—Ownership of a judgment against a bankrupt makes the creditor "secured" within the meaning of the Bankruptcy Act, where there is property of the bankrupt upon which the judgment has attached as a lien. Oilfields Syndicate v.

American Imp. Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1919) 260 Fed. 905.

Allowance of secured and priority claims.—Where a bankrupt firm in consideration of the payment by one of its creditors of the claims of other creditors of the firm, executes a chattel mortgage on its stock of goods to such creditor, which is later replaced by a bill of sale of the business, the claim of the creditor should be allowed for the amount due in excess of the value of the security held by him, to wit, the goods held under the bill of sale, in the absence of proof that the transaction was in fraud of other creditors of the bankrupt and that it was usurious under the state statute. In re Paul, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1919) 260 Fed. 114, 171 C. C. A. 150.

Proof of secured claims.—Where a creditor holds notes of a bankrupt company and, as collateral security therefor, bonds of the company secured by a mortgage on its property, he may not prove claims on both the notes and bonds, but may prove and receive dividends only on the deficit arising after a sale of the bankrupt's property under the mortgage and a payment to him of his pro rata share of the proceeds. In re Battle Island Paper Co., (N. D. N. Y. 1919) 259 Fed. 921. The court said:

"The National Park Bank, having received its pro rata share of the proceeds of the sale of the real estate and property covered by the trust mortgage, and having become the purchaser of the said 35 bonds so held by it as collateral to said notes in the manner and under the circumstances mentioned, and having so credited the amount of its bid for such bonds on its claim as stated, now claims and insists that it is entitled, and that this order of distribution should provide, that it be paid first its pro rata share of the amount to be paid bondholders from the general estate arising on the claim of the Columbia Trust Company for such deficiency on such bonds and allowed to it on account thereof, but, as stated, directed paid directly to the bondholders, and secondly, and in addition, its pro rata share of the general estate on the amount of its claim, as reduced by such payment on account of the deficiency claim. The trustees in bankruptcy and the Columbia Trust Company, the trustee under the mortgage given to secure such bonds, contest this claim.

"The mortgaged property having been sold, and its proceeds applied to the payment of the bonds as far as it would go, and the bonds or mortgage containing a promise of the Battle Island Paper Company to pay the entire amount of the bonds, the holders of such bonds through the trustee were entitled to prove and have allowed a claim for the deficiency against the general estate. This claim, as stated, was presented and allowed, and directed paid from the general estate. The claim on the notes was a promise of the Battle Island Paper Company to pay them or the amount represented thereby. The promise to pay the bonds was another obligation of the company to pay the amount represented thereby, and the dividend declared thereon, when paid, satisfies that promise, to whomsoever paid, if paid to the holder of the bonds. There can be no doubt that the National Park Bank, as owner and holder of these bonds, is entitled to its pro rata share of that dividend. It is entitled thereto by virtue of its ownership of the bonds on which the amount received on the claim for a deficiency is to be applied.

"The National Park Bank held the promissory notes of the Battle Island Paper Company for $25,000, and it received from that company its bonds, issued by it and payable by it; that is, its additional promise to pay the several amounts represented by the bonds, not for a new and a different and an independent consideration, but as collateral security for the payment of the same original indebtedness represented by the notes. This second promise was secured by a mortgage on real estate of the promisor, but when that was sold, and its proceeds applied as agreed in reduction of the bonds, nothing remained but the promise of the debtor.

"Prior to the bankruptcy, and prior to the sale of the bonds held by the bank as collateral to the notes, the bank held a secured claim, as the bonds were secured; but when the mortgaged property was sold, and its proceeds applied to the payment of the bonds so far as such proceeds should go, the security was exhausted, unless it be held that one promise of a debtor to pay, secured by collateral consisting of another promise of the same debtor to pay certain sums, and which latter promise is secured by a mortgage on the debtor's property, remains a secured claim after the mortgaged property has been applied on the collateral promise, and that the collateral promise remains a security to the extent that one dividend, in case of bankruptcy, may be paid from the general estate on the promise contained in the notes, and another dividend may be paid from the general estate on the collateral and additional promise contained in the bonds. It seems to me that this is contrary to the authorities. In First National Bank v. Eason (C. C. A. 5th Cir.) 149 Fed. 204, 79 C. C. A. 162, it is held: 'A creditor holding the note of a bankrupt, and, as collateral security therefor, another note on which the bankrupt is also liable, is not entitled to prove his claim against the estate in bankruptcy for both, but only for the amount of the actual indebtedness to him.'

"In John Matthews, Inc., v. Knickerbocker Trust Co. (C. C. A. 2d Circuit) 192 Fed. 557, 558, 113 C. C. A. 29, 30, the court with other things said: 'The real debt which the bankrupt corporation owed the petitioner was evidenced by the note, and nothing was added to it by giving as collateral another promise to pay. Any rule which would permit the proof of two notes for one indebtedness would permit the proof of a dozen, and would substitute, for pro rata distribution among real creditors, distribution in accordance with the ability of a bankrupt to make manifold obligations for single debts. It is a safe and equitable proposition that, in the distribution of bankrupt estates, paper obligations issued without consideration as security for an indebtedness shall not be permitted to increase it.'

"In the case at bar the security has been exhausted and applied on the debt, and the mere promise contained in the collateral should not be permitted to increase the charge on the general assets of the bankrupt corporation."

Waiver of security.—In First Sav., etc., Co. v. Kilmer, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1919) 263 Fed. 497, it appeared that after a sale of the property of a bankrupt corporation had been advertised, a bank filed a petition with the referee asserting ownership to certain property covered by the order of sale, alleging that it was the assignee of a creditor from whom the bankrupt had obtained the property and that the creditor had reserved title under three contracts of sale. The property described in the bank's petition was sold separately and the proceeds paid into court. Thereafter it was found that the bankrupt had satisfied the claims arising under two of the contracts. The trustee contended that the bank had waived its claim under the third contract by consenting to the sale of the property covered by all of the contracts. It was held that the bank should be given opportunity to establish by testimony the share of the proceeds to which it was entitled, and that it should not be remitted to the status of an unsecured creditor if it could satisfy the court that its original claim was the result of an inadvertent and excusable error, and could prove with reasonable certainty the relative value of the property on which it had a valid lien.

Proof of claim by guarantors.—Where a bankrupt, together with certain other persons, guarantees the payment to a bank of all sums of money advanced by it to a designated company, and subsequently they become liable on notes of the company, the bank may prove its claim against the bankrupt's estate, and if it fails to do so the bankrupt's co-guarantors may prove the bank's claim under this section, whether the indebtedness is due or not, and are subrogated to the bank's rights on payment of the indebtedness. Moore v. Simms, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1918) 257 Fed. 540, 168 C. C. A. 524.

Vol. I, p. 979, sec. 57j. [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 710.]

Fine in criminal proceeding as penalty.—The right of the United States to claim priority under R. S. sec. 3466 (2 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 562) for debts due to it, is modified and restricted by this section, under which its right to have a claim for a penalty or forfeiture allowed is denied, except as to the actual pecuniary loss suffered by it. Thus, where a bankruptcy corporation is prosecuted for violating sec. 215 of the Penal Laws (7 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 812) and sentenced to pay a fine and the costs of the prosecution, the United States is entitled to have only the costs allowed as a claim against the corporation, since the fine is a penalty. *U. The fact that a composition is effected does not extend the time given a creditor to prove his claim. In re Bickmore Shoe Co., (N. D. Ga. 1920) 263 Fed. 926, wherein it was said:

"But it is contended that section 57n on its face applies only to claims 'against the bankrupt estate,' and that in this case a composition is involved, and not a bankrupt estate. It is urged that in the former case a proof of claim is necessary in order to participate in the administration and distribution of the estate, but a composition presents a wholly different matter, rather outside of the bankruptcy proceeding, and covered, not so much by the principles of judicial procedure, as by the terms of the contract. It cannot be successfully maintained that a composition is not a part of the bankruptcy procedure. While it depends for its effect upon an acceptance by a majority in number and amount of the creditors, it is only of 'creditors whose claims have been allowed.' Section 12b. The allowance is itself court action. The composition is of no avail, unless confirmed by the court after a judicial hearing. It results, not alone in a contract between those who have assented, but in a judgment imposing its terms upon those who have not assented, and establishes consequences declared by the law independent of stipulation in the contract, such as that the title to the bankrupt's property shall revert in him, and that a discharge from his debts, with fixed exceptions, shall result.

"The Bankruptcy Act of 1867 (14 Stat. 517) contained no provision for composition. This was added by an act of 1874 (18 Stat. 178). The contention was made in Wilmot v. Mudge, 103 U. S. 217, 26 L. Ed. 536, that a composition was aside from the bankruptcy proceeding, and provisions of the Bankruptcy Act as to what debts were dischargeable in bankruptcy had no application to a composition. The court denied this argument, holding that the act of 1874 must be construed with that of 1867, and that its provisions as to discharge should be held to relate to composition proceedings, saying: 'The composition proceeding is therefore a part of the proceeding in bankruptcy, and one of the modes which the bankrupt law authorizes of releasing the debtor and securing to his creditors an equal share of his means.

... As we have ... said, these several statutes, sections, and provisions are to be construed as parts of one entire system of bankrupt law.'

"This principle of construction was repeated as to the present act in Cumberland Glass Manufacturing Co. v. De Witt, 237 U. S. 447, 35 Sup. Ct. 636, 59 L. Ed. 1042. It may fairly be said that the consideration paid for a composition is but a permitted substitute for the bankrupt estate, and, save that it may be more simply administered, it is to be handled, so far as the court is concerned, under the same restrictions and procedure so far as applicable. It is urged that in cases of composition no conflict between the claims of one creditor and another could arise, but that any conflict would be between a creditor and the bankrupt, and that the same reasons for limiting the time of proof and for making contest over a creditor's claim do not exist in the one as in the other. While it is true that in the present case a percentage to each unsecured creditor is offered, and the observation made would apply, this need not be true in all cases, for the consideration, so far as the terms of the act are concerned, need not even be money, much less need it be a percentage on the claims of the creditors. It may consist of an entire sum paid in consideration of the release of the bankrupt's property, without regard to the percentage that it may yield to the creditors. In such case manifestly the rights of the creditors would be in conflict one with another, and the bankrupt would have no interest in the adjustment of them, and exactly the same considerations would apply in requiring promptness on the part of creditors in proving their claims as would apply were the estate regularly administered.

"The law must be interpreted in the light of all cases and situations that may arise under it; and in a case like the present the same chances for dispute over the allowance of the claim, the same reasons why the court and its officers should be promptly relieved of the custody, and direction of the fund in its hands, still remain. Remembering that the limitation is for the good of the public and the protection of the court, rather than of the person in whose favor it operates, it must be said that no reason can be seen why Congress should not have intended this limitation to apply to all proofs of claim. It is not true, as argued, that a proof of claim is unnecessary to share in a composition. No such adjudication has been produced. In order to vote upon the acceptance of a composition, the claim of a creditor must have been allowed. Section 12b. This is in line with the general provision of section 56a, recognizing as voters only creditors whose claims have been allowed. Dividends are to be paid only to claims that have been allowed. Section 65. Allowance amounts practically to a judgment of the court that the claim is due. The law intends that a debt shall be shown to the court, not only by the bankrupt's oath in his schedule, but by the creditor's oath in his proof, and with a definiteness and detail that are specially prescribed in section 57. So long as the proceeding is in court, and so long as the court is directing payment to creditors, the relaxation of these requirements is not contemplated."

Time of proving claims liquidated by litigation—"Liquidated by litigation."—Where a bankrupt and certain other persons guarantee the payment to a bank of all sums of money advanced by the bank to a designated company, and subsequently all the guarantors, except the bankrupt, are sued on notes of the company and judgments rendered against them and collected, the bankrupt's liability to his co-guarantors under the agreement cannot be regarded as having been "liquidated by litigation" within the meaning of this section. Moore v. Simms, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1918) 257 Fed. 540, 168 C. C. A. 524.

Claims due United States.—The United States has the right to present a claim in a bankruptcy case at any time while the bankruptcy is pending and the funds thereof are not distributed. U. S. v. Birmingham Trust, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1919) 258 Fed. 562, 169 C. C. A. 502.

Joining in petition.—To same effect as original annotation, see In re Jutte. (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1919) 258 Fed. 422, 169 C. C. A. 438, wherein the court said:

"The appellants base their appeal on section 59f of the bankruptcy Act, which provides, that 'creditors other than original petitioners may at any time enter their appearance and join in the petition. . . . Relying on the broad terms of this provision, the appellants claim, that, notwithstanding their seemingly inexcusable delay in entering an appearance, they have a right under the statute, being creditors, to appear 'at any time' and join in the petition of bankruptcy. The appellee, arguing as though the petition in bankruptcy had been dismissed and as though the appellants claim a right to appear 'at any time' thereafter, maintains that the allowance of a petition to intervene in such a case is not based on a statutory right but is purely discretionary with the court and should be denied, unless the application be seasonably made. The cases cited in support of the latter contention hold quite uniformly, that a petition to intervene after an order of adjudication or dismissal has been made, that is, after the issue of bankruptcy has been determined, is addressed to the discretion of the court. In re First National Bank of Belle Fourche. 152 Fed. 64. 81 C. C. A. 260, 11 Ann. Cas. 355; In re Jemison Mercantile Co., 112 Fed. 966, 50 C. C. A. 641; In re Koenig & Van Hoogenhuyze (D. C.) 127 Fed. 891; 1 Love-land on Bankruptcy, 467. But the rule of these cases, which no one questions, is not applicable to this case, because, through inadvertence of counsel, or otherwise, Judge Orr's opinion was not followed by an order dismissing the original petition. We thus have a situation in which the court has expressed its conclusion on the issue of bankruptcy but has not reduced it to judgment. We are not unmindful of the distinction between the rendition of a judgment and the record of a judgment rendered. 15 R. C. L. 571, 572, 578. The trouble here is that while the views of the court were expressed in an opinion indicating its purpose to render a judgment in accordance with them, no judgment has, in fact, been rendered. The last act of the court was the direction: 'Let an appropriate order be drawn.' None was drawn. Until the order is drawn and signed, the original petition in bankruptcy is not dismissed. It remains pending, and so long as it is pending and the issue of bankruptcy is not disposed of by an order of adjudication or dismissal, creditors, other than original petitioners, stand where the statute places them, and they may, by authority of the statute as construed by the courts, intervene and join in the petition."

Withdrawal of petition.—Where a bankrupt has filed an answer to an involuntary petition and strenuously opposed an adjudication for nearly two years, he will not be permitted to change his attitude and to obtain an adjudication as of the date of the filing of the petition where it appears he has acquired considerable property since the filing of the petition. In such case the creditors in the absence of any objection will be permitted to withdraw the petition and file a new one. In re Weidenfeld, (E. D. N. Y. 1919) 257 Fed. 872.

Proposal of composition as authorizing vacation of adjudication.—This section provides that a bankruptcy proceeding once begun must result either in an adjudication or a dismissal on the merits. Accordingly, an adjudication may not be vacated over the objection of a creditor, because of a proposed composition, if it appears that he will be unjustly deprived of the rights secured to him by the adjudication. In re Malkan, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 261 Fed. 894, wherein it was said:

"When, on the 7th of January, 1919, a decree was entered by the District Court adjudicating Henry Malkan a bankrupt, a final decree of the court, which was binding not only upon the bankrupt but upon the petitioning creditors and the other creditors, was made. Acme Harvester Co. v. Beekman, 222 U. S. 300, 32 Sup. Ct. 98, 56 L. Ed. 208; Clay v. Waters, 178 Fed. 385, 101 C. C. A. 645, 21 Ann. Cas. 897. The result of this proceeding made the proceeds a 'res' in the hands of the court, and the creditors, including the petitioner, became interested in the res, and must be regarded as parties to the bankruptcy proceedings. Manson v. Williams, etc., 213 U. S. 453, 29 Sup. Ct. 519, 53 L. Ed. 869.

"This adjudication established, for all the creditors of the bankrupt, rights of which they could not be divested, except by orderly and lawful proceedings in the administration of the bankrupt's estate. It is not averred in this case that the adjudication was procured by fraud or mistake, and the only reason assigned for the vacation of the order is a desire to settle and obtain a composition for the creditors. The decree could not be vacated, and deprive the petitioning creditors of the right secured to it, unless there be some authority in the court to do so. Section 59g of the Bankruptcy Act (Act July 1, 1898, c. 541, 30 Stat. 561) provides that a proceeding once begun must result either in an adjudication or a dismissal. Subdivision g provides only for dismissals therein on the merits.

"It is the intentment of the act that dismissal may not be had against the protest of a creditor, if he be deprived unjustly of the rights secured to him by the adjudication and the creation of the estate in the hands of the court for all the creditors. In re Rosenblatt & Co., 193 Fed. 638, 113 C. C. A. 506. Section 12 provides for compositions. It is not contended that the proceeding here was in conformity with the requirements of section 12 as to composition, The consideration for the composition was not deposited prior to the order. The form of the order and the recitals do not indicate that the parties were attempting a composition. At best, it was an informal composition, which should be condemned. The bankrupt's estate can be wound up in but two ways: First, by distribution in bankruptcy; and, second, by distribution in composition. An effort made to start a proceeding in bankruptcy, and then settle with creditors outside the proceeding, and then ask for the approval of the court, should not be encouraged, but should be discouraged."

- II. Constituent elements.

I. CREATION OF PREFERENCES (p. 1005)

A preference was valid at common law.—To the same effect as the original annotation, see Harman v. Haight, (Mich. 1920) 177 N. W. 281, wherein the court said: "And this but followed the settled law of the state that laying aside the federal Bankruptcy Act, not there nor here involved, a debtor has the right to prefer one creditor to another; to use his property for the payment of one debt or of many debts to the exclusion of one or many creditors."

Preference created by transfer.—The filing of an affidavit of removal of a chattel mortgage within four months prior to the filing of a petition in bankruptcy is not a transfer within the meaning of this section. In re Dagwell, (E. D. Mich. 1920) 263 Fed. 406.

Transfer to wife.—In Baldwin v. Kingston, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1919) 257 Fed. 554, 168 C. C. A. 538, a trustee in bankruptcy appealed from a decree dismissing a bill of complaint in an action brought by him to have a transfer of property by the bankrupt to his wife declared void as being a preference. The Circuit Court of Appeals, in affirming the judgment of the District Court, held "that the conveyance was not voluntary and was supported by a consideration; that there was an agreement whereby the conveyance should be in satisfaction, whole or partial, of the wife's right to support; and that the value of the property transferred was not so disproportionate to the bankrupt's pecuniary obligation to his wife as to justify the application of the equitable doctrine that where, under certain circumstances, the consideration for a conveyance is sufficiently inadequate the conveyance will be sustained only to the extent of the consideration actually given, and be declared voluntary and void as to the residue."

Assignment of accounts.—Where a bank, within the four months period, surrenders the notes of third parties, upon which a bankrupt corporation is the indorser, and receives in lieu thereof the assignment of accounts of the bankrupt to secure a new note practically equal in amount to the notes surrendered, the transfer constitutes a preference. In re Star Spring Bed Co., (D. C. N. J. 1919) 257 Fed. 176.

Conveyance to prefer surety—Taking back property from debtor.—See Egner v. Parshelsky, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 258 Fed. 238, 169 C. C. A. 304, affirming (E. D. N. Y. 1918) 254 Fed. 907, in 1919 Supplement p. 451.

Preference created by mortgage.—To same effect as original annotation, see McHenry v. Dwelling Bldg., etc., Assoc., (E. D. Pa. 1919) 259 Fed. 880.

An agreement by a mortgagee, within four months prior to a bankrupt's adjudication, to subordinate his mortgage on the bankrupt's property to a new mortgage which the bankrupt is placing thereon, is valid and does not constitute a preference. In re Schwab, (E. D. N. Y. 1919) 258 Fed. 772, wherein it was said:

"The question presented, therefore, is whether a mortgagee, with reasonable cause to believe a bankrupt to be insolvent, and within four months prior to the adjudication, could subordinate a valid mortgage upon the bankrupt's property to a new mortgage which the bankrupt was placing thereon, or whether such attempted subordination constituted a voidable preference.

"In every novation there are four essential requisites: (1) A previous valid obligation; (2) the agreement of all the parties to the new contract; (3) the extinguishment of the old contract; and (4) the validity of the new one.' Cyc. vol. 29, p. 1130.

"It is obvious that if there was a new contract which was invalid, as the referee holds, there could be no novation, because it is essential that the new contract be valid.

"The learned referee states in his decision (folio 48): 'By the terms of the subordination agreement, Meta Mayer gave up and surrendered any claim she formerly had by way of her mortgage lien on the property, prior to September 30, 1915.'

"It will readily be seen that, so far from surrendering any claim she had, she did no more than agree that before the property in question could be applied to the satisfaction of her mortgage, the Obernier mortgage (concededly a valid lien) would first have to be paid. Such an agreement is legal. Loucks v. Union Bank of Louisiana, 2 La. Ann. 617. If the latter had been placed upon the property as a second mortgage, there could be no possible attack upon the Mayer mortgage. There cannot be a preferential transfer without a depletion of the bankrupt's estate."

Taking of possession under chattel mortgage.—If a chattel mortgage is given by the bankrupt more than four months before the filing of the petition and is not recorded, the taking of possession by the mortgagee within the four months period does not create a preference. Kettenbach v. Walker, (1920) 32 Idaho 544, 186 Pac. 912.

Preference created by payment—Payment for goods obtained by fraud.—Where, within the four months period, a creditor discovers that the bankrupt has purchased goods from him on credit by making fraudulent statements, he has the right to rescind such sales and recover such of the goods as are then in the bankrupt's possession. And since a return of the goods under such circumstances would not be a preference, payment to the extent of their value does not effectuate a preference. Illinois Parlor Frame Co. v. Goldman, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1919) 257 Fed. 300, 168 C. C. A. 384.

Banking transactions—In general.—Where a bankrupt obtains money by fraud, and being without sufficient funds to repay it when called upon to do so, gives a post-dated check which is paid from general funds in a bank, the transaction is a preference. Watchmaker v. Barnes, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1919) 259 Fed. 783, 170 C. C. A. 583.

II. CONSTITUENT ELEMENTS (p. 1014)

In general.—To same effect as original annotation, see In re Star Spring Bed Co., (D. C. N. J. 1919) 257 Fed. 176; Craig v. Sharp, (Mo. 1920) 219 S. W. 95 (holding on the facts that the person receiving the preference had notice of facts sufficient to put him on inquiry).

Insolvency.—To same effect as original annotation, see Hicks Co. v. Moore, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1919) 261 Fed. 773, wherein it was held that the evidence was insufficient to sustain a decree that the bankrupts were insolvent, within the meaning of section 1 of the Bankruptcy Act, at the time they made the transfer attacked as preferential.

Intention to give a preference.—To same effect as original annotation, see Watchmaker v. Barnes, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1919) 259 Fed. 783, 170 C. C. A. 583.

Preference must be given to creditor—Payment benefiting accommodation indorsers of note.—Payments made by a bankrupt, while insolvent, to the holders of notes on which he was the maker may be recovered from accommodation indorsers of the notes on the ground that such payments constitute voidable preferences. Goldman v. Cohen, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1919) 261 Fed. 672.

Time of obtaining preference—Confirmation of prior assignment and transfer pursuant thereto.—Where an assignment of stock is made prior to the four months period pursuant to a verbal agreement, the fact that such agreement is confirmed in writing during the four months period, and the certificates of stock transferred then, does not render the transaction preferential. Wiener v. Union Trust Co., (E. D. Mich. 1919) 261 Fed. 709, wherein it was said:

"It will be noted that the instrument referred to shows upon its face that it is a legal assignment, that is, a transfer of the property alleged to have been preferentially transferred; and if such transfer antedated the four months period before the filing of the bankruptcy petition, it did not constitute a voidable preference under the Bankruptcy Act. It is also clear from the language of this instrument that it was not made pursuant to a prior verbal agreement, but was merely confirmatory of such verbal agreement, which was itself an assignment of the stock in question, at least in equity. It is plain, therefore, that the transaction constituted, if not a legal, at least an equitable, assignment of this stock, and created an equitable lien thereon in favor of the defendant. In this view of the matter, the subsequent written assignment, and the still later delivery of the certificates of said stock, were merely formal and incidental to the real transfer, made prior to the statutory period. Sexton v. Kessler & Co., 225 U. S. 90, 32 Sup. Ct. 657, 56 L. Ed. 995; Clark v. Sigua Iron Co., 81 Fed. 310, 26 C. C. A. 423 (C. C. A. 3); McDonald v. Daskam, 116 Fed. 276, 53 C. C. A. 554 (C. C. A. 7); Union Trust Co. v. Bulkeley, 150 Fed. 510, 80 C. C. A. 328 (C. C. A. 6); Lowell v. International Trust Co., 159 Fed. 781, 86 C. C. A. 137 (C. C. A. 1); Gage Lumber Co. v. McEl-downey, 207 Fed. 255, 124 C. C. A. 641 (C. C. A. 6), 5 C. J. 911."

Payment by post-dated check.—Where an alleged preferential transfer of a bankrupt's property is by means of a post-dated check, the transfer takes place not at the delivery of the check but at the payment of the same. Watchmaker v. Barnes, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1919) 259 Fed. 783, 170 C. C. A. 583.

Sale of pledged property within four months period.—Where grain, pledged by a bankrupt prior to the four months period, is sold by a committee of the bankrupt's creditors with his consent and that of the pledgee and the proceeds turned over to the latter within the four months period, the transaction relates back to the date of the pledge and does not constitute a preference. Britton v. Union Invest. Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 262 Fed. 111.

Greater percentage.—The test of preference.—To same effect as original annotation, see In re Star Spring Bed Co., (D. C. N. J. 1919) 257 Fed. 176.

A charge of a court was held erroneous which was as follows: "The test of a preference is the payment out of the bankrupt property of a larger percentage of the creditor's claim than others of the same class receive." Slayton v. Drown, (Vt. 1919) 107 Atl. 307, wherein the court said:

"The defendant argues that the charge upon this point places the test of preference upon the distribution of the estate at the end of litigation, and not upon what the creditor would have received if the bankrupt estate had been liquidated at the date of the alleged preference. The plaintiff claims that such is the test of a preference; and the question to be determined here is whether the payment of an insolvent to his creditor of only such part of his creditor's debt as such creditor would be entitled to receive, if all the debtor's property liable to the payment of his debts should be apportioned among his creditors at the time of the alleged preference, amounts to a preference within the provisions of section 60b of the Bankruptcy Act. The case shows that the defendant received less than 50 per cent. of his debt against the bankrupt, and the evidence tended to show that the bankrupt had assets exceeding 50 per cent. of his liabilities at the time of that payment. In this state of the case, it became necessary for the court to instruct the jury upon this point. In disposing of the question here presented, it is necessary to take into consideration section 60b, as well as section 60a, of the Bankruptcy Act. Our attention has not been called to any case where the present question, here raised, has been determined by the Supreme Court of the United States. We find cases decided by that court where questions related to it have been discussed, but in none of those do we find where the question is directly determined. We are therefore compelled to rely upon our own construction of sections 60a and 60b.

"Section 60a seems to refer to the condition of the bankrupt estate at the time of the alleged preference, and the ability of the bankrupt to pay to his other creditors at the time of the alleged preference as large a percentage as he paid the alleged preferred creditor; and this construction is strengthened by the provisions in section 60b. To recover the payment, the trustee must show that the payment at the time it was made operated then as a preference, and that the defendant 'then' had reasonable cause to believe that the payment would effect a preference. This language means no more than this: If the creditor receives what he had reason to believe was more than his proportionate share of the bankrupt's property, as it 'then' existed at the very time of the alleged preference, and it turns out to be as he believes, he has received a preference that is recoverable by the trustee. Such is the view taken in the case of Herzberg v. Riddle, 171 Ala. 368, 54 South. 635, in which it is said: 'If a man's debtor who is solvent pays him his debt in full, surely there is no ground to suspect a preference because every other creditor can compel payment; but if he accepts all of his debt, or a large part thereof, from a debtor known or suspected to be hopelessly insolvent, then he may know or have reasonable cause to believe that a preference is made in violation of the statute. But if he accepts only that part of his debt to which he would be entitled if all the property liable to the debts should be apportioned among the creditors, then, of course, there is no preference such as is prohibited by the statute, though the debtor may be hopelessly insolvent.' This same view is taken in Dry Goods Co. v. Bertenshaw, 68 Kan. 734, 75 Pac. 1027.

"It should be kept in mind that we are here dealing with a 'voidable preference,' so-called, as distinguished from one that is not voidable. A preference may be given that is not voidable, as well as one that is. Pirie v. Chicago Title & Trust Co., 182 U. S. 438, 427, 21 Sup. Ct. 906, 45 L. Ed. 1171, 1177.

The portion of the charge excepted to made the recovery to depend, not upon the defendant's having received a greater percentage of the bankrupt's estate than other creditors of the same class would have received if the assets had then been distributed pro rata, but upon his having received more than other creditors of the same class might ultimately receive on the final settlement of the estate. As we have seen, this was error, and harmful error, and the exception to the charge must be sustained."

Meaning of term "class."—Within the meaning of the Bankruptcy Act, the test of classification is the percentage paid upon the claim out of the estate of the bankrupt, and hence secured and unsecured creditors are in the same class. In re Star Spring Bed Co., (D. C. N. J. 1919) 257 Fed. 176. In defining the term "class," the court said: "The act itself does not define the word 'class,' nor state in terms what creditors are in the same class, or different classes. It creates and specifies classes, and from a study of these it may be possible to arrive at a definition of the word 'class' within the meaning of the act. Section 64 specifies three classes—parties to whom taxes are owing, employees holding claims for certain wages, and those who, by the laws of the states or of the United States, are entitled to priority. There are also general creditors. The three classes above mentioned have priority over general creditors. There are, broadly speaking, two classes of creditors—those who have priority and are paid in full, and general creditors, including secured and unsecured. These are the classes of creditors of which the Bankruptcy Act treats. Every creditor in the same class always receives the same percentage on his claim that every other creditor in that class receives. Different classes of creditors are paid different percentages in accordance with the provisions of the act, but creditors of the same class always receive the same percentage. Creditors entitled to receive out of the bankrupt estate the same percentage of their claims are therefore in the same class, regardless of whether they may collect any deficiency from others. A creditor may have two notes made by the bankrupt—one secured by the indorsement of a third party, the other unsecured. He is entitled to receive the same percentage out of the bankrupt estate on both notes. He may, however, collect the deficiency on the secured note from the indorser, or he may collect the entire note in the first place from the indorser, who in turn may prove the note against the bankrupt estate and receive the same percentage upon the claim which the original creditor would have received, or which was received on the unsecured note."

In Wartell v. Moore, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1919) 261 Fed. 762, it appeared that the bankrupt borrowed a certain sum of money to engage in business. He formed a partnership, but later it was dissolved, the bankrupt assuming all its obligations and continuing the business as an individual. Several days after the dissolution he paid off the loan and a month later filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy. His trustee brought action to recover the payment on the ground that it was a voidable preference. The creditor denied this, contending that he was an individual creditor of the bankrupt, that all of the other creditors were partnership creditors because no notice of dissolution had been given, and that, therefore, he had not received a greater percentage than other creditors "of the same class." Answering this contention, the court said: "Creditors who have been dealing with a partnership, and who continue to furnish credit to the concern after it has become the personal business of one of the partners, and who have no notice of the change, have a right to enforce their new debt against the old partnership; but this is an option. The truth is that the debt accrued against the new concern, but the old partners are estopped to make this defense, because, by failing to give notice, they had misled the creditors. Surely, in the absence of any exercise by the creditors of this optional right to hold the old concern, there can be no legal presumption that their debt is not against the new business, but is against the old; yet to this presumption the position of counsel must come."

"We think it clear that the motion to direct was rightly denied. We are the better content to dispose of the case upon a somewhat strict construction of the right to review, because the transaction shown by the peculiar facts of this case, even if it might be thought to lack some element necessary to a voidable preference under section 60b, was nevertheless voidable under section 67e, as an attempt to defeat the intended operation of the Bankruptcy Law."

Vol. I, p. 1026, sec. 60b. [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 739.]

- I. Elements of voidability.
- II. Recovery of voidable preferences.

I. ELEMENTS OF VOIDABILITY (p. 1026)

Reasonable cause to believe transaction would effect preference.—To same effect as original annotation, see In re Star Spring Bed Co., (D. C. N. J. 1919) 257 Fed. 176.

The validity of the transfer does not turn upon the creditor's personal belief, but upon reasonable cause to believe that the enforcement of the transfer would effect a preference and such cause depends upon all circumstances and not merely upon the debtor's declaration. Schuetz v. Swank, (1920) 265 Pa. St. 576, 109 Atl. 531, wherein the court said: "In such case, where there is reasonable cause to believe, the creditor's actual belief is immaterial (7 C. J. p. 153, note; also In re Hines [D. C.] 144 Fed. 543); and reasonable cause to believe does not require actual knowledge or actual belief (Sundheim v. Ridge Avenue Bank [D. C.] 138 Fed. 951). But the transfer is not voidable merely because the creditor had some cause to suspect the insolvency of his debtor. Keith, Trustee, v. Bank, 23 Pa. Super. Ct. 14; Arthur v. Harrington (D. C.) 211 Fed. 215. However, where the circumstances are such as to incite a man of ordinary prudence to inquire, the creditor is chargeable with notice of all facts which a reasonably diligent inquiry would have disclosed (Tilt v. Citizens' Trust Co. et al. [D. C.] 191 Fed. 441); and inquiry of the debtor alone is not sufficient (McGirr v. Humphrey's Grocery Co. [D. C.] 192 Fed. 55, 57)."

The bare circumstance that those in charge of a sick man's affairs paid on Friday the balance of an indebtedness due on the following Monday, is insufficient ground for suspecting the payer's motives or for impugning the payee's good faith and holding that he had reasonable cause to believe that the payment would effect a preference. Richardson v. Germania Bank, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 263 Fed. 320.

Including debtor's insolvency.—To same effect as original annotation, see In re Looschen Piano Case Co., (D. C. N. J. 1919) 259 Fed. 931.

It cannot be affirmed as matter of law that, because a debtor's business is bad and it is necessary continually to press him for payment, the creditor has reasonable cause to believe him insolvent. Schuette v. Swank, (1920) 265 Pa. St. 576, 109 Atl. 531.

Reasonable cause as of what time.—On the question of reasonable cause to believe, evidence of the creditor as to the bankrupt's financial condition, which he obtained sometime subsequent to the transaction alleged to effect a preference, is not admissible. Schuette v. Swank, (1920) 265 Pa. St. 576, 109 Atl. 531.

Opinion evidence.—A creditor's agent may not state his belief concerning the solvency of the bankrupt when the transaction was made if he makes no claim of personal knowledge of the assets and liabilities of the bankrupt. Schuette v. Swank, (1920) 265 Pa. St. 576, 109 Atl. 531.

Sufficiency of evidence.—In the following case it was held that under the evidence the creditor had reasonable cause to believe that the transaction would effect a preference. In re Clayton, (D. C. N. J. 1919) 259 Fed. 911.

Jury question.—Reasonable cause to believe is a matter for the jury upon all the facts and circumstances. Schuette v. Swank, (1920) 265 Pa. St. 576, 109 Atl. 531.

Positive knowledge unnecessary.—Knowledge that the bankrupt has committed forgery is notice of a fact which would incite a person of reasonable prudence to an inquiry under similar circumstances, and is notice of all the facts which a reasonably diligent inquiry would disclose. Thus, the payment of a note on which the holder knows that the indorsers' signatures have been forged by the maker, is a voidable preference, if the maker is insolvent. Watchmaker v. Barnes, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1919) 259 Fed. 783, 170 C. C. A. 583.

Knowledge presumed.—Knowledge of insolvency.—In an action under this section by a trustee in bankruptcy to recover the value of property transferred by the bankrupt to a creditor on the ground of preference, the creditor must be regarded to have had knowledge of the bankrupt's insolvency where it appears that he was a close adviser of the bankrupt in business matters, that he had an intimate acquaintance with the bankrupt's affairs, and that he took two-thirds of a bill of goods purchased by the bankrupt entirely on credit and charged to a partnership of which the bankrupt was a member, and applied it in liquidation, pro tanto, of a debt owing him by the bankrupt before the debt matured. Gooch v. Stone, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1919) 257 Fed. 631, 163 C. C. A. 581.

Intent to prefer.—To same effect as original annotation, see Richardson v. Germania Bank, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 263 Fed. 320.

Preference only sufficient to pay part of indebtedness.—A preference may be unlawful when only sufficient to pay part of the indebtedness for which it was given. Schuette v. Swank, (1920) 265 Pa. St. 576, 109 Atl. 531.

II. RECOVERY OF VOIDABLE PREFERENCES (p. 1038)

Recovery of voidable preferences.—To same effect as original annotation, see Watchmaker v. Barnes, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1919) 259 Fed. 783, 170 C. C. A. 583.

Jurisdiction.—A federal district court of bankruptcy in Illinois has jurisdiction of a bill on its chancery side by a trustee in bankruptcy to cancel, as preferential and also as fraudulent, a conveyance of real estate by the bankrupt within four months preceding the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, though the bankrupt and the defendant, the grantee, are both citizens of Illinois and the real estate is situated in that state. Ward v. Central Trust Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1919) 261 Fed. 344.

Recovery by bill in equity.—Where the trustee has an adequate remedy at law.—The remedy at law being adequate, equity is without jurisdiction to entertain a suit brought by a trustee in bankruptcy solely to recover back money unlawfully paid by the insolvent debtor to one of his creditors in preference to others. Irons v. Bias, (W. Va. 1920) 102 S. E. 126.

Defenses in general.—Affirming a decree in favor of the trustee in a suit by him to set aside as preferential, and also as fraudulent, a conveyance of real estate by the bankrupt within the four months period, the court said:

"Because the evidence showed that at the time of the trial the trustee had on hand a sum from rents largely in excess of the amount of the only claim then allowed, appellant urges that the chancery court should not have set aside the conveyance.

(1) The chancery court was not asked, even if it had the power, to control the administration of the bankruptcy proceeding. (2) The rents were collected and held by the receiver, and afterwards by the trustee, under interlocutory orders of the bankruptcy court. If appellant's title to the real estate should be upheld, presumably the rents would belong to him. He made no offer that the rents should be applied by the trustee in satisfaction of claims against the bankrupt estate." Ward v. Central Trust Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1919) 261 Fed. 344.

Res judicata.—In a suit by the trustee to set aside, as preferential and also as fraudulent, a conveyance made by the bankrupt within the four months period, the court has no jurisdiction to review the existence of the necessary facts involved in the adjudication of bankruptcy. But that is the extent of the binding effect of the adjudication as a judgment in rem, and although the petition in bankruptcy charged that the conveyance from the bankrupt was an act of bankruptcy, the grantee was entitled, in the suit against him to set it aside, to have a full opportunity to controvert the trustee's allegations and proofs respecting the grantee's guilty knowledge and fraudulent conduct. Ward v. Central Trust Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1919) 261 Fed. 344.

Where the question whether a creditor has received a voidable preference from the bankrupt has been properly put in issue and litigated in the bankruptcy proceeding between the trustee and the creditor, the findings of the referee in favor of the trustee constitute an adjudication and the question cannot thereafter be litigated in the district court. Lincoln v. People's Nat. Bank, (E. D. Mich. 1919) 260 Fed. 422.

Pleadings—Complaint.—In Minnesota, etc., Power Co. v. Losey, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 260 Fed. 689, 171 C. C. A. 427, it was contended that the bill of complaint in an action to recover a voidable preference, was insufficient to state a cause of action. Answering this contention, the court said:

"The action is statutory and the bill fully recites the statutory requirements. The bill of complaint need not allege the identity of the existing creditors with those at the time of the alleged transfer in an action to recover a preference. The citations by the appellant are not those of suits to recover preferences, but are to avoid transfers in fraud of creditors, which suits may be brought at any time subsequent to the transfer, and are not limited to the four months. In suits to avoid transfers in fraud of creditors, allegations are required such as are insisted upon by the defendant here. It may be added, however, that before defendant made its motion to dismiss the bill at the close of plaintiff's case, evidence had been introduced fully covering all of the matters which appellant insists should have been stated in the bill of complaint. This evidence showed the identity of the creditors at the time this alleged transfer was made, and also that their claims had been allowed in the bankruptcy proceeding."

Issues determinable.—In a suit by the trustee to set aside, as preferential and also as fraudulent, a conveyance of real estate by the bankrupt within the four months period, it is not within the province of the court to determine whether the unexpended balance of funds in the hands of the trustee shall be returned to the grantee defendant, or whether the trustee shall be required to convey to the grantee defendant any unsold parcels of the real estate. Ward v. Central Trust Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1919) 251 Fed. 344.

Evidence—Sufficiency.—In Minnesota, etc., Power Co. v. Losey, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 260 Fed. 689, 171 C. C. A. 427, it was held that the evidence was sufficient to support the findings of the trial court that the transfer of certain property of the bankrupt to the defendant constituted a voidable preference.

Request for directed verdict.—In an action by the trustee to recover payments alleged to have been preferential, there being evidence tending to prove that the bankrupt was insolvent when the payments were made, and that the defendant had reasonable cause to believe that the enforcement of the transfer would effect a preference, the court did not err in refusing a request to charge the jury to return a verdict for the defendant. J. M. Radford Grocery Co. v. Haynie, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1919) 261 Fed. 349.

Judgment—Entry with stay.—In an action for the recovery of a voidable preference, the defendant contended that a judgment against him should be entered with stay of execution until the defendant has opportunity to prove its claim in the bankruptcy court, and having done so, then have the amount thereof set off against the judgment, leaving execution to issue for the balance. The court denied this contention. Minnesota, etc., Power Co. v. Losey, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 260 Fed. 689, 171 C. C. A. 427.

Necessary expenses allowed—Power of court.—Within the limitations prescribed by this section and General Order No. 26 (1 Fed. Stat. Ann. 2d ed. 857), the allowance of necessary expenses in bankruptcy proceedings is within the power and control of the United States District Court, both as to the occasion therefor and the amount thereof, and if parties are aggrieved by the action of the court in this behalf, they must, by petition for review or appeal, bring the matter directly before an appellate tribunal, and that, if this is not done, the judgment becomes final and is not subject to collateral attack. U. S. v. Ward, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 257 Fed. 372, 168 C. C. A. 412.

Clerk hire and office expenses.—The United States District Court may authorize the referee to employ a clerk, and allow an expense for stationery, office rent, light, heat, and phone, and these authorizations may be made by standing rule or order as well as by special order in any particular case. U. S. v. Ward, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 257 Fed. 372, 168 C. C. A. 412.

Expenses of clerk in mailing notices.—A District Court has the authority to allow as charges against bankrupt estates the reasonable expense incurred by its clerk, in issuing, mailing and publishing notices, and such judgment of allowance may not be collaterally attacked. U. S. v. United States Fidelity, etc., Co., (S. D. Tex. 1919) 263 Fed. 442.

The expenses of an assignee for the benefit of creditors.—To same effect as original annotation, see Gardner v. Gleason, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1919) 259 Fed. 755, 170 C. C. A. 555, holding that where the occupancy of premises by an assignee was of benefit to the estate, rent for such occupancy should be allowed as one of the expenses in preserving the estate; In re Morris, (D. C. Mass. 1919) 258 Fed. 712, wherein various items of an assignee's account were considered. The court said: "Before the petition in bankruptcy is filed the rule will be leniently applied, and the assignee will be given the benefit of any fair doubt so long as he keeps within the powers conferred upon him in the instrument of assignment. But after bankruptcy proceedings have been instituted, there is no reason why the rule should not be strictly applied and the assignee be compelled to establish that the payments with which he seeks to be credited did in fact benefit the estate."

Fees of trustee's attorney—Allowance of claim through fraud.—Where it appears that an attorney for a trustee, while acting as attorney for the estate and its creditors in rendering services for which his claim was allowed, was really working against their interests, and without the knowledge of the court allowing his claim, such court will on its motion re-examine the claim and disallow it. In re De Rau, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1919) 260 Fed. 732, 171 C. C. A. 470.

Judgments—A judgment for a tort rendered after the filing of a petition in bankruptcy is not a provable claim against the bankrupt's estate. In re Kroeger Bros. Co., (E. D. Wis. 1920) 262 Fed. 463, wherein the court said regarding claims provable under this section:

"Under the provision of the Bankruptcy Act (section 63) governing the case before us, a claim to be provable must have the dual ingredients, (1) a fixed liability, as evidenced by a judgment or an instrument in writing (2) at the time of filing the petition in bankruptcy. It will be conceded that the bankruptcy court is bound absolutely to ascertain the facts and apply the statute according to its very terms; that it is powerless and without discretion, upon considerations of justice or otherwise, to antedate a liability or to give it a fixed character as of any time other than that prescribed in the statute. So, in the present case, if the judgment presented as the basis of the claim had been rendered in the ordinary course, after filing the petition, but upon a verdict rendered before, the court would be powerless to treat the judgment as effective on or prior to the date of filing the petition in bankruptcy. It is agreed, however, that at the time when the bankruptcy petition was filed, there was not only no judgment in favor of the petitioner herein, but in truth against her; and if the Supreme Court of Wisconsin had not directed a nunc pro tunc entry of the judgment, I believe there would be no question that the bankruptcy court would be powerless to give the judgment effect as of July, 1918. Now, if the bankruptcy court is so limited, it cannot be that any other court has greater power or any discretion in respect of the ingredients of a provable claim and the manner of evidencing them. Indeed, if such power or discretion were recognized, no good reason can be urged for denying to private parties the analogous power or right of moving back, by agreement, the effective date of an 'instrument in writing'—the other evidence or test of 'fixed liability.'"

Contingent claims.—An unpaid stock subscription of the bankrupt in a corporation, as evidenced by an order in a state court, making a call and assessment upon the bankrupt in a receivership proceeding in that court prior to the bankruptcy proceedings, is not a contingent claim but a fixed liability, and is provable in bankruptcy. In re Thompson, (W. D. Wash. 1918) 257 Fed. 140, wherein the court said: "The subscription of Peter Thompson for stock in the Peter Thompson Company, a corporation, prior to his bankruptcy, was the creation of a debt. Whether it was fully paid or not by the property which he turned over to the corporation was a question to be determined upon the liquidation of the claim on account of his stock subscription, and the only thing in the nature of a contingency involved would be the amount, if any, of the debts of the corporation, for the payment of which the stock subscription would be a trust fund.

This, as shown by the referee's certificate, had ceased to be a contingency incapable of determination prior to Peter Thompson's going into bankruptcy—ceased by reason of the assignment for the benefit of creditors of Peter Thompson Company, a corporation, which assignment was, without interruption, followed by the receivership proceeding, all antedating the bankruptcy of Peter Thompson. It had ceased to be 'contingent,' in the sense of liable to occur, at the time of filing the petition. It had occurred, and already had come to pass, and all that was left was to determine that which had already occurred."

Fraud—Bankrupt's fraud.—Where a bankrupt has attained money by fraud, he is under an obligation to restore it, and the person defrauded has a claim against him which is provable in bankruptcy and is a creditor. Watchmaker v. Barnes, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1919) 259 Fed. 783, 170 C. C. A. 583.

Partnership debt reduced to judgment as provable against partner.—A partnership debt reduced to judgment after the filing by one of the partners in his individual capacity of a petition in bankruptcy is provable against the individual estate of the petitioner, provided costs and interest, after such filing and up to the time of the entry of judgment, have been credited. Gordon v. Texas Co., (Me. 1920) 109 Atl. 368.

Liquidation of claims for tort.—A claim for unliquidated damages arising out of a pure tort which neither constitutes a breach of an express contract nor results in any unjust enrichment of the tortfeasor that may form the basis of an implied contract is not made provable in bankruptcy by the provision of this section, since this provision does not add claims of purely tortious origin to the provable debts enumerated in paragraph a of such section, but provides a procedure for liquidating claims provable under that paragraph if not already liquidated. Schall v. Camors, (1920) 251 U. S. 239, 40 S. Ct. 135, 64 U. S. (L. ed.) —(affirming (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1918) 250 Fed. 6, 162 C. C. A. 178) wherein the court said: "Historically, bankruptcy laws, both in England and in this country, have dealt primarily and particularly with the concerns of traders. Our earlier bankruptcy acts invariably have been regarded as excluding from consideration unliquidated claims arising purely ex delicto. Act of April 4, 1800, chap. 19, 2 Stat. at L. 19; Dusar v. Murgatroyd, 1 Wash. C. C. 13, Fed. Cas. No. 4,199; Act of August 19, 1841, chap. 9, 5 Stat. at L. 440; Doggett v. Emerson, 1 Woodb. & M.

"Can it be supposed that the present act was intended to depart so widely from the precedents as to include mere tort claims among the provable debts? Its 63b section does not so declare in terms, and there is nothing in the history of the act to give ground for such an inference. It was the result of a long period of agitation, participated in by commercial conventions, boards of trade, chambers of commerce, and other commercial bodies. To say nothing of measures proposed in previous Congresses, a bill in substantially the present form was favorably reported by the Committee on the Judiciary of the House of Representatives in the first session of the 54th Congress. Having then failed of passage, it was submitted again in the second session of the 55th Congress as a substitute for a Senate bill; after disagreeing votes of the two Houses, it went to conference, and as the result of a conference report became law. It is significant that § 63, defining 'debts which may be proved,' remained unchanged from first to last, except for a slight and insignificant variance in clause (5) in the final print, the word 'interests' having been substituted for 'interest.' House Rept. No. 1228, 54th Cong. 1st Sess. p. 39; House Rept. No. 65, 55th Cong. 2d Sess. p. 21; Senate Doc. No. 294, 55th Cong. 2d Sess. p. 22. Evidently the words of the section were carefully chosen; and the express mention of contractual obligations naturally excludes those arising from a mere tort. Since claims founded upon an open account or upon a contract express or implied often require to be liquidated, some provision for procedure evidently was called for; clause b fulfils this function, and would have to receive a strained interpretation in order that it should include claims arising purely ex delicto. Such claims might easily have been mentioned if intended to be included. Upon every consideration, we are clear that claims based upon a mere tort are not provable. Where the tortious act constitutes at the same time a breach of contract, a different question may be raised, with which we have no present concern; and where, by means of the tort, the tortfeasor obtains something of value for which an equivalent price ought to be paid, even if the tort as such be forgiven, there may be a provable claim quasi ex contractu.

"Of course, §§ 63 and 17 are to be read together. The reference in the latter section to 'provable debts,' defined in the former, would be sufficient to show this. . . . There is an argument ab inconvenienti, based upon the supposed danger that if tort claims be held not provable they may be preferred by failing debtors without redress under section 60, a and b (30 Stat. 562), amended February 5, 1903 (chapter 487, § 13, 32 Stat. 797, 799), amended June 25, 1910 (chapter 412, § 11, 36 Stat. 838, 842), held to apply only to provable claims. Richardson v. Shaw, 209 U. S. 365, 381, 28 Sup. Ct. 512, 52 L. Ed. 835, 14 Ann. Cas. 981. See also Clarke v. Rogers, 228 U. S. 534, 542, 33 Sup. Ct. 587, 57 L. Ed. 953. We are not much impressed. If there be danger of mischief here, other than such as may be reached under the provisions of section 67e or section 70e respecting fraudulent conveyances and transfers (see Dean v. Davis, 242 U. S. 438, 444, 37 Sup. Ct. 130, 61 L. Ed. 419), the Congress may be trusted to supply the remedy by an appropriate amendment."

Order of priority—Priority over cost of administration.—A claim of the United States for priority for taxes owing by a bankrupt to it is governed by this section and section 64b rather than by R. S. sec. 3466 (2 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 216). Under this section, however, the United States is only entitled to priority over the claims of other "creditors." It is, therefore, not entitled to have its claim for taxes paid before the costs and expenses of administering the insolvent estate. In re Jacobson, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1920) 263 Fed. 893. In passing upon this question, the court said:

"The first section quoted (R. S. sec. 3466) is a general statute. It existed prior to the passage of the Bankruptcy Act and was partly superseded by that act. In other words, sections 64a and 64b of the Bankruptcy Act are in pari materia with section 3466. Debts due the United States other than taxes are not given the same protection in the two cited sections of the Bankruptcy Act as existed under the general statute, section 3466, or under the Bankruptcy Act of 1867. 14 Stat. 517. This is clearly brought out by Mr. Justice McKenna in Guarantee Title & Trust Co., Trustee, v. Title Guaranty & Surety Co., 224 U. S. 152, 32 Sup. Ct. 457, 56 L. Ed. 706. Speaking of the various Bankruptcy Acts, the court says (224 U. S. 158, 32 Sup. Ct. 459, 56 L. Ed. 706): 'The Bankruptcy Act of 1867, as we have seen, provided for priority, first, for the payment of expenses, and second, of "all debts due to the United States, and all taxes and assessments under the laws thereof." The priority, therefore, given by the Bankruptcy Act, was coextensive with the priority given by the statute of 1797. In other words, to repeat, there was a reaffirmation by the Bankruptcy Act of the statute of 1797. But there is not such affirmation by the Bankruptcy Act of 1898 of that statute, which still exists, as we have said, as section 3466 of the Revised Statutes, supra. There is a change in provisions, and we come to the question if there is a change of purpose.'

"Proceeding further, the court says (224 U. S. 159, 32 Sup. Ct. 459, 56 L. Ed. 706): 'It will be seen, therefore, that by the statute of 1797 (now section 3466) and section 5101 of the Revised Statutes all debts due to the United States were expressly given priority to the wages due any operative, clerk or house servant. A different order is prescribed by the act of 1898, and something more. Labor claims are given priority, and it is provided that debts having priority shall be paid in full. The only exception is "taxes legally due and owing by the bankrupt to the United States, state, county, district or municipality." These were civil obligations, not personal conventions, and preference was given to them, but as to debts we must assume a change of purpose in the change of order. And we cannot say that it was inadvertent. The act takes into consideration, we think, the whole range of indebtedness of the bankrupt, national, state, and individual, and assigns the order of payment.'

"We have quoted thus freely to justify the elimination from this case—that is, so far as it relates to taxes as distinguished from other debts—of section 3466, Revised Statutes, confidently relied upon by counsel for the government. And his chief citations (In re Weiss [D. C.] 159 Fed. 295; In re Prince [D. C.] 131 Fed. 546; In re Cramond [D. C.] 145 Fed. 966; City of Chattanooga v. Hill, 139 Fed. 600, 71 C. C. A. 584, 3 Ann. Cas. 237) were all decided prior to the decision in Guarantee Title & Trust Co. v. Title Guaranty & Surety Co.

"If petitioner's claim is entitled to priority, it must then be by virtue of section 64a of the Bankruptcy Act. Its claim, being for a tax, is entitled to the preference and priority which this section provides. But what is the priority thus created? Clearly priority over claims of other 'creditors.' This section directs payment of these taxes 'in advance of the payment of dividends to creditors.' 'Creditors' of the bankrupt are not entitled to dividends until the taxes are paid. No recognition of priority in favor of taxes appears, except as to creditors. Who, then, are the 'creditors' of whose claims Congress was speaking? Having defined the term 'creditor' by a previous section, it was no doubt making use of its own definition, in thus using the term in section 64a. "'Creditors' shall include any one who owns a demand . . . provable in bankruptcy.' Thus Congress by section 1, subd. 9, of the act, comprehensively designates the class known as creditors, the class whose claims are subject to the claims of 'the United States, state, county, district, or municipality' for taxes. By no stretch of the definition of this term 'creditor' could it be construed to include clerk, trustee, referee, or any one whose relation with the bankrupt or the bankrupt's estate began subsequent to the filing of the petition in bankruptcy.

"Moreover, it is hardly conceivable that the Congress should confer upon the District Court power to administer bankrupt estates, to sequester and preserve property, perishable as well as losable, and yet deny to the court the right to protect its officers in the performance of their duties, notwithstanding such performance of duties and such administration of the insolvent estate is for the benefit of the taxing powers even more than it is for the general creditors. State of New Jersey v. Lovell, 179 Fed. 321, 102 C. C. A. 505, 31 L. R. A. (N. S.) 988."

Priority dependent on state law—Labor claimants who filed their claims as required by the state statute with the receiver of a corporation employer appointed by a state court within the time required by the state statute, and whose claims are properly allowed by the state court, and under the statute are entitled to priority of payment over other creditors, are entitled to that priority in the bankruptcy court, although a period of more than ninety days has elapsed from the time those claimants performed the work or labor, for which they filed their claims with the receiver, before the corporation was adjudged a bankrupt. In re Western Condensed Milk Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1919) 261 Fed. 62, 171 C. C. A. 658, citing as a case "quite like the one at bar," In re Laird, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1901) 109 Fed. 550, 48 C. C. A. 538.

Priority between assignees.—The question of priority between assignees of choses in action is one of general jurisprudence and the decisions of the highest court of a state are not controlling. In re Leterman, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 260 Fed. 543, 171 C. C. A. 327, wherein it was said:

"In Methven v. Staten Island, 66 Fed. 113, 13 C. C. A. 362, this court had before it the question whether an assignee who first gives notice to the debtor has the prior right though the assignment to him is later in date than that to the other assignee. The court held that as between two assignees the one who first gives notice has the better right. In so deciding this court declared that the question is one of general jurisprudence and that the decisions of the highest court of the state are not controlling. We adhere to that ruling in this case. The clause found in the agreement between Coleman & Co. and the bankrupt, that 'this agreement shall be construed according to the law of the state of New York,' if binding as between assignor and assignee, is not binding as against a subsequent assignee, who was not a party to it. It is not decisive in this court of the question now presented that the courts of the state of New York have laid down the rule that, as between different assignees of a chose in action by express assignment from the same person, the one prior in point of time will be protected, although he has given no notice of such assignment to either the subsequent assignee or the debtor. Fortunato v. Patten, 147 N. Y. 277, 283, 41 N. E. 572. In this respect the rule in New York differs from the rule in the federal courts and from that which prevails in England and in the courts in many of the states.

"The leading case on this subject is the well-known case of Dearle v. Hall, 3 Rus. 1, which held that a third assignee who had given notice was entitled to priority over a first and second assignee who did not give notice. That case and the cases which have followed it have gone upon the theory that personal property passes by delivery of possession, and that if one who acquires the right to take possession does not take it he is responsible for the consequences. A chose in action does not admit of tangible actual possession, but the assignee who gives notice to the legal holder of the fund does that which is tantamount to obtaining possession by placing the holder of the fund under an obligation to treat it as his property; and if he omits to give that notice he is guilty of the same neglect as he who leaves a personal chattel to which he has acquired a title in the actual possession and under the absolute control of another person."

Laches of creditor as affecting claim to priority.—A creditor is not entitled to a preferred claim on the proceeds from the sale of certain real property of a bankrupt, where it appears that the bankrupt executed a void mortgage on the real property to the creditor, which created no lien, and the recordation of which gave no notice of a lien to other creditors of the bankrupt, and it further appears that the creditor brought no suit for the reformation of the mortgage before the institution of the bankruptcy proceeding or for the enforcement of an equitable lien on the property. Rader v. Star Mill, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 258 Fed. 599, 169 C. C. A. 541.

Disposition of surplus of estate after payment of claims and expenses.—Where after the payment of all proved and allowed claims against a bankrupt's estate and all expenses and commissions there is a surplus of personal property remaining in the hands of the trustee, it should be paid to the bankrupt, or in case of his death without leaving a will, to his administrator. In re Ohl, (N. D. N. Y. 1919) 260 Fed. 336, wherein the court said:

"In this case there was a trustee and an estate in his hands, but no creditor or creditors have proved a claim, and all expenses and commissions have been paid and allowances made. There can be no distribution in bankruptcy to creditors, as no creditor has proved a claim, so as to be entitled to share in distribution. J. August Ohl died during the pendency of the proceedings, and his administrator, duly appointed, was substituted or brought in and represents and succeeds to the interest and right of the bankrupt in the property in the hands of such trustee. This administrator also represents the creditors, if any, of J. August Ohl, where debts, if any, were created after the filing of the petition in bankruptcy. There is no evidence there are or are not any such creditors, but the ordinary and legal method of disposing of the estate of a deceased person is, in case there be no will, to have an administrator appointed by the proper Surrogate's Court, notice to creditors published, and then after payment of debts, if any, and payment of the expenses of administration, the balance is decreed paid to the widow, if any, and next of kin of the deceased."

Mortgages.—A mortgage given by a corporation to certain of its directors as security for sums advanced to it by them is not invalid where it appears that such advances were present ones, to be used by the corporation to pay its pressing debts, and in the expectation that it could continue in business and meet its obligations. In re Lake Chelan Land Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1919) 257 Fed. 497, 168 C. C. A. 501, 5 A. L. R. 557.

Mechanics' and kindred liens.—In Danville Ben., etc., Ass'n v. Huff, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1919) 262 Fed. 403, it was held that on the evidence mortgages held by the plaintiff on property of the bankrupt were superior to mechanics' liens held by the defendant on the same property.

Attorney's lien.—The institution of bankruptcy proceedings will not invalidate an attorney's lien on a bankrupt's fire insurance policies held by the attorney. Such a lien, however, is merely possessory, giving him the right to retain possession of the policies until his fee is paid. Hence, if he delivers the policies to the bankrupt's trustee his lien is lost. In re Luber, (E. D. Pa. 1919) 261 Fed. 221.

Equitable liens.—A creditor who files his bill and notice of lis pendens more than four months prior to commencement of proceedings in bankruptcy, acquires an equitable lien upon the property sought to be subjected to his debt and thereby is entitled to a preference over the general creditors of the bankrupt. In re Pemberton, (S. D. Fla. 1919) 260 Fed. 521, wherein the court said:

"There is no question but that the bill was filed more than four months before any proceedings in bankruptcy were taken to subject the property theretofore conveyed away by the bankrupt and a lis pendens filed, an action at law commenced seeking to reduce its claim to judgment, and that said action at law subsequently resulted in a judgment in favor of the bank. Under well-recognized rules of law the filing by a judgment creditor of a bill to accomplish the object of the bill in this case, would constitute an equitable lien."

"The contention in this case is that because the complainant did not at the time of filing its bill have such judgment, nor a receiver appointed, nor injunction issued, but filed its bill in the state court, pursuant to authority given in the state statute (section 1961, General Statutes of Florida), no such equitable lien exists. There can scarcely be any doubt that, had the bank procured the appointment of a receiver or the issuance of an injunction on its bill, such an equitable lien would have entitled the bank to a preference, although no judgment at law had been obtained prior to the filing of the bill. As I understand the law, the filing of such a bill by a creditor to subject property, the title to which is not in the name of the debtor, is an equitable levy upon such property, and vests in the complainant the right to have such property first applied to the payment of his debt, if he prevails.

"Under the general rules of law a creditor before judgment could not maintain such a bill, nor does the act of the legislature of Florida vest the chancery side of this court with jurisdiction to entertain such a bill, but it does vest such jurisdiction in the state circuit court, and the bankruptcy law recognizes and enforces such liens given by state laws. Chancery was without jurisdiction to entertain such suits because no lien existed prior to the creditor obtaining judgment, but the section of the General Statutes of Florida referred to vests this jurisdiction in the state circuit courts where action at law has been commenced. It was not the lien of judgment that gave priority to the creditor, but equitable lien created by the filing of the bill. I can see no just reason why the same effect should not be given to the bill filed in the state court and the state statute."

In Britton v. Union Invest. Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 262 Fed. 111, regarding the validity of an equitable lien, it was said: "The undisputed facts are that the bankrupt, a grain firm owning a line of elevators, had for some time been borrowing from appellee. These loans were secured by various instruments supposed to represent the grain handled by appellee, such as bills of lading and receipts. More than four months before the bankruptcy adjudication these receipts had been replaced by one receipt covering grain in various elevators in several states. The present controversy revolves around the proceeds of grain covered by this receipt, which grain was sold by a creditors' committee and the proceeds turned over to appellee before, but within four months of, the bankruptcy proceedings. It is admitted that this receipt did not comply with the state laws governing warehouse receipts; therefore no reliance is placed upon it as a warehouse receipt. Appellee's contention is that its course of dealing in connection with its loans, made upon the faith of the receipts replaced by this last one, coupled with the later reduction and realization upon the pledged property before the bankruptcy proceedings began, established its right to an equitable lien on the grain covered thereby. This position is sound, as against a trustee in bankruptcy, who stands in no better position to avoid an equitable claim of this character under these circumstances than the bankrupt itself."

The trustee further contended that the identity of the grain pledged was not preserved nor proven. Answering this contention, the court said:

"Because of the character of grain, it is rare that receipts, pledges, or contracts with warehousemen regarding it, attempt to segregate the particular grain. The needs of all parties are usually met by description of the warehouse, or receptacle therein, the kind, quantity, and quality of grain. The contract here was of this character. The evidence establishes that the grain sold by the committee met the description of this pledge. There is no testimony showing that it was not the identical grain, if absolute identity be required. Nor is it material that the money received for this grain was not kept physically isolated until paid to appellee. It was deposited in a bank with other money, and promptly checked out to appellee, so there is no question that the identical amount received for this grain was in the bank and paid the check."

Where a bankrupt, in order to obtain a loan from a trust company, agrees orally to deliver to it a certain deed of trust of a lot owned by him, together with certain notes secured by such deed, and pursuant to such agreement delivers the deed of trust but fraudulently substitutes copies of the genuine notes, the bankruptcy court, after the sale of the lot and satisfaction of the claim of the holder of the genuine notes, will not declare an equitable lien on the remainder of the proceeds in the trust company's favor, so as to give it preference over unsecured creditors of the bankrupt. This is especially true where there is a state statute declaring such oral agreements void as to creditors and bona fide purchasers. Page v. Old Dominion Trust Co., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1919) 257 Fed. 402, 168 C. C. A. 442.

Vol. I, p. 1122, sec. 67e. [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 792.]

Intent to hinder, delay, or defraud essential.—To same effect as original annotation, see Richardson v. Germania Bank, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. (1919) 263 Fed. 320.

The intent denounced by this section is only the intent unlawfully to hinder. Only to that extent does this section interfere with the jus disponendi of an insolvent. Richardson v. Germania Bank, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 263 Fed. 320.

Intent to prefer as warranting inference of intent to violate section.—A desire to prefer, and thereby incidentally to hinder creditors, is not as matter of law an intent obnoxious to this section; and is not persuasive in point of fact that such intent, evil in itself, ever existed. Richardson v. Germania Bank, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 263 Fed. 320, holding that the fact that a bankrupt made a payment with intent to prefer a certain creditor did not warrant the inference that such payment was made with intent to hinder, delay and defraud creditors and hence was invalid under this section.

Claims arising in four months period.—In Smith v. Seibel, (N. D. Ia. 1919) 258 Fed. 454, a trustee in bankruptcy brought an action to recover property transferred by the bankrupt to his wife about eleven months before the petition in bankruptcy was filed, on the ground that the property was transferred in fraud of creditors. It appeared that all claims owing by the bankrupt at the time of the adjudication, except a claim on a judgment within four months immediately preceding the bankruptcy, had been paid or otherwise settled. It was held that the unpaid claim passed under this section to the trustee in bankruptcy, and could be recovered by him for the benefit of the judgment creditor. The court said: "It is urged in behalf of the trustee that under sections 70a (4) and 70c the trustee may recover the value of the property fraudulently transferred under these sections, regardless of the four months limitation of section 67e, and some cases are cited in support of such contention; but the purpose of section 70a (4), as expressed therein, is to vest in the trustee by operation of law, as of the date of the adjudication in bankruptcy, the title to the bankrupt's property (other than exempt property) 'to all (1) documents relating to his property; (2) . . . patent rights,' etc.; '(3) powers which he might have exercised for his own benefit, but not those which he might have exercised for some other person; (4) property transferred by him in fraud of his creditors'—thus vesting him with the right to recover, under section 67e of the act, all property transferred in fraud of creditors within four months prior to the bankruptcy, which any creditor of such bankrupt might have avoided under the law of the state, territory, or district where it is situated, and may so recover such property or its value from the person to whom transferred for the benefit of such creditors; otherwise, there might be inconsistency between sections 70a (4), 70c, and 67e. But as the only debt unpaid against the bankrupt estate, which the trustee in this action may recover, is the Cavanaugh judgment and costs, which accrued within the four months immediately preceding the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, such inconsistency, if any there be, is not, therefore, important in this case, unless the master's report might permit a recovery against the defendant Mrs. Seibel for an amount greater than the unpaid indebtedness of the bankrupt, which excess would have to be returned by the trustee, if recovered, to the bankrupt estate."

Transfers void under state laws.—Trover lies by a trustee in bankruptcy against the purchaser of the entire stock of merchandise of the bankrupt, the sale having taken place within four months preceding the filing of the bankrupt's petition and in violation of a state statute known as the Bulk Sales Law which explicitly made the sale void as to creditors of the seller irrespective of intentional fraud. Philoon v. Babbitt, (Me. 1920) 109 Atl. 817, wherein the court said:

"In the instant case the sale to the defendant was by the state law made null and void as to creditors. Bankruptcy proceedings were begun within four months. The evidence shows that Stetson was insolvent at the time of the sale. The stock therefore 'passed to the assignee' (trustee) under section 67e, 'to be by him reclaimed and recovered for the benefit of the creditors of the bankrupt.'"

"We do not lose sight of the fact that in opinions by courts of the highest authority are general statements that seem to be in conflict with our conclusions. We refer especially to Coder v. Arts, 29 Sup. Ct. 436, 213 U. S. 223, 53 L. ed. 772, 16 Ann. Cas. 1008, wherein the court says: 'To constitute a conveyance voidable under section 67e actual fraud must be shown.'"

"But in that case (and the same is true in other cases) the court is considering only that part of section 67e as is involved in the then pending controversy. Indeed, in quoting section 67e 'so far as it is necessary to consider it,' the second paragraph relating to transfers void under state laws is entirely omitted. As Judge Newman remarks, in In re Walden Bros. Clothing Co. (D. C.) 199 Fed. 318, referring to Coder v. Arts: 'It leaves out of the question entirely consideration of the effect of a transfer void under the laws of the state.'"

"It is not important that the stock was not in possession of the defendant at the time of demand, having been previously sold by him. As between the defendant and trustee, the stock belonged to the latter, and the sale of it by the defendant rendered him liable in trover without demand. Nor is it material that the stock was sold by the defendant before the appointment of the trustee. The trustee's title relates back to the beginning of bankruptcy proceedings. 3 R. C. L. p. 231.

"A trustee in bankruptcy may sue in trover for a conversion of goods occurring either before or after bankruptcy." Burns v. O'Gorman Co., (C. C.) 150 Fed. 226."

Mortgages.—Where a mortgage on property belonging to a bankrupt firm was executed nearly a year prior to its adjudication at a time when the property was owned by one of the partners, but was not recorded by the mortgagee until several days before the adjudication owing to the fact that the mortgagor failed to record a deed of the property to himself, and the firm had full knowledge of such mortgage at the time of the conveyance of the property to it, the mortgage cannot be regarded as an incumbrance made with intent to hinder, delay and defraud creditors within the meaning of this section. In re Sola e Hijo, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1919) 261 Fed. 822. Regarding the trustee's contention that recordation of the mortgage was necessary to its legal existence, the court said:

"His contention now is that under the law of Porto Rico (Civil Code, § 1776; Mortgage Law, art. 146; Hidalgo v. Garcia, 4 Porto Rico 64), the mortgage of July 8, 1911, had no legal existence until it was recorded as above stated; that its record on that day constituted the placing of an incumbrance upon the property by the firm of Sola e Hijo, the bankrupt, within four months prior to the filing of the petition in bankruptcy with the intent and purpose on its part to hinder, delay or defraud its creditors, and was null and void as to such creditors within the meaning of section 67e of the Bankruptcy Act. If, in considering this contention, it be assumed without deciding the question that under the law of Porto Rico the mortgage did not exist as a mortgage lien until recorded May 11, 1912, we are unable to see how it can be said that it was an incumbrance made or given by the firm of Sola e Hijo. The mortgage had its inception July 8, 1911, at which time the legal title to the warehouse was in Marcelino Sola. Nothing at that time remained to be done to make the mortgage a legal incumbrance upon the property but to have it recorded, and its inscription in the Registry was dependent upon the mortgagor, Marcelino Sola, first recording the deed of the property from the old firm of Sola e Hijo to him. This he failed to do until May, 1912, having in the meantime conveyed the warehouse to the firm of Sola e Hijo, which took title with full knowledge of the mortgage of July 8, 1911, and the obligation of Marcelino Sola to do the acts necessary to permit the mortgage to be recorded in the registry. Under these circumstances we do not think that the acts of Marcelino Sola, which he was in duty bound and could be compelled to do to enable the mortgage to be recorded, can be said to have been done with the intention on the part of the firm of Sola e Hijo to hinder, delay, or defraud its creditors, either in fact or in law, and that the mortgage cannot be held to be void under section 67e."

Where the effect of a mortgage given by a company on all its property within four months prior to the filing of an involuntary petition against it, is to so incumber the property that an antecedent indebtedness represented by a certain creditor's notes will be secured thereby, to the exclusion of all the other creditors of the company, the mortgage is void under this section. MacHenry v.

Dwelling Bldg., etc., Assoc., (E. D. Pa. 1919) 259 Fed. 880. Regarding this section, the court said:

"Section 67e provides that if a debtor within four months before the filing of the petition in bankruptcy makes any transfer or incumbrance on his property, 'with the intent to hinder, delay, or defraud his creditors, or any of them,' it shall be null and void except as to purchasers in good faith and for a present fair consideration. As was stated by Mr. Justice Brandeis in Dean v. Davis, 242 U. S. at page 444, 37 Sup. Ct. at page 131, 61 L. ed. 419, in discussing the sections now under consideration:

"But under section 67e the basis of invalidity is much broader. It covers every transfer made by the bankrupt 'within four months prior to the filing of the petition, with the intent and purpose on his part to hinder, delay or defraud his creditors or any of them' 'except as to purchasers in good faith and for a present fair consideration.' As provided in section 67d only 'liens given or accepted in good faith and not in contemplation of or in fraud upon this act' are unassailable. A transfer the intent (or obviously necessary effect) of which is to deprive creditors of the benefits sought to be secured by the Bankruptcy Act 'hinders, delays or defrauds creditors' within the meaning of section 67e. Van Iderstine v. National Discount Co., 227 U. S. 575, 582 [33 Sup. Ct. 343, 57 L. ed. 652], points out the distinction between the intent to prefer and the intent to defraud. A transaction may be invalid both as a preference and as a fraudulent transfer. It may be invalid only as a preference or only as a fraudulent transfer. Making a mortgage to secure an advance with which the insolvent debtor intends to pay a pre-existing debt does not necessarily imply an intent to hinder, delay, or defraud creditors. The mortgage may be made in the expectation that thereby the debtor will extricate himself from a particular difficulty and be enabled to promote the interest of all other creditors by continuing his business. The lender who makes an advance for that purpose with full knowledge of the facts may be acting in perfect 'good faith.' But where the advance is made to enable the debtor to make a preferential payment with bankruptcy in contemplation, the transaction presents an element upon which fraud may be predicated. The fact that the money advanced is actually used to pay a debt does not necessarily establish good faith. It is a question of fact in each case what the intent was with which the loan was sought and made."

"In the present case, except as to the actual sums of money paid by the Building & Loan Association amounting to $8,350.09, the obvious effect of the acts of the Bakers' Baking Company in mortgaging its property was to so incumber it that the antecedent indebtedness represented by Mr. Coyle's notes would be secured by mortgage, and thereby the other creditors of the Bakers' Baking Company would be deprived of the opportunity afforded by the Bankruptcy Act to share equally in the company's assets. This was the actual clear intent and purpose of the creating of the mortgage. The Building & Loan Association by the issue of its note to Brooks and the subsequent issue to him as substitute therefor of its paid-up stock became the holder of the notes. These notes can in no sense be considered a present, fair consideration. They were not a present consideration, for they represented an antecedent debt. The haste with which the mortgage was authorized and executed immediately upon its authorization, while in offices in the same building the defendant was authorizing the loan, and the subsequent arrangement and knowledge of the merely colorable transactions between Mr. Coyle and Mr. Brooks, as appears by the minutes of the defendant company, is sufficient to remove any doubt that the consideration was not a fair one, and its effect was a fraud upon the creditors of the Baking Company."

Sufficiency of evidence.—In Dwelling Bldg., etc., Assoc. v. MacHenry, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1920) 263 Fed. 702, it was held that the evidence was sufficient to sustain a finding that a mortgage given by the bankrupt was invalid as being in contravention of this section.

IV. Attachment and garnishment liens.

I. ANNULMENT OF LIENS GENERALLY (p. 1130)

A vendor's lien against a bankrupt's real estate, established in a suit against it to foreclose the lien, is not one obtained through legal proceedings, and consequently is not defeated by this section, although the final decree in the suit is rendered within four months preceding the filing of the petition in bankruptcy. Rader v. Star Mill, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 258 Fed. 599, 169 C. C. A. 541.

Annulment of liens obtained through legal proceedings.—To same effect as original annotation, see Martin v. Oliver, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 260 Fed. 89, 171 C. C. A. 125.

Waiver by trustee.—The adjudication operates not only for the benefit of the bankrupt but for the general creditors, and accordingly the trustee cannot waive the discharge of a lien created less than four months before the filing of the petition. Mechanics', etc., Ins. Co. v. McVay, (Ark. 1920) 219 S. W. 34.

III. JUDGMENT LIENS (p. 1134)

Delay in execution sale as affecting execution's validity.—The fact that the sheriff delays four months in selling property of the bankrupt after having levied execution upon it, does not render the execution void as against the bankrupt's trustee because of dormancy, where it does not appear that the plaintiff's attorney directed the sheriff to delay the sale or that the trustee was harmed by the delay. In re Fraser, (W. D. N. Y. 1919) 261 Fed. 558. The court said:

"The law is that an execution may become dormant after levy, if instructions were given to the sheriff not to sell the property levied upon, and when such a delay ensues a senior judgment loses its priority over a junior judgment or levy, or other liens acquired during the dormancy. In the present case it is not shown that plaintiff was favoring the bankrupt by delaying to enforce his lien, or that any junior judgment creditors or others acquiring intervening rights were hindered or interfered with during the time the execution was extended, and accordingly the invalidity of the levy and sale in my opinion is not sufficiently clear to justify requiring the sheriff to surrender to the trustee the entire amount realized on the sale. The lien acquired by Rouse on the unmortgaged property was good, I think, as against the trustee at the date of filing the petition in bankruptcy. Indeed, the trustee possessed only such rights as a junior creditor had on that day. In re Zeis, 245 Fed. 737, 156 C. C. A. 139."

IV. ATTACHMENT AND GARNISHMENT LIENS (p. 1136)

Payment by garnishee.—A garnishment levied less than four months before the filing of the petition is discharged, and payment by the garnishee to the plaintiff does not protect him in an action by the trustee. Mechanics', etc., Ins. Co. v. McVay, (Ark. 1920) 219 S. W. 34.

Mutual debts and credits.—To same effect as third paragraph of original annotation, see Boatmen's Bank v. Laws, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 257 Fed. 299, 168 C. C. A. 383.

Money collected by delivery company.—A company engaged in delivering for a store parcels purchased by its customers, and in making collections on C. O. D. parcels, may, on the bankruptcy of the store, apply the amount of such collections on its bill against the store for delivery charges. In re W. & A. Bacon Co., (D. C. Mass. 1919) 261 Fed. 109. The court said:

"The bankrupt contends that the collections constituted trust funds, which the claimants were bound to return to the Bacon Company, regardless of the state of its general account, and with no right of set-off. That depends on whether, quoad the collections, the claimants occupied a trust relation to the bankrupt. It does not seem to me that they did. The relation, as I view it, was a purely commercial one, and there was nothing of a fiduciary nature in it. The bankrupt employed the claimants to transact certain business for it, instead of doing the business itself. As part of it the claimants were to make collections when required, for which they were accountable to the bankrupt; the bankrupt being indebted to them in turn for services rendered. There was nothing which expressly or impliedly bound the claimants to return the collections in specie, whatever the effect of that might have been, and their liability for parcels stolen or lost was part of the general understanding. In respect to this, as in other matters, each party seems to have relied on the general financial responsibility of the other.

"The course of business was such that there were mutual accounts between the bankrupt and the claimants; no distinctions were made, so far as appears, as to the character of the claimant's liability (whether at law or in equity), in regard to any items entering into the account, except that the moneys collected by them were paid over within two or three days after collection, instead of monthly or semimonthly when the bills were rendered. That of itself does not show, I think, that the money so paid over was regarded, or should be treated, as trust funds. It was money which belonged to the bankrupt, and which a proper dispatch of the business intrusted to the claimants by the bankrupt required should be promptly paid over."

Money due by creditor under court orders.—To same effect as 1919 Supplement annotation, see In re Barnes Gear Co., (N. D. N. Y. 1919) 259 Fed. 320, affirming on rehearing (N. D. N. Y. 1918) 251 Fed. 764 in 1919, Supplement annotation, p. 467.

Set-off between bank and depositor.—Where a bank sells at a reduced price property, pledged with it by a bankrupt as security for certain loans, to a third party who has knowledge of all the facts and fails to credit the bankrupt anything at all out of the sum which comes into its hands as surplus, it estops itself from applying that surplus as a set-off on the amount due to it by the bankrupt on other loans, and must account for it to the bankrupt's trustee. In such case the purchaser is secondarily liable in case the bank fails to account. Howard v. Mechanics' Bank, (E. D. N. Y. 1920) 262 Fed. 699.

Stockholder as creditor.—A stockholder cannot set off a debt owed to him by the corporation in a proceeding by the trustee of the corporation to collect an unpaid balance of the subscription. Cochran v. Monteith, (Tex. Civ. App. 1920) 221 S. W. 1055.

Claims not due at the institution of proceedings.—To same effect as original annotation, see In re Pottier, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 262 Fed. 955.

Set-off against lien of bankrupt for labor performed.—Where a bankrupt has a lien for repairs on property of one of his creditors, the latter may set off the amount of his admitted claim against the amount of the lien and reclaim his property upon payment of any balance due after allowing the set-off. In re Pottier, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 262 Fed. 955.

Counterclaims.—Where a claim of a bankrupt against one of his creditors does not arise out of the same transaction as the creditor's claim, and is in the nature of a counterclaim rather than a set-off, a referee has no jurisdiction to determine the merits of the counterclaim unless the trustee specifically waives all of his demand in excess of the creditor's claim. In such case the referee has jurisdiction to consider the counterclaim merely for the purpose of determining whether or not the amount actually due thereon is sufficient to offset, in whole or in part, the claims actually allowed in favor of the creditor. In no event, however, has the referee jurisdiction to consider the counterclaim without the creditor's consent and render an affirmative judgment against him. In re Continental Producing Co., (S. D. Cal. 1919) 261 Fed. 627. The court said:

"Section 68 of the Bankruptcy Act does provide that in all cases of mutual debts or mutual claims between the estate of the bankrupt and a creditor, the 'account shall be stated, and one debt shall be set off against the other, and the balance only shall be allowed or paid.' Respondent's contention is that, the trustee's counterclaim having been urged under the terms of this section, it became the duty of the referee to give it consideration for the purpose of enabling the account to be stated and one debt to be set off against the other. He insists that this would have been clearly so had the counterclaim been for a less amount than the total claim presented by the creditor against the bankrupt estate, and that in such event, under established precedents, it would have been the duty of the referee to strike a balance and allow the claim of the creditor only for such surplus as was shown to exist. It is then said that if the referee could thus enter upon a consideration of the entire matter, with respect to any amount up to the very sum demanded by the creditor, out of considerations of expediency, if not of necessity, it was proper that the referee should proceed in like manner with respect to a case in which the amount claimed by the trustee against the creditor was in excess of the claim presented by the creditor himself. Then it is asserted that, if it were found in the course of such hearing that the amount thus claimed by the trustee was a valid charge against the creditor, a finding to that effect should be made, as was done in the case at bar.

"In this connection, although it is admitted that such a finding would not of itself constitute an enforceable judgment against the creditor, yet it is urged that such finding would be conclusive against him, and that, in a suit thereafter to be brought upon the alleged overplus thus found to be due, he would be estopped from urging any defense other than that of payment. Breit v. Moore, 220 Fed. 97, 99, 135 C. C. A. 573. That is, in any subsequent suit, the merits of the claim would not be inquired into, on the ground that there had been an adjudication had in the matter, and that the same question could not again be litigated. The net result is that, though the finding of the referee with respect to the counterclaim of the trustee does not in form constitute a judgment against the creditor, yet it does in substance, in that the creditor is estopped to go behind the finding thus made, and the only defense he would have to a subsequent suit brought to secure an enforceable judgment would be the defense of payment made. In this wise, and in its substantial aspects, the finding is tantamount to a judgment, and the creditor stands in the position of having had a money judgment pronounced against him by a court which, under the law limiting its power, was without jurisdiction so to do.

"Though section 68, supra, does confer upon the referee jurisdiction to entertain consideration of the merits of an asserted counterclaim, this is done only for the purpose and to the extent of ascertaining the net amount, if any, due to the creditor from the bankrupt estate. The spirit and purpose of the Bankruptcy Act, and of the decisions construing it, do not look to the rendition of any general judgment in favor of the bankrupt estate as against third persons, even though they may be proven creditors. The jurisdiction, I am confident, in the absence of consent, goes no further than to permit of an inquiry into and determination of the net amount due the creditor. Outside and beyond that, the general laws of the land, and the courts authorized to administer them, must be looked to for affirmative relief.

"Upon the reconsideration of the creditor's claims in connection with the asserted counterclaim of the trustee, it would be the duty of the referee, and clearly within his jurisdiction, under the terms of section 68, supra, to enter upon a determination of the validity and extent of those claims. Having determined that the creditor had valid claims against the estate, in such amount as he might find, it would then be his duty to consider whether or not such claims were to be subject to offset in virtue of the counterclaim asserted. If the amount of the counterclaim as asserted was clearly in excess of the amount of the creditor's claims as allowed, and if the trustee did not then and there waive a recovery, and the right to proceed further against the creditor for all amounts in excess of the claims actually allowed, then it would seem as if, under the authorities, it was the instant duty of the referee to refuse to enter upon a determination of the merits of the asserted counterclaim, because of the fact that he lacked jurisdiction. 34 Cyc. 646. He should have contented himself with merely staying the payment of the creditor's claims until there had been a final judgment upon the counterclaim, remitting the trustee in his prosecution of the same to a court possessing the requisite jurisdiction.

"If the trustee had entered his waiver with respect to the excess and the right to proceed further against the creditor, I am constrained to believe the referee would have had jurisdiction to enter upon the consideration of the entire counterclaim, merely for the purpose of determining whether or not the amount actually due thereon was sufficient to offset, in whole or in part, the claims actually allowed in favor of the creditor. 34 Cyc. 647.

"It would seem as if, in the absence of the necessary waiver by the trustee, the referee would not be entitled to consider the merits of the entire counterclaim, and then, if in his judgment it was sustained in an amount in excess of the creditor's claims, to allow it for the amount of those claims, thus offsetting completely such claims, and then remitting the trustee to another suit for the balance. The creditor may not thus be harassed by having two suits for the same demand. Furthermore, it would be incongruous to permit a hearing by the referee with respect to a part of the demand, and an allowance perhaps of that part, and then a hearing in another tribunal with respect to another part of the demand, and a possible disallowance by that tribunal of the part brought within its jurisdiction.

"So I am constrained to hold that, except in the event of a specific waiver by the trustee of all of his demand in excess of the allowed claim of the creditor, it is the duty of the referee to refuse to entertain consideration of the merits of the counterclaim at all, and, upon the allowance of the claim of the creditor, to hold all payments in satisfaction of the same in abeyance, until there shall have been a final determination of the question of the amount due the bankrupt estate in a forum having jurisdiction of such controversy."

Amount of credit on bank account.—In the absence of proof that the transaction would effect a preference, a bankrupt's trustee is not entitled to the amount of checks given by the bankrupt to a trust company as payment on account of a note held by the trust company, because of the fact that the trust company has failed to debit the bankrupt's account with the amount of the checks. In re Looschen Piano Case Co., (D. III. TIME WHEN TITLE PASSES (p. 1154)

Effect of commencement of proceedings—Property of in custodia legis.—To same effect as original annotation, see In re Diamond, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1919) 259 Fed. 70, 170 C. C. A. 138; In re Arctic Stores, (D. C. N. J. 1919) 258 Fed. 688.

Effect of adjudication.—To same effect as original annotation, see In re Arctic Stores, (D. C. N. J. 1919) 258 Fed. 688, holding that upon his appointment the trustee's right to possession of the bankrupt's property related back to the time a receiver appointed by a state court took it over. In re Diamond, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1919) 259 Fed. 70, 170 C. C. A. 138.

Property acquired subsequent to adjudication.—To same effect as original annotation, see In re Swift, (N. D. Ga. 1919) 259 Fed. 612; In re Morris, (D. C. Mass. 1919) 258 Fed. 712.

V. BURDENSOME PROPERTY (p. 1160)

Property held by bankrupt as bailee and subsequently mortgaged.—In In re Erie Lithograph Co., (W. D. Pa. 1919) 260 Fed. 490, the referee certified to the bankruptcy court the following question:

"Whether, where more than four months prior to proceedings in bankruptcy the bankrupt corporation procured certain machinery, equipment, etc., used in the operation of their plant, which said property was held under bailment or leases from the owners thereof, the said bailment or leases providing for payment of certain rental for a specified term at the expiration of which said property was to be returned to the bailors or lessors, coupled with an option to buy at a price stipulated, and said property was placed on premises covered by a mortgage or mortgages, which said mortgages contained a clause that it should be a lien on all machinery, fixtures, equipment, etc., then on the premises or thereafter to be acquired by said mortgagor, such property so leased becomes subject to the lien of said mortgages."

The referee had previously given the trustee in bankruptcy a negative answer to this question. The court reversed his order and answered the question in the affirmative.

VI. EXEMPT PROPERTY (p. 1162)

Life insurance policies.—To same effect as original annotation, see In re Brinson, (S. D. Miss. 1919) 262 Fed. 707, holding that where under the law of the state the surrender value of life insurance policies was exempt, the bankrupt should not be compelled to pay the amount of such surrender value to his trustee under sec. 70a(5) (1 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed. 1196)).

VII. RECLAMATION PROCEEDINGS (p. 1165)

Right to reclaim.—To same effect as original annotation, see Smith v. Carukin, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1919) 259 Fed. 51, 170 C. C. A. 51, holding that where property was sold to the bankrupt but title reserved in the vendor until full payment of the purchase price, the transaction was a conditional sale and the vendor might reclaim it from the bankrupt's trustee. The court said:

"It is sought to classify the transaction as a passing of title and a reserved lien, because the title was to remain in Carukin as his equity appears from time to time, sufficient to secure him for the amount unpaid at such times. It is said that this demonstrates the dominant thought to be to secure Carukin for his debt, thus constituting it really a mortgage. It clearly has a tendency in this direction; but the mere use of the words 'equity' and 'secure' cannot control. In the plainest and clearest case of a mere executory contract of sale with installment payments, the equitable interest of the vendor is only that he shall get his money, and it is natural to speak of this interest as 'his equity'; and, in a very common and fair sense, the reservation of title is, in the same case, for the purpose of 'securing' payment of the purchase price. On the other hand, this instrument lacks entirely these elements which are most essential as matter of form to make it a conveyance of title with a mortgage back or reserved lien. There are no words of conveyance; there was no bill of sale; there was no invoice or other customary incident of transferring title; and there were no promissory notes creating an apparently independent obligation to pay. If the clause reserving title in the vendor had been entirely omitted, the document would still have been, in form, a mere executory contract of purchase. Nor is any way provided for getting the benefit of the security and preserving the balance of the obligation—as would be appropriate to a mortgage. The paper seems to contemplate no remedy for the vendor, excepting that reclamation which, without mention, appertains by law to a reservation of title; and this tends to show that the title did not pass.

"Upon the whole, when we come to classify the instrument as a conditional sale or as the reservation of a lien, we consider it ambiguous, and when we take into account the aggregate of the contract provisions and also all the conduct and relations of the parties which the record discloses, and observe the question in the light of the rule that ambiguities will be solved against that party who was relied upon to, and who did, select the language of the contract, we conclude that the judgment of the District Court was right, that the instrument was not of the class requiring record, and that Carukin's title is superior to the trustee's."

So, property delivered to a bankrupt prior to his bankruptcy as bailee for sale but kept entirely separate from his property, the title being expressly reserved in the owner, may be reclaimed from the bankrupt's trustee. In re King, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1920) 262 Fed. 318.

Likewise, property delivered to a bankrupt prior to his bankruptcy on "consignment for sale," and for the sale of which he is paid by commissions, may be reclaimed by the owner from his trustee in bankruptcy. In re King, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1920) 262 Fed. 318.

Assignment of claim against United States.

—On a petition by a company for an order requiring a trustee in bankruptcy to turn over a certain sum due by the bankrupt to the petitioner under a contract, it appeared that the petitioner had agreed to furnish to the bankrupt certain automobile bodies and fenders to be used by it in carrying out a contract with the United States government. The bankrupt agreed that the title to the bodies and fenders should remain in the petitioner until delivery to the government, the warrants to be issued therefor to become the property of the petitioner, and to be collected, indorsed and forwarded by the bankrupt to the petitioner as its agent, any sum over the contract price of the bodies and fenders to be applied to the payment of any balance then due by the bankrupt to the petitioner, the bankrupt assigning to the petitioner all its right, title and interest in its contract with the government and agreeing to give such further assurance to the petitioner as it might deem necessary to carry out the agreement. The petition was denied on the ground that the assignment was in contravention of R. S. section 3477 (2 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 179) which prohibits the assignment of claims against the United States before allowance except under certain conditions. In re Hud.ord Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 257 Fed. 722, 189 C. C. A. 10.

Fraudulent statements by bankrupt's husband.—In In re Bernstein, (S. D. N. Y. 1919) 261 Fed. 719, it appeared that a bankrupt was doing business under the name of a company and that her husband in purchasing goods for it represented to the seller that he was the owner of the business. It was held that such representation would not sustain a reclamation proceeding by the creditor on the ground that the goods had been obtained by fraud, since such statement was not material nor binding on the bankrupt. The court said:

"The facts, briefly stated, are that Tillie Bernstein, the alleged bankrupt, did business under the name of Rialto Tire Company. The special master has reported: 'The evidence shows that Jack Bernstein, with the knowledge and consent of Tillie Bernstein, carried on the business of the Rialto Tire Company; that Jack Bernstein transacted most of the business, bought all the merchandise, and drew all the checks in the name of the business, by virtue of a power of attorney given him by his wife.'

"The special master also held that Jack Bernstein made certain statements, upon which Rauchfuss, the president of the reclaiming creditor, relied, and that these statements were both false and material. An examination of the record fails to disclose any statement as to the actual financial condition of Tillie Bernstein. . . .

"There is no testimony whatever that the statement thus made by Jack Bernstein was either authorized by or known to Tillie Bernstein. Assuming, for the purpose of the argument, that the agency as between Tillie Bernstein and Jack Bernstein existed in the manner and to the extent above quoted, there is nothing in such an agency which can be construed as an authorization by Tillie Bernstein to Jack Bernstein to make a statement of this kind.

"It must be concluded in the first place, that the statement of Jack Bernstein was not in any manner binding upon Tillie Bernstein. In the second place, a reading of the record discloses that the statement was in no sense a material statement. There is nothing to show what, if any, Jack Bernstein's own resources were. All that the statement would amount to would be an assurance to Rauchfuss that Bernstein's business ability could be relied upon. There was nothing material in such a statement, because Bernstein, according to the special master, transacted most of the business and bought all the merchandise."

Refund of payments by bankrupt as condition precedent to reclamation.—In a proceeding to reclaim a machine held by a bankrupt as bailee, it appeared that the creditor shipped the machine to the bankrupt on a bill of lading, thereby requiring him to pay $1,000 and freight charges before he could obtain possession of it. After paying these amounts the bankrupt attempted to assemble and put the machine in workable order but found it could not be done by reason of the creditor's failure to deliver certain essential parts. It was held that the creditor should be required to refund the amounts paid by the bankrupt before being allowed to reclaim the machine. Goldman v. Shreve, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1920) 263 Fed. 74.

Illegality of agency contract as defense to reclamation by principal.—The fact that a contract of agency with a corporation contains an illegal provision is no defense in a reclamation proceeding by the principal to obtain possession of property held by the corporation as his agent at the time of its bankruptcy. In re Herbert, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 263 Fed. 351.

Reclamation precluded by act of claimant—Filing claim.—A claimant by filing a claim against a bankrupt's estate is not thereby precluded from reclaiming property belonging to him which is held by the bankrupt's trustee, where in filing the claim he disclaims any such result and refers specifically to his petition for the reclamation of the property. Smith v. Carukin, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1919) 259 Fed. 51, 170 C. C. A. 51.

The rights under an incomplete invention are "property" and on the bankruptcy of the owner of the invention pass to his trustee in bankruptcy. Ingle v. Landis Tool Co., (M. D. Pa. 1919) 262 Fed. 150.

Vol. I, p. 1169, sec. 70a (4). [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 821.]

Property fraudulently transferred vests in trustee.—To same effect as original annotation, see Moran v. Morgan, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 258 Fed. 234, 169 C. C. A. 300, wherein it was held that a trustee in bankruptcy was entitled to recover real property fraudulently transferred by the bankrupt to his wife.

Concealment of money.—Where a bankrupt conceals money from his trustee and uses it in purchasing a business under the name of another person, who also becomes bankrupt, the proceeds from a sale of the business pass to the first bankrupt's trustee subject to the payment of costs legally incurred in the administration of both of the bankrupt estates and subject further to the payment in full of all claims incurred by the business, while conducted under the name of the second bankrupt, in conserving and replenishing its assets. In re Offricht, (W. D. Tex. 1919) 260 Fed. 692.

Bona fide transfers.—Where reasonable salaries are paid to officers of a corporation for past services, without objection by any stockholder or creditor, and pursuant to a resolution adopted by its directors who own the large majority of its stock, and the corporation becomes bankrupt ten years later, its trustees may not recover such payments on the ground that they were made in fraud of creditors. In re Franklin Brewing Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 263 Fed. 512.

I. IN GENERAL (p. 1171)

Goods leased to bankrupt.—Where machinery ordered by a corporation is shipped to the order of the vendor and held at its destination by the vendor's agents until the corporation signs an agreement to lease it, the transaction is a bailment rather than a conditional sale, and on the bankruptcy of the corporation its trustee may be compelled to return the machinery to the vendor. In re Devon Manor Corp., (E. D. Pa. 1919) 257 Fed. 766.

II. INTERESTS IN REAL PROPERTY, ETC. (p. 1174)

Generally.—In Scott v. Cline, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 257 Fed. 706, 168 C. C. A. 656, it was held that under the evidence certain lots purchased by the owner of a bankrupt company must be regarded as his own private property and that a certain other lot purchased by him must be regarded as property of the company which passed to its trustee on its bankruptcy.

Dower and curtesy rights.—Dower interests of a bankrupt's wife in her husband's real property do not pass to his trustee in bankruptcy. Marine Nat. Bank v. Swigart, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1920) 262 Fed. 854.

Homestead interest.—A bankrupt's homestead interest in real property does not pass to his trustee. Marine Nat. Bank v. Swigart, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1920) 262 Fed. 854.

V. TRUST FUNDS AND DEPOSITS (p. 1185)

Deposits—Tracing funds deposited.—In In re Jarmulowsky, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 261 Fed. 779, it appeared that the claimant deposited certain checks in the bankrupts' private bank the day before an involuntary petition was filed against them. On the same day the checks were deposited by the bankrupts in certain national banks for collection, and the latter banks, being creditors of the bankrupts, retained the proceeds of the checks in payment of their claims against the bankrupts. It was held that the claimant could not recover the amount of the checks since he could not identify the money and trace it into any specific fund in the hands of a representative of the bankrupts' estate.

VIII. MEMBERSHIP IN STOCK EXCHANGE (p. 1189)

Distribution of proceeds from sale of membership.—To same effect as original annotation, see Solinsky v. New York Stock Exch., (S. D. N. Y. 1919) 260 Fed. 266.

Property purchased by contractor to perform contract.—Where a contractor is required under the terms of a contract with a county, to furnish all the materials and perform all the labor necessary to construct and complete a highway, the title to brick purchased by him for use pursuant to such contract passes on his bankruptcy to his trustee. And the fact that payments are made to him by the county from time to time on estimates as the work progresses, one of which estimates includes the brick, does not vest title to the brick in the county. In re Schilling, (N. D. Ohio 1919) 258 Fed. 489. In construing the contract, the court said:

"The contract contains, among other clauses, the following:

"Estimates will be made once a month by the engineer as the work satisfactorily progresses. of the amount and value of material in place on the ground and work done. Ninety per cent. of the value so determined, less any previous payments made, will be paid to the contractor five days after being approved by the county commissioners. No partial payment can be construed as an acceptance by the county highway superintendent or county commissioners of any material furnished or work done. Any or all estimates may be withheld indefinitely until any or all of the orders given by the engineer or county commissioners, in compliance with and by virtue of the terms of this contract, have been complied with by the contractor."

"Authority to include brick in the engineer's estimate is deduced from the words 'material in place on the ground.' The trustee contends that this means such brick only as had been placed in the highway in their final position, and not brick merely delivered and stacked up by the roadside, ready and available for such use by the contractor. On the other hand, the contention is that any material delivered on the premises and in a position to be used by the contractor as required is within the meaning of the paragraph above quoted. Supporting this contention is invoked the fact that this practice had been followed under this contract.

"I deem a decision of this question of construction immaterial, for the reason that, if the inclusion in the estimate of the brick was authorized, it does not follow therefrom as a matter of law that title or property in the bricks passed, as a result thereof, to the county commissioners. This contract is not a contract for the sale of goods. It is one requiring the bankrupt to furnish all the materials and perform all the labor necessary to construct and complete a highway according to certain definite plans and specifications. This contract is not fully performed until the highway is entirely completed and all unused material and rubbish is removed therefrom. Payments are to be made from time to time on estimates as the work progresses. These payments are in effect payments on account, and the paragraph above quoted furnishes only a basis whereby the amounts may be computed with safety as the work progresses. Obviously the bankrupt, as materials were furnished and labor was performed, needed payments. It was not contemplated that the bankrupt should fully perform the contract and get no payment until the final completion of the work. The provisions in the paragraph above quoted, so far as they permit material in place on the ground to be included in an estimate, are intended to accomplish this purpose, and not to relieve the bankrupt from responsibility for material not yet in its final resting place, or from the burden of performing such further labor as was needed.

"Manifestly, notwithstanding this estimate and payment, the bankrupt was required to perform much additional labor in placing these bricks in their final position, and to do this at their own expense. The title to the brick, it seems to me, therefore, remained in the bankrupt, notwithstanding such payment. No change in the relations of the parties to materials not yet used, nor with respect to their obligations and liabilities, was contemplated or is effected merely by the issue and payment of an estimate."

XI. EFFECT OF COMMINGLING PROPERTY (p. 1195)

When property traceable.—Private bankers in receiving money from a depositor for transmission act in a fiduciary capacity, and on tracing it into the possession of their trustee in bankruptcy the depositor may recover it. In re Jarmulowsky, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 258 Fed. 231, 169 C. C. A. 297.

Vol. I, p. 1196, sec. 70a (5). [Policy of insurance.] [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 835.]

Effect of order denying petition for surrender of policy.—An unreversed order denying the petition of a trustee that the bankrupt be required to deliver a life insurance policy or pay its surrender value as a condition of keeping it, bars a subsequent petition by the trustee that the policy be surrendered or that the bankrupt pay over the loan value thereof. In re Samuels, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 263 Fed. 561.

Right to surrender accruing after bankruptcy.—The cash surrender value of a life insurance policy passes to the trustee though the policy provides that the cash surrender value does not accrue until after six months' notice given after default in the payment of a premium, and there was no default at the time of the filing of the petition. Travelers' Ins. Co. v. Middlekamp, (Colo. 1619) 185 Pac. 335.

Vol. I, p. 1204, sec. 70b. [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 839.]

II. SALES (p. 1205)

What may be sold.—Non-scheduled property.—The District Court has jurisdiction to sell a life estate of a bankrupt which he has not listed in his schedule. Gray v. Gudger, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1919) 260 Fed. 931, 171 C. C. A. 573.

Confirmation of sale.—A trustee's deed is not necessarily void because it does not conform to the order of confirmation of the court. Olitaky v. Estersohn, (1919) 90 N. J. Eq. 459, 108 Atl. 88.

Vol. I, p. 1212, sec. 70e. [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 844.]

Power conferred on trustee.—In general.—"It is well established that the effect of this section is to clothe the trustee with no new or additional right in the premises over that possessed by a creditor, but simply puts him in the shoes of the latter, and subject to the same limitations and disabilities that would have beset the creditor in the prosecution of the action on his own behalf; and the rights of the parties are to be determined, not by any provision of the Bankruptcy Act, but by the applicable principles of the common law, or the laws of the state in which the right of action may arise. In other words, the Bankruptcy Act merely permits the trustee to assert the rights which the creditor could assert but for the pendency of the bankruptcy proceedings, and if, for any reason arising under the laws of the state, the action could not be maintained by the creditor, the same disability will bar the trustee." Davis v. Willey, (N. D. Cal. 1920) 263 Fed. 588.

Property transferred in violation of state statute.—To same effect as original annotation, see Sabin v. Horenstein, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1919) 260 Fed. 754, 171 C. C. A. 492, holding that the evidence was insufficient to show a violation of "Bulk Sales Law" of the state by the bankrupt.

Right of trustee to sue as transferable.—A trustee has no authority under this section to sell and convey a right of action, under a state statute, to set aside a fraudulent conveyance not executed within the four months period. Neuberger v. Felis, (Ala. 1919) 82 So. 172.

Property subject to seizure by trustee.—Property acquired by the wife of a bankrupt through business enterprises inaugurated by her with her own capital after the in-solveny of her husband, is her own separate property and she may not be compelled to convey it to the bankrupt's trustee under this section. And the fact that the success of such enterprises was largely due to her husband's management and skill does not affect her right to the property. Rowe v. Drohen, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 262 Fed. 15.

Avoidance of conveyances executed beyond four months period.—The trustee is subrogated to the rights of the creditor and may avoid conveyances which a creditor may have avoided, although such conveyance was executed and delivered beyond the four months period immediately preceding the adjudication of bankruptcy. Neuberger v. Felis, (Ala. 1919) 82 So. 172.

Trustee vested with rights of creditor.—Trustee cannot recover when creditor could not do so.—To same effect as original annotation, see Cobb v. Livonia First Nat. Bank, (N. D. Ga. 1920) 263 Fed. 1000.

Rights are those of creditor only.—"When . . . the trustee seeks to avoid a fraudulent or any avoidable transfer by the bankrupt antedating the four months, he does so, not in the right conferred as a concomitant to the due operation of the system, but exclusively in the creditor's common-law right. He is, with relation to these anterior transfers, so to speak, subrogated to that right. Such of these anterior transfers as any creditor might have avoided he may avoid. Such as no creditor could have avoided he cannot avoid." Scales v. Holje, (Cal. App. 1919) 183 Pac. 308.

Sufficiency of evidence.—In French v. Cunningham, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 261 Fed. 909, the evidence was held sufficient to sustain the findings of the bankruptcy court that certain transfers of property by the bankrupt were made with intent to hinder, delay and defraud his creditors and should be set aside at the suit of his trustee under this section.

Vol. I, p. 1220, sec. 72. [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 848.]

Power of court.—"Where a duty is imposed upon a referee by the bankruptcy law, and compensation is also fixed by that law for the performance of that duty, no power or authority exists in the United States District Court sitting as a court of bankruptcy to allow him any other or further compensation for the performance of the duty than that fixed by the bankruptcy law, and it must be further conceded that where the duty to be performed is a duty clearly imposed by the bankruptcy law upon the referee as such, and no specific compensation is fixed for the performance of said duty, the compensation fixed by the bankruptcy law (Act July 1, 1898, c. 541, 30 Stat. 544) as a whole is the only compensation which the referee can receive or that the court has power to allow." U. S. v. Ward, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 257 Fed. 372, 168 C. C. A. 412.

Recovery of unauthorized compensation—
Suit by United States.—Where a referee has collected, from parties or estates in bankruptcy proceedings, moneys as compensation that under no theory of the law was he entitled to, and these fees have been collected or withheld from parties who are numerous and the individual amounts small, the United States has the legal and moral right to bring one suit in behalf of all parties injured, to recover back compensation illegally exacted by him. U. S. v. Ward, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 267 Fed. 372, 168 C. C. A. 412.

1918 Supp., p. 69, sec. 16.

What fraud prevents bar by discharge.—The kind of fraud which exempts from a discharge is positive fraud or fraud in fact, involving moral turpitude or intentional wrong. Sanger v. Barrett, (Tex. Civ. App. 1920) 221 S. W. 1067.

BILLS OF LADING

1918 Supp., p. 73, sec. 3.

Effect of notation on interstate bill.—Where a bill of lading contains a notation to the effect that a receipt has been issued to a third party for that bill and the notation is made before the bill is made an interstate one and it is made without the knowledge or consent of the party intended to be protected by the notation, this section does not prevent the notice from being operative. Rainbolt v.

Lamson, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 259 Fed. 546, 170 C. C. A. 508.

1918 Supp., p. 78, sec. 29.

Rights of assignee.—An assignee of a "straight" bill of lading stands in all respects in the shoes of his assignor. Quality Shingle Co. v. Old Oregon Lumber, etc., Co., (Wash. 1920) 187 Pac. 705; Getchell v. Northern Pac. R. Co., (Wash. 1920) 187 Pac. 707.

CENSUS

Vol. II, p. 39, sec. 7. [First ed., 1909 Supp., p. 716.]

Effect of disregard of restriction as to place of examination.—Where a resident of Oregon, wholly without fault on his part, was examined in Washington, D. C., and appointed to a position in the apportioned service after certification was inadvertently made by the Civil Service Commission, the disregard of the restriction as to place of examination, contained in the first proviso, was cured and the appointee should not be removed from the service. (1917) 31 Op. Atty.-Gen. 110.

1919 Supp., p. 16, sec. 6.

Preferential appointments in executive department.—In so far as the provision of this section which grants a preference in appointments to "honorably discharged soldiers, sailors, and marines, and the widows of such," relates to the executive departments, it affects only such appointments as shall be made for service at the seat of government or in the so-called field forces of executive departments which operate away from Washington but under immediate and direct orders therefrom, and not out of some local office or branch of the government, such as a local post office, customhouse, or office of an internal-revenue collector; and as to independent governmental establishments, this provision applies to all positions in all offices under the control of such establishments wherever located. Section 1754 of the Revised Statutes (see vol. II, p. 151) gives a preference in the matter of appointment to civil offices to persons honorably discharged from the military or naval service by reason of disability resulting from wounds or sickness incurred in the line of duty without regard to where these offices may be located, and while this section is more restricted than section 6 of the Census Act as to the persons in whose favor a preference is given, there is no conflict in so far as these provisions apply to the same appointments and the one does not give preference over the other. As there is nothing in the Census Act to indicate a purpose to adopt and make permanent the rules and regulations previously in force relating to section 1754 of the Revised Statutes and to apply them under that Act, the matter of making proper rules and regulations is left to the administrative officials, who may adopt those now in force or promulgate new ones as they may deem proper. (1919) 31 Op. Atty.-Gen. 406.

Civil service examination to determine qualifications of preferential appointees.—The proviso of this section gives to "honorably discharged soldiers, sailors, and marines, and widows of such," a preference in appointments from among those duly qualified, but this proviso does not relate to the examination of a candidate, which is a preliminary step to his qualification for a civil service appointment. The Civil Service Commission may, in the exercise of its general power of control over examinations, find that the interests of good administration require special treatment in the reopening of examinations for those who were unable to compete in the original examinations because of their absence upon military or naval service, and, if the commission should so find, such examinations may be reopened to veterans only. (1919) 31 Op. Atty.-Gen. 489, wherein it was said:

"The proviso of section 6 of the Act of March 3, 1919, to which you have referred me relates to preference in making appointments from among those duly qualified. Examination of a candidate is a preliminary step to his qualification for a civil service appointment. In my opinion the proviso of section 6 does not relate to preference to be given in the steps which must be taken to qualify for a civil service appointment.

"Section 2, par. 2, cl. 1 of the Civil Service Act of Jan. 16, 1883 [see vol. 2, p. 150], requires 'open, competitive examinations for testing the fitness of applicants for the public service.' The word 'open' implies an examination in which all may compete. I am also inclined to think that reopened examinations are subject to the same requirement, and that as a general rule they should be reopened to all upon the same terms. The introductory sentence of section 2 provides, however, that rules contained in this section shall be in force 'as nearly as the conditions of good administration will warrant.' In paragraph 3 of section 2 the commission is given power, subject to the rules made by the President, to make regulations for and have control of civil service examinations. In the exercise of the general power of control over examinations which is given to it the Civil Service Commission may find that the interests of good administration require special treatment in the reopening of examinations for those who were unable to compete in the original examinations because of their absence upon military or naval service.

"If so, I am of the opinion that such examinations may be reopened to veterans only."

1919 Supp., p. 17, sec. 9.

Necessity of complying with civil service rules in appointments.—The appointment of supervisors is not subject to the Civil Service Act (see vol. II. p. 155) and rules. (1919) 31 Op. Atty.-Gen. 467.

CHINESE EXCLUSION

Vol. II, p. 67, sec. 1. [First ed., vol. I, p. 774.]

Merchant afterwards becoming laborer.—

The rule is that where a Chinese person has been regularly admitted, for instance, as a merchant, the fact that he subsequently becomes a laborer does not of itself destroy his right to remain; such a fact is important only as it may tend to show that in reality he entered as a laborer, or for the purpose of immediately becoming a laborer, and so procured his admission through fraud and in violation of the Exclusion Acts. Lo Hop v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1919) 257 Fed. 489, 168 C. C. A. 493.

Vol. II, p. 104, sec. 2. [First ed., vol. I, p. 760.]

Deportation of returning merchant, based on fraud in original entry.—A Chinese person claiming the right to re-enter the United States under this act, as a returning merchant, may not be deported by executive action on the ground that the original entry was fraudulent, but he must be deemed to be entitled to a judicial inquiry and determination of his rights in view of the provision of that act that a Chinaman who applies for admission into the United States on the ground that he was formerly engaged therein as a merchant must establish the fact by two credible witnesses other than Chinese that he was such at least one year before his departure from the United States, and had not engaged during such year in any manual labor except such as was necessary in the conduct of his business. White v. Chin Fong, (1920) 253 U. S. 90, 40 S. Ct. 449, 64 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming C. C. A. (9th Cir. 1919) 258 Fed. 849, 169 C. C. A. 569.

Evidence — Sufficiency.—In the following cases the evidence was held to be insufficient to warrant the exclusion of Chinese from this country: Ex p. Chan Wy Sheung, (N. D. Cal. 1919) 262 Fed. 221; Ex p. Young Toy, (N. D. Cal. 1919) 262 Fed. 227; Ex p. Lum You, (N. D. Cal. 1919) 262 Fed. 451.

CITIZENSHIP

Vol. II, p. 116, sec. 1993. [First ed., vol. I, p. 786.]

Child of native born Chinaman.—To same effect as 1919 Supplement annotation, see Jeong Quey How v. White, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1919) 258 Fed. 618, 170 C. C. A. 72, wherein it was said:

"The appellant was first caused to be examined under the general immigration law, and was found admissible. He was then caused to be examined under the Chinese Exclusion Act, whereupon his application to enter the United States was denied, for want of sufficient proof that he was the son of Jeong Sun, his alleged father. The examination under the Chinese Exclusion Act was had before the immigration inspector. In Quan Hing Sun v. White, 254 Fed. 402, 165 C. C. A. 622, this court held that the claim of right to enter the United States, made by a Chinese person alleging himself to be a citizen of the United States, must first be determined by a special board of inquiry appointed by the Commission of Immigration, consisting of three members selected from the immigration officials under Act Feb. 20, 1907, c. 1134, 34 Stat. 898. (See vol. III, p. 636.) This right was denied the appellant, and on the authority of that decision it follows that the judgment of the court below must be reversed, and the cause remanded for further proceedings."

Vol. II, p. 162, sec. 9. [First ed., vol. I, p. 815.]

Ineligibility to appointment as cured by inadvertent overlooking of fact of two members in service.—The appointment of a person to a position in the classified service, who at the time of appointment has two members of her family in the service, one of whom entered it since her examination, is in violation of this section, and this ineligibility to appointment is not cured by the appointing officer having inadvertently overlooked the statement in the "Declaration of appointee" that a second member of the family had entered the service subsequent to the date of her application for examination. (1918) 31 Op. Atty-Gen. 324.

Effect of removal of residence on validity of appointment of third member.—Where there are already two members of the same family in the classified service, the removal of residence of another member of the family after appointment for the purpose of evading the disability imposed by this section, will not validate the appointment. (1918) 31 Op. Atty-Gen. 324.

CLAIMS

Vol. II, p. 177, sec. 190. [First ed., vol. II, p. 6.]

Officer in War Department as including officer in Army.—An officer in the United States Army is not by virtue of that fact alone an officer in the War Department within the meaning of this section which relates to the prosecution of claims against the United States. Where, however, Congress creates an office or bureau in the Department and authorizes the appointment of an Army officer to the office, or in the bureau, such Army officer, after receiving his new appointment, would fall within the reach of the section, for he would then be an officer in the Department. (1919) 31 Op. Atty-Gen. 471, wherein it was said:

"By the plain terms of this statute its prohibitions embrace only persons appointed 'as an officer, clerk, or employe in any of the departments'; that is to say, any of the executive departments. Section 159, Revised Statutes [see vol. III, p. 249]. Thus the question propounded by you is narrowed to the query whether a person appointed an officer in the Army is thereby appointed an officer in the Department of War.

"The precise question appears not to have been judicially determined, but I find that some of my predecessors, and other Federal law officers, in construing analogous statutes, have laid down principles, which, applied to the statute you ask me to interpret, compel a negative response to your question.

"Thus in 28 Op. 95, the question dealt with involved, inter alia, the power of the President under section 179, Revised Statutes, to authorize or direct an officer of the Navy to act as the head of the Navy Department. That section permitted such designation only in the event the Navy officer could be regarded as an officer in the Navy Department. In holding that he was not an officer in the department, Attorney General Wickersham said:

"But the person who may be authorized and directed to perform the duties of a vacant office under section 179 must be an officer in a department. It is not sufficient that he has been appointed an officer by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate; he must hold an office in a department which is established by law."

Vol. II, p. 179, sec. 3477. [First ed., vol. II, p. 7.]

Suit against Treasury officials to establish liens for attorney's fees upon funds in Treasury.—The restrictions imposed by this section, upon the assignment of claims against the United States, form no obstacle to a suit against Treasury officials to establish an equitable lien for attorney's fees upon a fund in the United States Treasury appropriated by Congress for payment to a specified person, also made a party defendant, in satisfaction of a finding of the Court of Claims. Houston v. Ormes, (1920) 252 U. S. 469, 40 S. Ct. 369, 64 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1918) 47 App. Cas. (D. C.) 364.

Contract making contingent attorney's fee lien on warrant issued in payment of claims.—A provision in a contract for the prosecution of a claim against the United States which purports to make the contingent attorney's fee therein provided for a lien upon any warrant which may be issued in payment of such claim is repugnant to this section, annulling assignments of such claims, or of any part or interest therein, made in advance of the allowance of the claim. Calhoun v. Massie, (1920) 253 U. S. 170, 40 S. Ct. 474, 64 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1918) 123 Va. 673, 97 S. E. 576.

Recovery under assignment against trustee in bankruptcy.—On a petition by a company for an order requiring a trustee in bankruptcy to turn over a certain sum due by the bankrupt to the petitioner under a contract, it appeared that the petitioner had agreed to furnish to the bankrupt certain automobile bodies and fenders to be used by it in carrying out a contract with the United States government. The bankrupt agreed that the title to the bodies and fenders should remain in the petitioner until delivery to the government, the warrants to be issued therefor to become the property of the petitioner, and to be collected, indorsed and forwarded by the bankrupt to the petitioner as its agent, any sum over the contract price of the bodies and fenders to be applied to the payment of any balance then due by the bankrupt to the petitioner, the bankrupt assigning to the petitioner all its right, title and interest in its contract with the government and agreeing to give such further assurance to the petitioner as it might deem necessary to carry out the agreement. The petition was denied on the ground that the assignment of claims contravened this section. In re Hudford Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 257 Fed. 722, 169 C. C. A. 10. The court said: The referee denied the petition, with costs, on the ground that the agreement of August 28, 1917, made before allowance by the government of the Hudford Company's claims and before issue of any warrants, was in contravention of section 3477, Rev. St. U. S. . . . The H. H. Babcock Company having filed a petition for review in the District Court, the District Judge held that although the agreement of August 28, 1917, was forbidden by section 3477, nevertheless it constituted a conditional sale, binding the proceeds of the warrants for the goods in the hands of the trustee, and as the property belonged to the petitioner, and not to the bankrupt, the transfer within four months of the filing of the petition in bankruptcy was not a preference under section 60b of the Bankruptcy Act. [See vol. I, p. 1026.] Bailey v. Baker Ice Machine Co., 239 U. S. 268, 36 Sup. Ct. 50, 60 L. Ed. 275. We think the learned judge erred. The Babcock Company knew that its title to the bodies, etc., could not be reserved, and was not intended to be reserved, as against the government, and that the only security it could expect was in the claim when allowed, and in the warrants to be issued by the government to the Hudford Company. But the Supreme Court has in the most explicit and unmistakable terms pronounced all such agreements, direct or indirect, absolutely void under section 3477. National Bank of Commerce v. Downie, 218 U. S. 345, 31 Sup. Ct. 89, 54 L. Ed. 1965, 20 Ann. Cas. 1116. In that case the bank had advanced money to the bankrupt upon the security of sixteen claims against the United States for materials furnished by the bankrupt, none of which claims had been allowed, and for none of which warrants had been issued. The court held that the assignments were absolutely void, and the bankrupts were still the owners of the claims, which passed not to the bank, but to their general creditors, as if no assignments had been made."

Vol. II, p. 216, sec. 3466. [First ed., vol. II, p. 45.]

Restrictions by Bankruptcy Act.—The right of the United States to claim priority under this section for debts due to it is restricted in the case of insolvents by sec. 57j of the Bankruptcy Act (1 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 979) to the actual pecuniary loss suffered by it. U. S. v. Birmingham Trust, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1919) 258 Fed. 562, 169 C. C. A. 502

Vol. II, p. 223, sec. 3468. [First ed., vol. II, p. 49.]

State laws are superseded by this section upon a distribution of assets coming within and affected by its provisions. American Surety Co. v. Carbon Timber Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 263 Fed. 295.

Equal priority of surety with United States.—Where a surety on the bond of a bankrupt to the United States pays the principal of the bond to the United States, he is entitled under this section to equal priority with the United States in his claim against the bankrupt's estate, regardless of the fact that other claims of the United States against the bankrupt's estate are unpaid. U. S. v. National Surety Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 262 Fed. 62. Regarding the effect of this section, the court said:

"When we come to section 3468, it is claimed by counsel for the United States that it must be so construed as to be of no force or effect, except in cases where the United States has no claim whatever to be satisfied, and it appearing in the present case that the United States has a claim against the estate of the bankrupt, said section is inoperative. The ground of this contention is that the priority granted by section 3466 still attaches to the claim of the United States, even as against the claims of respondent, and that no priority exists in favor of respondent until the claim of the United States is fully paid. If this contention is sound, we must read into section 3468 a proviso at the end of the last clause but one of the section, reading as follows: 'Provided that said United States has no claim against the insolvent estate.'

"We do not think we have any authority to interpolate such a proviso. We are of the opinion that, while the general priority of the United States is undoubted, it is within the power of Congress to qualify or limit this priority, and that by the enactment of section 3468 it has been provided that in the case mentioned in said section the priority of the United States has been transferred to a surety who has paid the penalty of a bond in full, notwithstanding the latter still has a claim against the insolvent. It is claimed by counsel for the United States that the surety in a case like the one at bar has no priority, unless he pays all of the debt or debts due from the bankrupt to the United States. The section which we are endeavoring to construe does not provide that the surety shall pay all the debt or debts due from the bankrupt estate to the United States, but only the money due upon such bond, and it is conceded that the respondent did this. It paid all the debt for which it was obligated as surety. If it should pay any more, it would be a mere volunteer, and not entitled to the right of subrogation as to the excess. It is not material, if the contention of counsel for the United States is right, whether the claim of the United States arises out of the same transaction as that of respondent or not.

"It is contended and it is no doubt the law that the priority of the sovereign exists in full force and vigor, unless qualified by express words. But we have express words in section 3468. We think that sections 3466 and 3468 should be construed together, so as to give both force and effect; the United States retaining its priority as to the balance of its claims against the bankrupt estate, and the respondent standing on a level with them as to its claim. No case has been cited, nor have we found one, deciding the question involved. The cases cited simply establish the proposition that, where the title of the United States and the citizen concur, the title of the United States, except so far as the legislature has thought fit to interfere, shall be preferred, and that where the principal in any bond given to the United States is insolvent, and any surety on the bond pays to the United States the money due upon such bond, such surety shall have the like priority for the recovery and receipt of the moneys out of the estate and effects of such insolvent as is secured to the United States. These rights are all given by the sections quoted and citation of other authority is unnecessary. Respondent's rights must be determined by section 3468. What its rights would be under the equitable doctrine of subrogation is not involved. The unreasonableness of the contention of counsel of the United States is made to appear when we consider a case where different bonds have been given by an insolvent to the United States with different sureties. One surety pays the full penalty of the bond on which he is liable, but he can have no priority until he has paid all the other bonds on which he is not liable."

Vol. II, p. 229, sec. 1. [First ed., vol. II, p. 91.]

I. ACT OF JAN. 11, 1915 (p. 230)

Reinstatement of claim.—A claim for Indian depredations which was dismissed by the Court of Claims on the ground that the band committing the depredations was not in amity with the United States was not reinstated by the Act of January 11, 1915, amending the Act of March 3, 1891, so that in all claims for property of citizens or inhabitants of the United States taken or destroyed by Indians belonging to any tribe in amity with and subject to the jurisdiction of the United States the alienage of the claimant will not be a defense, with a proviso that claims dismissed for want of proof of citizenship or alienage shall be reinstated. Rex v. U. S., (1920) 251 U. S. 392, 40 S. Ct. 181, 64 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1918) 53 Ct. Cl. 320, wherein the court said: "The claimant contends that the amendment had two purposes—not merely to give inhabitants the same rights as citizens, but also to admit claims for damage done by hostile bands from a tribe that maintained its amity, subject to a proviso that suit had been brought upon them theretofore in the Court of Claims. It is said that claims of that nature that still were pending in the court have been awarded judgment under the new jurisdiction. Another proviso in the Act is that claims that have been dismissed by the court for want of proof of citizenship or alienage shall be reinstated, and the petition prays that the former claim be consolidated with this suit, and that judgment be awarded upon the evidence filed in the former case. It is pointed out as an anomaly that the case of a neighbor of the intestate who suffered damage from the same band on the same day was reinstated and passed to judgment, his claim having been dismissed at an earlier date because he was not a citizen at the time. But we are of opinion that the judgment of the Court of Claims was plainly right. The emphasis and primary intent, at least, of the Act of 1915 was to remove the defense of alienage. When it goes on by an express proviso to reinstate claims dismissed upon that ground and says nothing as to the other class it is impossible to extend the words. According to the claimant's necessary argument Congress had claims for damage by hostile bands before its eyes. On the face of the act it had before them also the matter of reinstatement. Yet it did not purport to reinstate claims of the present class. According to the claimant's account there was something for the act to operate on in the way of damage by hostile bands and the words cannot be carried further than they go."

Limitation of action.—Considered as a new claim, a suit brought since the amendment of January 11, 1915, to the Act of March 3, 1891, to recover for depredations committed by a hostile band from an Indian tribe in amity with the United States, is barred by the three years limitation in the original act. Rex v. U. S., (1920) 251 U. S. 392, 40 S. Ct. 181, 64 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1918) 53 Ct. Cl. 320.

COLLISIONS

Vol. II, p. 389, art. 16. [First ed., vol. II, p. 160.]

What constitutes moderate speed.—To same effect as first paragraph of original annotation, see The Fjell, (E. D. Va. 1919) 257 Fed. 478.

Rule absolute—Duty to stop.—To same effect as original annotation, see The Suffolk, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 258 Fed. 219, 169 C. C. A. 287, wherein it was held that two vessels were mutually liable for a collision in a fog, one for proceeding at an excessive speed and the other for failure to stop on hearing the first vessel's signal ahead on her bow.

Excessive speed.—In The Brabandier, (E. D. Va. 1919) 260 Fed. 858, it was held that a steamer was solely at fault for a collision on a foggy night where she held to her course and failed to reduce her speed after she heard the fog signals of the vessel with which she collided.

Vol. II, p. 393, art. 18. [First ed., vol. II, p. 161.]

Rule applied.—In The William P. Palmer, (E. D. Va. 1919) 261 Fed. 925, it was held that where two steam vessels met end on, the one failing to alter its course to the starboard was solely at fault for a collision.

Vol. II, p. 393, art. 20. [First ed., vol. II, p. 162.]

Burden of avoiding collision.—To same effect as original annotation, see The Shawmut, (E. D. Pa. 1919) 261 Fed. 616.

Rule applied.—In The Shawmut, (E. D. Pa. 1919) 261 Fed. 616, it appeared that the steamer and schooner sighted each other when they were nearly three miles apart and approaching on converging courses. It was held that the steamer was solely at fault for not keeping out of the schooner's way in accordance with the provisions of this article.

In The Stimson, (E. D. Va. 1919) 257 Fed. 702, it appeared that a steamship collided with a schooner at night. The lights of the schooner were set and burning and the steamship admitted having observed them about two and one-half minutes before the collision but claimed that the collision was the result of inevitable accident, in that, when it was too late to avoid the consequences thereof, the connecting shaft of the steering gear broke and parted, through a latent defect, causing the injury. It was held that the steamship, being the burdened vessel, was bound to keep out of the schooner's way and was at fault for not doing so, and that she could not avail herself of the defense of inevitable accident since there was no excuse for her failure to see the schooner's lights earlier and take precautions to avoid the collision.

Burden of proof.—This article imposes upon the steamer the burden of showing why the collision occurred if the steamer observed the rule laid down herein. The Shawmut, (E. D. Pa. 1919) 261 Fed. 616.

Vol. II, p. 396, art. 24. [First ed., vol. II, p. 162.]

Violation of rule.—In The Northland, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1919) 262 Fed. 245, it was held that a steamship overtaking a schooner at night was solely at fault for collision with the latter, where it appeared that the schooner had all her lights burning and that the steamship did not maintain a proper lookout so as to discover the schooner in time to keep out of the way.

Vol. II, p. 397, art. 27. [First ed., vol. II, p. 163.]

Inevitable accident.—A steamship may not avoid liability for a collision in overtaking a schooner at night on the ground of inevitable accident, where it appears that, although her steering gear became disabled about the time she discovered the lights of the schooner a half mile distant, she had not maintained a proper lookout prior to that time which would have enabled her to observe the schooner when it was two miles distant. The Northland, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1919) 262 Fed. 245. The court said:

"The evidence as to when and how the steering gear was broken is far from satisfactory. The schooner was the favored vessel. Therefore it was the duty of the steamer to exercise such care as was necessary to avoid a collision with her. Not having by proper lookout observed the schooner when at least two miles away, the speed the steamer was making resulted in its coming in such close proximity to the schooner that it was well-nigh impossible to avoid hitting her, which places the steamer in the wrong. Therefore, if the steering gear really broke at the time as contended by appellant, it did not present a case of inevitable accident. There is evidence tending to show that they did not discover the break until after the accident, and in this connection it is significant that they displayed no signals to indicate this trouble for more than two hours after the collision."

Vol. II, p. 407, rule 15. [First ed., vol. II, p. 171.]

Rule applied.—In The Martin Mullen, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1919) 260 Fed. 916, two steamers collided in a fog on Lake Superior. Both vessels were held at fault for a violation of this rule, one for traveling at a speed of eleven miles an hour in the fog and for not maintaining a sufficient lookout, and the other for traveling at a speed of eight miles an hour.

In The J. J. Hill, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1919) 260 Fed. 655, 171 C. C. A. 419, a libel was dismissed because of the fault of the libellant's vessel in proceeding at approximately her full speed after the signals of another vessel apparently not more than four points from right ahead.

Vol. II, p. 415, sec. 1. [Definitions.] [First ed., vol. II, p. 174.]

"Steam vessel."—A vessel which at the time of a collision is being propelled partly by sail and partly by steam is a steam vessel within the meaning of this section. The Alice M. Guthrie, (E. D. Va. 1919) 257 Fed. 472.

Vol. II, p. 416, art. 2 (a). [First ed., vol. II, p. 174.]

Absence of light contributory.—Since a vessel propelled in part by sail and in part by machinery is a steam vessel within section 1 of this act, it is required by this article to exhibit a white masthead light, as well as red and green running lights, and where it fails to exhibit the white light it will be held liable for a collision occasioned by such failure. The Alice M. Guthrie, (E. D. Va. 1919) 257 Fed. 472.

Vol. II, p. 423, art. 18, rule 1. [First ed., vol. II, p. 178.]

Mutual fault.—In Border Line Transp. Co. v. Canadian Pac. R. Co., (W. D. Wash. 1919) 262 Fed. 989, it was held that both vessels were at fault in a collision, the one for answering a signal and failing to maneuver in accordance therewith, and the other for failure to reverse its engine when the collision appeared to be inevitable.

The two-blast signal provided for by this article should not be sounded unless both side-lights of the approaching vessel are visible. Com. v. Seaboard Transp. Co., (D. C. Mass. 1919) 258 Fed. 707.

Tug at rest—other tug passing.—In The John D. Dailey, (E. D. N. Y. 1919) 260 Fed. 241, it appeared that a tug was at rest and engaged in lashing her tow alongside, when another tug approaching blew a one-whistle signal and shortly thereafter collided with her. It was held that the moving tug was solely at fault, since she had initiated the navigation by her signal, and was bound to keep out of the way of the tug and tow at rest, and that, since the moving tug had sufficient room to pass between the shore and the tug at rest, the latter was under no duty to do anything except remain stationary until the former had passed by.

Tugs with tows passing — effect of tide.— In The Aurora. (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 258 Fed. 439, 169 C. C. A. 455, it was held that a tug with a long tow was solely at fault for a collision with the tow of another tug while passing it, where it appeared that the collision was due to the effect of the tide in swinging the end of the first tug's tow against that of the second tug, and because the first tug did not have sufficient power to keep her tow in line.

Vol. II, p. 428, art. 19. [First ed., vol. II, p. 180.]

Both vessels at fault.— In The Comport. (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 260 Fed. 151, 171 C. C. A. 187, it appeared that the steam lighter Bettie Lee, coming up East river, bound to Manhattan, and bearing diagonally across the river to a point above the Brooklyn bridge, collided with the steam lighter Comport, which was crossing the river diagonally from the foot of Wall street, Manhattan, to Brooklyn. The vessels were concededly on crossing courses, the Comport, having the Lee on her starboard side, being bound to keep out of the way, and the Lee being bound to hold her course and speed. The Comport, when about 200 feet distant from the Lee, blew one whistle and ported, so as to head more down the stream. The master of the Lee blew an alarm and reversed full speed astern, and the Comport did likewise, but the vessels collided. It was held that both lighters were at fault, the Lee for failure to maintain a lookout and for improper navigation when the collision was imminent, and the Comport for failure to maintain a lookout and for not keeping out of the Lee's way as required by this article.

Vol. II, p. 430, art. 20. [First ed., vol. II, p. 180.]

Rule applied.— In The Manaway, (E. D. Va. 1919) 257 Fed. 476, it was held that a steamship was at fault in colliding with a schooner. Regarding this article, the court said:

"The steamship was the burdened vessel, and the one against whom presumptions of fault, if any, are to be solved. She was charged, not only with avoiding collision, but the risk thereof, with this sailing vessel (article 20, Inland Rules of Navigation), and it was incumbent on her not to take chances. The danger of collision was sufficiently present when the schooner, whose course was unascertained, was observed 150 yards away, to admonish the steamship to take no chances. Observing the loom of the schooner within that close proximity on the steamship's starboard, her navigator should have immediately stopped and reversed, giving the appropriate signals to that end, and to have first starboarded, without slackening speed, and then hard a-starboarded before stopping and reversing, was a manifest and gross fault of navigation, sufficient in itself to account for, and in the judgment of the court did bring about, the collision."

Vol. II, p. 433, art. 22. [First ed., vol. II, p. 180.]

Rule applied.— In The North America, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 258 Fed. 923, 169 C. C. A. 643, a tug with a barge in tow was held, on the evidence, solely in fault for a collision between her tow and that of another tug in New York harbor at night, on the ground that she held her course directly toward the other tug until they were so close that there was danger of collision, and then attempted to cross its bow with her tow.

Vol. II, p. 434, art. 23. [First ed., vol. II, p. 180.]

Nature of duty imposed.— "The rules of navigation for preventing collisions at sea (article 23) impose on steamers, in the presence of impending danger, the duty to slacken speed, or stop or reverse, if necessary, and mean that such precaution shall be timely taken; and to delay action in that respect, or fail promptly and seasonably to take the necessary steps to avoid risk of collision, must be at the peril of the steamship. Nelson v. The Leland, 22 How. 48, 55, 16 L. Ed. 269; The New York, 175 U. S. 187, 201, 22 Sup. Ct. 67, 44 L. Ed. 126; The State of Alabama (D. C.) 17 Fed. 847, 853, and cases cited." The Manaway, (E. D. Va. 1919) 257 Fed. 476.

Vol. II, p. 434, art. 24. [First ed., vol. II, p. 180.]

"Finally past and clear."— Where a ferryboat, proceeding down Hudson river, overtook and passed a steam lighter, a half or three-quarters of a mile from the place where the boats later collided, it was held she was "finally past and clear" of the lighter at the time of the collision, and hence was not the overtaking vessel within the meaning of this section. The New York Central No. 28, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 258 Fed. 553, 169 C. C. A. 493.

Attempting to pass between vessels.— In The Thomas J. O'Brien, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 257 Fed. 728, 169 C. C. A. 16, a tug with tow bound into New York harbor entered a channel at the same time as a tug with tow going in the opposite direction. As the two tugs were passing each other, a third tug with tow, also outward bound, attempted to pass between them and collided with the first tug. It was held, under the evidence, that the first tug was at fault for not giving the other tugs more room in passing, and that the third tug was at fault in attempting to pass between the first and second tugs.

Overtaken vessel changing its course.— An overtaken vessel is at fault under this article for changing its course so as to bring it in the path of the overtaking vessel, when there is no occasion for its doing so. The New York Central No. 28, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 258 Fed. 553, 169 C. C. A. 493.

Overtaking vessel drifting backward on tide.—In The Winfield S. Cahill, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 258 Fed. 318, 169 C. C. A. 334, it appeared that a tug with a number of barges in tow overtook a steamship being towed by several barges off Governor's Island in New York harbor. The tug had been proceeding down North river and attempted to turn into East river, but was swept downstream by the tide and one of the barges collided with the steamship. It was held that the tug, being the overtaking vessel, was solely at fault for failing to keep out of the steamship's way.

Vol. II, p. 436, art. 25. [First ed., vol. II, p. 180.]

Rule not inflexible.—To same effect as original annotation, see The C. Gallagher, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 262 Fed. 97, wherein the court said regarding the application of this article: "Article 25 requires steamers to keep the starboard side of a narrow channel 'when it is safe and practicable.' The testimony is quite convincing that hawser tows west bound, in approaching North Brothers Island on a flood tide, navigate on the port side of the channel in order to give east bound hawser tows room to round North Brothers Island and pass the railroad piers on the north side in safety. The flood tide in the main channel sets on Oak Bluff and the New York side opposite the northern end of North Brothers Island, and is then deflected slightly toward Riker's Island; this set being somewhat counteracted by the direction of the weaker tide coming through the shallow channel between North Brothers Island and South Brothers Island. We regard this as a reasonable practice, justifying a departure from the general rule described in article 25 and have recognized similar practices at other points. The Three Brothers, 170 Fed. 48, 95 C. C. A. 322; The Transfer No. 21, 248 Fed. 459, 160 C. C. A. 469.

"The proctors for the Spartan cite two decisions of the late Judge Adams in the District Court that at this particular point steamers must conform to article 25. The Transfer No. 10 (D. C.) 138 Fed. 221; The Abram F. Skidmore (D. C.) 160 Fed. 265. In those cases there was no evidence of the practice proved in this case, and the decision of the same judge arising out of a collision at a bend in the Harlem river in the later case of The Three Brothers (D. C.) 162 Fed. 388, was reversed (170 Fed. 48, 95 C. C. A. 322), on the ground that local conditions justified a departure from article 25."

Burden of proof arising from violation.—A vessel which violates this article has the burden of showing that such violation was not one of the causes of the collision. Com.

v. Seaboard Transp. Co., (D. C. Mass. 1919) 258 Fed. 707. Regarding this question, the court said:

"The presumption of fault from a violation of statute is not conclusive; the burden of proof which it throws upon the offending vessel, though heavy, may be met. A vessel may be so established in her course on the wrong side of a narrow channel, and may so clearly and seasonably indicate to an approaching vessel her intention to stay there, that, if the other vessel have ample opportunity to size up the situation and avoid her, and does not do so, but brings about a collision through her own negligence, the statutory violation is regarded as a mere condition, and the accident as due wholly to the negligence of the vessel which failed to avoid it when she had a clear chance to do so by the exercise of reasonable care. The Clara & Reliance, 55 Fed. 1021, 5 C. C. A. 390.

"Such severe requirements for exculpation can, however, but seldom be met. If the approaching vessel acted not unreasonably on the assumption that the other vessel would give way and maneuvered accordingly, or was confused and embarrassed by the other vessel holding to its wrongful course, exculpation is not made out."

Passing vessel at fault.—In The Van, (S. D. Fla. 1919) 258 Fed. 268, it appeared that a steamship, while under way in the narrow channel of the Miami river, cast off a line from the bow of a motor barge alongside, by which such barge was fastened to the steamer. As a result thereof the steamer struck the stern of the barge, and the force of the contact caused the bow of the barge to collide with a yacht lying at a nearby dock. It was held that the steamship was at fault for making such a maneuver in a narrow channel.

Vineyard Sound, in the vicinity of West Chop lighthouse, is a "narrow channel" within the meaning of this article. Com. v. Seaboard Transp. Co., (D. C. Mass. 1919) 258 Fed. 707.

Vol. II, p. 440, art. 27. [First ed., vol. II, p. 181.]

Special circumstances.—In The Dorset, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1919) 260 Fed. 32, 171 C. C. A. 68, a steamer, while backing from her slip in charge of a tug, collided with a barge moving down the channel of the harbor in tow of another tug. It was held that the situation was one of special circumstances under this article, that the steamer was at fault in not giving the proper signals and in not reversing her engines so as to avoid the collision, and that the second tug was at fault for continuing her course and speed down the channel and failing to take reasonable precautions after the danger of collision became apparent.

Steamer leaving slip.—This rule applies to a steamer leaving its slip preparatory to getting on its definite course. The Edouard

Alfred, (E. D. N. Y. 1919) 261 Fed. 680, wherein it was held that both vessels were at fault for failure to avoid danger, where greater care would have prevented the collision.

Vol. II, p. 442, art. 29. [First ed., vol. II, p. 181.]

Duty to have lookout.—In the following cases vessels were held to be in fault for a collision because of failure to maintain a proper and efficient lookout: The O'Brien, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 258 Fed. 614, 170 C. C. A. 68; The M. J. Rudolph, (E. D. N. Y. 1920) 262 Fed. 780.

Presumption arising from breach of statutory duty.—On a libel against a vessel to recover damages caused by her colliding with and sinking another vessel, where it appears from the evidence that she did not have her stack lights burning in accordance with the provisions of this rule, she has the burden of proving that this breach of statutory duty could not have been the cause of the collision, and if she fails to sustain such burden, the presumption, arising from the breach, that the collision was due to this fault, remains. The Duquesne, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1920) 262 Fed. 1; The Duquesne, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1920) 262 Fed. 5.

CONGRESS

Vol. II, p. 533, sec. 105. [First ed., vol. II, p. 239.]

In an action against the clerk of the House of Representatives to recover damages because of an alleged failure of defendant, as such clerk, to print testimony in an election contest in which the plaintiff was the contestant, a demurrer to the declaration was properly sustained where the latter did not show, by a statement of facts, compliance with every substantial requirement of this section and of R. S. sec. 127, as amended, 2 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 538, but merely averred compliance in the form of a conclusion of law. Prigleau v. Trimble, (App. Cas. D. C. 1919) 261 Fed. 454.

COPYRIGHT

Vol. II, p. 544, sec. 1. [First ed., 1909 Supp., p. 81.]

Abandonment.—The public performance of a dramatic or musical composition is not an abandonment of the composition to the public. Only a publication of the manuscript will amount to an abandonment of the rights of the author and a transfer of them to the public domain. Hence, it is not such a publication to give a song to a limited number of vaudeville artists to sing prior to the date of its copyright, where there is no evidence or probability that any of the copies were sold, or that they were given out for any other purpose. McCarthy v. White, (S. D. N. Y. 1919) 259 Fed. 364.

Vol. II, p. 548, sec. 1 (e). [First ed., 1909 Supp., p. 81.]

Rights of foreigners under subdivision.—Regarding the rights of foreigners under this subdivision, Manton, J., said in Ricordi v. Columbia Graphophone Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1919) 258 Fed. 72:

"I think it is clear that Congress intended that domiciled foreigners are entitled to the benefit of the provisions of subdivision (e) section 1, of the act, and that it intended only to exclude subjects or citizens of countries denying similar protection to our citizens. In other words, it intended that domiciled foreigners should receive the same protection and have the same rights as American citizens. An infringement is admitted if it be held that the copyright is good and should be protected. The correspondence indicates clearly that the defendant took the position that the copyright was void and afforded no protection to plaintiff. As indicated above, I think the position assumed by the defendant was erroneous, and a decree is granted for the plaintiff."

Effect of joint authorship by citizen and alien.—A song which is the result of joint authorship by a citizen of the United States and an alien domiciled in this country, is entitled to be copyrighted under this section. In such case it should be treated as if the United States citizen was the sole author thereof. Ricordi v. Columbia Graphophone Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1919) 258 Fed. 72.

Effect of giving notice of use pending action.—An appeal by the defendant in an infringement suit will be dismissed where after the decree the defendant, without the knowledge of his counsel, gave the notice of use provided by this section. Ricordi v. Columbia Graphophone Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 283 Fed. 354.

"Domiciled within the United States."—In Ricordi v. Columbia Graphophone Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1919) 258 Fed. 72, it was held that a joint author of a song, who was a Canadian by birth but who came to New York with the intention of making that city his home, brought all his personal belongings with him, opened a bank account there, joined various clubs, and engaged in activities consistent with his intention of making that city his permanent home, was "domiciled within the United States" within the meaning of this section.

Grant of right to produce copyrighted play as including moving picture rights.—The right to represent a copyrighted play in moving pictures cannot be deemed to have been embraced in a grant by a playwright of the sole and exclusive license and liberty to produce, perform, and represent the play within the territorial limits stated, subject to the other terms and conditions of the contract, under which the play is to be continued for seventy-five performances for each ensuing theatrical season for five years, the royalties provided for are adapted only to regular stage presentation, and the play is to be presented in first-class theaters with a competent company, and with a designated actress in the title role, there being stipulations against alterations, eliminations, or additions, and that the rehearsals and production of the play shall be under the direction of the author, and a further provision that the play may be released for stock if it fails in New York city and on the road, or in case the net profits fall below a stipulated amount. Manners v. Morosco, (1920) 252 U. S. 317, 40 S. Ct. 335, 64 U. S. (L. ed.) —, reversing (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 258 Fed. 557, 169 C. C. A. 497.

Implied covenants in lease of right to use copyright.—There is implied a negative covenant on the part of the lessor of the right to use a copyright not to use the ungranted portion of the copyright estate to the detriment, if not destruction, of the licensee's estate. Manners v. Morosco, (1920) 252 U. S. 317, 40 S. Ct. 335, 64 U. S. (L. ed.) —, reversing (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 258 Fed. 557, 169 C. C. A. 497.

Injunctive relief to prevent copyrighted play from being presented in moving pictures, how conditioned.—Injunctive relief to the owner of the copyright in a play against the unauthorized representation of such play by his licensee in moving pictures will only be granted upon condition that the former shall also abstain from presenting or authorizing the representation of the play in moving pictures during the life of the license agreement within the territorial limits therein stated. Manners v. Morosco, (1920) 252 U. S. 317, 40 S. Ct. 335, 64 U. S. (L. ed.) —, reversing (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 258 Fed. 557, 169 C. C. A. 497, (S. D. N. Y. 1918) 254 Fed. 737.

Docket fee on remand of removed causes to state court.—An order remanding a cause which has been removed from a state court is a final disposition thereof in the federal court, and may be regarded as a judgment rendered without a jury, for which a docket fee of $10 may be allowed. Jones v. Delta Land, etc., Co., (D. C. Nev. 1918) 258 Fed. 761.

Violation of laws of Alaska.—A defendant who is convicted of a violation of the Session Laws of Alaska 1913, pp. 120, 121, in that he willfully permitted his wife to practice prostitution, may be subjected to the payment of the costs of the prosecution under this section. Johnson v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1919) 260 Fed. 783, 171 C. C. A. 509, wherein the court said:

"The remaining point on behalf of the plaintiff in error relates to the inclusion in the judgment against the defendant of the costs of the prosecution. The record shows that the bail bond executed by and on behalf of the defendant provided for the payment of such costs in the event of the affirmance of the judgment. Section 974 of the Revised Statutes is as follows:

"When judgment is rendered against the defendant in a prosecution for any fine or forfeiture incurred under a statute of the United States, he shall be subject to the payment of costs; and on every conviction for any other offense not capital, the court may, in its discretion, award that the defendant shall pay the costs of the prosecution."

"By section 3 of the Act of Congress of August 24, 1912 (37 Stat. 512, c. 387), it is provided: 'That the Constitution of the United States, and all the laws thereof which are not locally inapplicable, shall have the same force and effect within the said territory. [Alaska] as elsewhere in the United States.'

"And the amendatory Act of August 29, 1914 (38 Stat. 710, c. 292), declares that: 'In the prosecuting of all crimes denounced by territorial laws the costs shall be paid the same as is now or may hereafter be provided by Act of Congress providing for the prosecution of criminal offenses in said territory.'

"This court held in the case of Nagle v. United States, 191 Fed. 141, 111 C. C. A. 621, that all laws of Congress of general application, not locally inapplicable, are in effect in Alaska. That being so, we think the decisions in the cases of American Surety Co. v. United States, 239 Fed. 680, 152 C. C. A. 514, Fidelity & Deposit Co. of Maryland v. Expanded Metal Co., et al., 183 Fed. 568, 106 C. C. A. 114, and Hardesty v. United States, 184 Fed. 269, 106 C. C. A. 411, apply and are a sufficient answer to the point under consideration."

Compensation of auditor and stenographer in reference as taxable costs in favor of prevailing party.—While the compensation of auditor and stenographer, in a reference of an action at law involving complicated issues of fact to such auditor to simplify and clarify the issues and make tentative findings of fact, may be taxed as costs, in the absence of any statute, federal or state, or rule of court to the contrary, such costs must, in view of this section, be taxed to the prevailing party, and may not be taxed in whole or in part against the prevailing party, in the discretion of the trial court. *Es p. Appellate proceedings in forma pauperis.—In Crane v. U. S., (1919), 40 S. Ct. 117, 64 U. S. (L. ed.) — (opinion below, see (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1919) 259 Fed. 480, 170 C. C. A. 456) the court denied a motion to direct the clerk of the Circuit Court of Appeals to certify and forward the original transcript of record in the cause and a motion for leave to prosecute the cause in forma pauperis.

In McKnight v. U. S., (1920) 251 U. S. 543, 40 S. Ct. 180, 64 U. S. (L. ed.) —, the per curiam is as follows: "The prayer to be allowed to proceed in forma pauperis for the purpose of an application for certiorari to review the judgment below, as well as for the purpose of an appeal asked to review a refusal to release on habeas corpus, made to the Chief Justice and by him submitted to the court for its action, is hereby denied."

In Kisin v. California, (1920) 251 U. S. 547, 40 S. Ct. 480, 64 U. S. (L. ed.) —, a motion for leave to proceed in forma pauperis in the case and that the clerk of the federal Supreme Court be directed to file the petition for a writ of certiorari was denied.

In Holbert v. Patrick, (1920), 40 S. Ct. 481, 64 U. S. (L. ed.) —, a motion for leave to proceed in forma pauperis was denied.

CRIMINAL LAW

Vol. II, p. 654, sec. 1014. [First ed., vol. II, p. 321.]

Rights and liabilities of sureties.—The surety on a forfeited bail bond cannot charge a fund held in trust as security against liability on such bond with his expenses in defending the trust and establishing its priority over the claims of the United States, nor with the poundage fees of a clerk of court having possession of such fund. Leary v. U. S., (1920) 253 U. S. 94, 40 S. Ct. 446, 64 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1919) 257 Fed. 246, 168 C. C. A. 330.

Validity of indictment as question for committing magistrate.—Any reasonable doubt as to the validity of an indictment charging the commission of an offense against the United States is to be resolved, not by the committing magistrate in another federal district, but by the court which found the indictment after the accused had been removed to that district for trial. Stallings v. Splain, (1920) 253 U. S. 339, 40 S. Ct. 339, 64 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming 49 App. Cas. (D. C.) —.

Arrest without warrant in another district.—A person charged with a felony by an indictment found in one federal district, who has fled to another district, may be arrested without warrant by a peace officer in the latter district, and be detained a reasonable time to await the institution of proceedings for his removal to the district where the indictment was found. The arrest being lawful without warrant is none the less so because the peace officer was possessed of a bench warrant issued in the federal district where the indictment was found. Stallings v. Splain, (1920) 253 U. S. 339, 40 S. Ct. 339, 64 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming 49 App. Cas. (D. C.) —.

Pendency of habeas corpus proceedings as affecting jurisdiction of commissioner to entertain application for arrest of accused for same offense.—The pendency of a habeas corpus proceeding raising the question of the legality of an arrest and detention to await proceedings for the removal to another federal district of a person there charged with an offense against the United States did not deprive a United States commissioner of jurisdiction to entertain a subsequent application for the arrest of the accused on an affidavit of complaint setting forth the same offenses charged in the indictment. Stallings v. Splain, (1920) 253 U. S. 339, 40 S. Ct. 339, 64 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming 49 App. Cas. (D. C.) —.

Power of grand jury to investigate.—The power and duty of the grand jury to investigate is original and complete, susceptible of exercise upon its own motion, and upon such knowledge as it may derive from any source which it may deem proper, and is not, therefore, dependent for its exertion upon the approval or disapproval of the court, and such power is continuous, and is therefore not exhausted or limited by adverse action taken by a grand jury or by its failure to act, and hence may thereafter be exerted as to the same instances by the same or a subsequent grand jury. *U. Violation of provision of Selective Service Act relating to keeping of house of ill fame.—In Blanc v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1919) 258 Fed. 921, 169 C. C. A. 641, it was held in a prosecution for keeping a house of ill fame in violation of section 13 of the Selective Service Act (9 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d. ed.) 1163), that as the imprisonment for violation of the section could not be more than one year in the penitentiary, the crime was not infamous and the prosecution could be begun by information of the district attorney. See to the same effect De Four v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1919) 260 Fed. 596, 171 C. C. A. 360; Pollard v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1919) 261 Fed. 336.

Power of district attorney to present information without previous approval of court.—The United States district attorney, in virtue of his official duty, and to the extent that criminal charges are susceptible of being preferred by information, has the power to present such informations without the previous approval of the court, and his duty to direct the attention of the grand jury to crimes which he thinks have been committed is co-terminous with the authority of the grand jury to entertain such charges. U. S. v. Thompson, (1920) 251 U. S. 407, 40 S. Ct. 289, 64 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

A federal district attorney may, without first obtaining leave of court, present to one grand jury charges which a previous grand jury has ignored. U. S. v. Thompson, (1920) 251 U. S. 407, 40 S. Ct. 289, 64 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Constitutionality.—This section is constitutional. Showalter v. U. S., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1919) 260 Fed. 719, 171 C. C. A. 457, wherein the court said:

"He [the defendant] asserts by the first that the Constitution of the United States, properly construed, requires that each indictment shall be passed on by a separate jury, and that therefore the consolidation statute is itself invalid. If a statement of the contention is not its own sufficient answer, it would still be true that there must come a time when a question must be treated as finally settled. In view of the hundreds of cases in which like consolidations have been made and sustained by all courts, including the highest, it came many years ago. There is nothing to show that in making the order in this case the court below abused its discretion."

Offenses held to have been properly joined.—In Balbas v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1919) 257 Fed. 17, 168 C. C. A. 229, it was held that counts charging various violations of section 3 of the Espionage Act (1918 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. 122) through the publication of editorials in a newspaper, could be properly joined in one indictment under this section.

Various offenses arising out of a conspiracy in violation of the provisions of the Espionage Act may be joined in separate counts in the same indictment under this section. Reeder v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 262 Fed. 36.

Offenses against the Espionage Act (1918 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. 120), the Trading with the Enemy Act (1918 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. 846) and section 211 of the Penal Laws (7 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 788), all arising from the same transaction, wherein the defendants conspired in the writing, publication and depositing in the mails of certain articles, may all be joined in the same indictment under the provisions of this section. Magon v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1919) 260 Fed. 811, 171 C. C. A. 537.

Charges that the defendants converted to their own use, in violation of section 36 of the Penal Laws (7 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 533), property of the United States which had been placed in their possession to enable them to perform a government contract, may be joined in separate counts in one indictment. Horowitz v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 262 Fed. 48, wherein the court said: "The several charges were connected together and were of the same class of offenses. The same persons were charged in each count with acts connected together, viz. applying to their own use, etc., property of the same person which was to be used in the same contract at the same place and about the same time, and they were charged with exactly the same offense in each count."

A count in an indictment charging the defendant with the introduction of intoxicating liquors in the Indian country, may be properly joined with one charging him with having possession of intoxicating liquors in the Indian country. U. S. v. Luther, (E. D. Okla. 1919) 260 Fed. 579.

Indictments held to have been properly consolidated.—Where the same defendants are included in two indictments, the first of which is for conspiracy to defraud the government of taxes like those of which it is alleged in the second indictment the government was actually defrauded, the indictments involve transactions of the same character, "transactions connected together," and "of the same class of crimes or offenses" within the meaning of this section, and indictments may be properly ordered to be consolidated. Kelly v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1919) 258 Fed. 392, 169 C. C. A. 408.

Vol. II, p. 681, sec. 1025. [First ed., vol. II, p. 340.]

Allegations of time.—To same effect as third paragraph of original annotation, see Bryant v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1919) 257 Fed. 378, 168 C. C. A. 418.

The conclusion of an information is purely formal, and though it be technically incorrect the defect is cured by this section. Pollard v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1919) 261 Fed. 336.

Failure to negative exceptions of act.—The failure of an indictment under section 1 of the Harrison Act (4 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 177) to negative the exceptions set forth in the act, is a harmless defect under this section. U. S. v. Loewenthal, (N. D. Ohio 1919) 257 Fed. 444.

Failure to allege making of report.—An indictment under R. S. sec. 5209 (6 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 770), which charges the defendant, a bank president, with aiding and abetting the making of false entries in a report to the Comptroller of the Currency, and which after such charge contains in parenthesis the words: "(Which said report then and there purported to be made to the Comptroller of the Currency of the United States, etc.)," is not defective on the ground that it fails to charge that the report was made, but only that it purported to be made. Such a defect is cured by this section. Boone v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 257 Fed. 963, 169 C. C. A. 113, wherein it was said:

"What the pleader of the count meant was that the report, being false, only purported to be a report. In what manner this tended to the prejudice of the defendant we cannot conceive. It is therefore clearly within the provisions of section 1025 Rev. Stat. The court committed no error in overruling the demurrer or the motion in arrest of judgment."

Failure to allege character of public use of land.—Where in a prosecution for murder, jurisdiction is claimed by the government under the third paragraph of section 272 of the Penal Laws (7 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 890), the indictment is sufficient under this section if the defendant is fully informed as to the locus of the alleged offense and the claim of exclusive federal jurisdiction arising from it, although it fails to allege the character of public use for which the parcel of land was acquired and used by the government. Brown v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1919) 257 Fed. 46, 168 C. C. A. 258.

Indictment held sufficient—Conversion of property of United States.—An indictment charging that the defendants knowingly applied to their own use and sold certain property of the United States in violation of section 36 of the Penal Laws (7 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 533), is sufficient under the provisions of this section without alleging how the property came into the possession of the defendants. Horowitz v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 262 Fed. 48.

Vol. II, p. 687, sec. 1032. [First ed., vol. II, p. 343.]

Necessity of plea.—Where after a jury is impaneled and sworn, the clerk of the court reads the indictment to the jury, and in the presence of the defendant and his counsel states that the defendant has entered a plea thereto of not guilty, to which statement no objection is made by the defendant, he may not urge such objection for the first time in the appellate court. Shidler v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1919) 257 Fed. 620, 168 C. C. A. 570, wherein it was said:

"It is said that the court erred in denying motion in arrest of judgment. This assignment rests upon the contention that defendant never was arraigned and never was called upon to plead. The transcript shows that, when the bill of exceptions was presented to the District Court for allowance and settlement, the words 'and no issue of not guilty has ever been joined in said cause' were stricken out, and the following inserted: 'The indictment was presented May 25, 1918. May 29th it was ordered that defendant appear for arraignment June 3d. A demurrer to the indictment was filed and argued June 8th, and on the 11th the demurrer was overruled. June 12th, both Mr. Woodburn, the District Attorney, and Mr. Scanlan, attorney for the defendant, were present in court. At that time this arrangement and colloquy occurred: Mr. Woodburn: 'Both counsel for the government and for Shidler have received notice that the demurrer was overruled, and I would like to fix a date for trial; and I am willing to stipulate with counsel that he may enter his plea on the day of the trial so as to save a trip here. That is the understanding?' Mr. Scanlan replied, 'Yes;' and at that time the trial was set for July 8th. Prior to the trial, and on June 24th, the defendant filed an affidavit to procure the attendance of witnesses in his behalf at the expense of the government. An order was made in accordance with the prayer of his petition, and the witnesses were subsequently produced on the day of the trial. At that time both parties appeared, and both announced they were ready for trial. After the jury was impaneled and sworn, the clerk of this court read the indictment to the jury, and in the presence of the defendant and his counsel stated that defendant had entered a plea thereto of not guilty. No objection was made to proceeding with the cause because the arraignment had not been had, and no plea of not guilty was entered. The objection was not raised until the conclusion of the trial, and after verdict was rendered.'

"Under R. S. sec. 1032 it is provided in effect that when a person indicted for an offense, upon his arraignment, stands mute or refuses to plead, it shall be the duty of the court to enter a plea of not guilty on his behalf, in the same manner as if he had pleaded not guilty thereto, and when a person pleads not guilty, and such plea is entered as aforesaid, the cause shall be deemed to be at issue, and shall proceed without further formal ceremony and be tried by a jury. In Garland v. State of Washington, 232 U. S. 642, 34 Sup. Ct. 456, 58 L. Ed. 772, the court adopted the view which had been expressed by Justice Peckham in his dissenting opinion written in Crain v. United States, 162 U. S. 625, 16 Sup. Ct. 952, 40 L. Ed. 1097, wherein Justice Peckham said that a waiver should 'be conclusively implied, where the parties had proceeded as if defendant had been duly arraigned, and a formal plea of not guilty had been interposed, and where there was no objection made on account of its absence until . . . the record was brought to the appellate court for review.' It would be inconsistent with the due administration of justice to permit a defendant, under such circumstances, to lie by, say nothing as to such an objection, and then for the first time urge it in this court.' The court expressly overruled the Crain case in so far as it was not in accord with the views expressed in the Garland case. See also State v. Klasner, 19 N. M. 474, 145 Pac. 670, Ann. Cas. 1917D, 824, where it was held, upon the authority of the Garland case, that appellant could not raise in the appellate court the question that she was not arraigned, where she had proceeded with the trial as if she had been duly arraigned, and failed to object or in any manner call to the attention of the trial court the fact she had not been arraigned."

1918 Supp., p. 122, sec. 3.

Constitutionality.—The freedom of speech and press guaranteed by the Federal Constitution was not violated by the provisions of the Espionage Act under which convictions may be had for publishing in the German language, during the war with Germany, articles derisively contemptuous of the war activities of the United States, and intended to convey the idea that the war was not demanded by the people, was the result of the machinations of the executive power, and which in effect justified the German aggressions. Schaefer v. U. S., (1920) 251 U. S. 466, 40 S. Ct. 259, 64 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming in part and reversing in part (E. D. Pa. 1918) 254 Fed. 135.

In Hickson v. U. S., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1919) 258 Fed. 867, 169 C. C. A. 587, commenting on the decisions of the Supreme Court on this subject, the court said:

"This question was decided by the Supreme Court of the United States in the case of Schenck v. United States, 249 U. S. 47, 39 Sup. Ct. 247, 63 L. Ed. —. In that case the court held that the law was constitutional. Justice Holmes in speaking for the court, among other things, said:

"But it is said, suppose that that was the tendency of this circular, it is protected by the First Amendment to the Constitution. Two of the strongest expressions are said to be quoted respectively from well-known public men. It well may be that the prohibition of laws abridging the freedom of speech is not confined to previous restraints, although to prevent them may have been the main purpose, as intimated in Patterson v. Colorado, 205 U. S. 454, 462, 27 Sup. Ct. 556, 51 L. Ed. 879, 10 Ann. Cas. 689. We admit that in many places and in ordinary times the defendants in saying all that was said in the circular would have been within their constitutional rights. But the character of every act depends upon the circumstances in which it is done. Aikens v. Wisconsin, 195 U. S. 194, 205, 206, 25 Sup. Ct. 3, 49 L. Ed. 154. The most stringent protection of free speech would not protect a man in falsely shouting fire in a theater and causing a panic. It does not even protect a man from an injunction against uttering words that may have all the effect of force. Gompers v. Buck Stove & Range Co., 221 U. S. 419, 439, 31 Sup. Ct. 492, 55 L. Ed. 797, 34 L. R. A. (N. S.) 874. The question in every case is whether the words are used in such circumstances as are of such a nature as to create a clear and present danger that they will bring about the substantive evils that Congress has a right to prevent. It is a question of proximity and degree. When a nation is at war many things that might be said in time of peace are such a hindrance to its effort that their utterance will not be endured so long as men fight, and that no court could regard them as protected by any constitutional right. It seems to be admitted that if an actual obstruction of the recruiting service were proved, liability for words that produced that effect might be enforced. The statute of 1917 in section 4 . . . punishes conspiracies to obstruct as well as actual obstruction. If the act (speaking or circulating a paper), its tendency and the intent with which it is done are the same, we perceive no ground for saying that success alone warrants making the act a crime. Goldman v. United States, 245 U. S. 474, 477, 38 Sup. Ct. 166, 62 L. Ed. 410. Indeed that case might be said to dispose of the present contention if the precedent covers all media concludendi. But as the right to free speech was not referred to specially, we have thought fit to add a few words."

"This point was also decided March 10, 1919, in Jacob Frohwerk v. United States, 249 U. S. 204, 39 Sup. Ct. 240, 63 L. Ed. —, (advanced sheets). Mr. Justice Holmes, in speaking for the court, said:

"With regard to that argument we think it necessary to add what has been said in Schenck v. United States, only that the First Amendment, while prohibiting legislation against free speech as such, cannot have been, and obviously was not, intended to give immunity for every possible use of language. Robertson v. Baldwin, 165 U. S. 275, 281, 17 Sup. Ct. 326, 41 L. Ed. 715. We venture to believe that neither Hamilton nor Madison, nor any other competent person then or later, ever supposed that to make criminal the counseling of a murder within the jurisdiction of Congress would be an unconstitutional interference with free speech."

The validity of the Espionage Act was sustained as against the contention (1) that the crime there defined is treasonable, and is punishable as treason or not at all, under section 3 of article 3 of the Federal Constitution; and (2) that it is violative of the First Amendment to the Federal Constitution in that it abridges freedom of speech and of the press. Equi v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1919) 261 Fed. 53, 171 C. C. A. 649.

See further on the subject of the constitutionality of this section the following cases: Heynacher v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 257 Fed. 61, 168 C. C. A. 273; Schumann v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 258 Fed. 233, 169 C. C. A. 299; U. S. v. Burleson, (App. Cas. D. C. 1919) 258 Fed. 282; Dodge v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 258 Fed. 300, 169 C. C. A. 316, 7 A. L. R. 1510.

"Whoever" as including corporation.—A corporation may be convicted of a violation of this section, since it comes within the scope of the word "whoever" as used herein. U. S. v. American Socialist Soc., (S. D. N. Y. 1919) 260 Fed. 885, wherein it was said:

"Preliminarily, it is contended that the word 'whoever' refers only to human beings and not to corporations. This point may be speedily disposed of (1) because the word has been construed by courts as including corporations (40 Cyc. 928, and cases cited); and (2) because the obvious intent of the Congress was to reach corporations as well as individuals who did the acts prohibited by the Espionage Law. It is difficult to imagine that, in enacting a statute deemed necessary and vital for the protection of the country when at war, and in realizing that dangerous violations could be accomplished by publications issued and distributed by persons operating in corporate form, the Congress intended to let such corporations escape the consequences of their acts, while it held individuals to strict responsibility for precisely similar acts.

"It is contended, further, that a corporation cannot be guilty of a specific intent where such intent involves an evil purpose to do a wrongful act; but that contention successfully made in the earlier history of the law and, indeed, until comparatively recent times, has now been fully discarded, and it is sufficient to refer to three decisions, one by the Supreme Court of the United States, and the other two by courts of high authority, which effectually dispose of the argument that a corporation cannot form and manifest the intent to violate a statute such as that now under consideration. N. Y. Central R. R. Co. v. United States, 212 U. S. 481, 29 Sup. Ct. 304, 53 L. Ed. 613; People v. Rochester Ry. & L. Co., 195 N. Y. 102, 88 N. E. 22, 21 L. R. A. (N. S.) 998, 133 Am. St. Rep. 770, 16 Ann. Cas. 837; Telegram Newspaper Co. v. Commonwealth, 172 Mass. 294, 52 N. E. 445, 44 L. R. A. 159, 70 Am. St. Rep. 280."

"Military and naval forces"—Men enrolled under draft act.—"That men, of military age, who have been registered and enrolled under the Selective Service Act, are part of the military forces of the United States, has been substantially held by the Supreme Court. Debs v. U. S., 249 U. S. 217, 39 Sup. Ct. 252, 63 L. Ed. 566." White v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1920) 263 Fed. 17.

Acts directed against persons not in the military service and designed to cause disloyalty or refusal of duty are within the Act if the persons affected are within the provisions of the Selective Draft Act and subject to call. Howenstine v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1920) 263 Fed. 1, wherein it was further held that an indictment charging that the persons to whom disloyal statements were made were persons "who were subject to and might be subject to" military service, was sufficient.

American Red Cross.—Interference with the American Red Cross by utterances intended to obstruct its operations is a violation of this section. Granzow v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 261 Fed. 172, where, though a conviction was reversed on other grounds, the court said:

"While the Red Cross is not itself within the term 'military and naval forces,' as used in the statute, yet to cripple the Red Cross as operated in this war is to interfere with such forces. One effectual way of crippling the Red Cross is to destroy confidence in its administration, and thus reduce its income through the usual source of voluntary contributions. These statements of defendant were calculated to have that effect, would certainly do so if believed by those who heard them, and it was proper for the jury to say with what intent they were made."

Making false reports or statements.—To same effect as 1919 Supplement annotation, p. 506, see Hickson v. U. S., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1919) 258 Fed. 867, 169 C. C. A. 587.

A construction cannot be given to the provision of the Espionage Act, making it criminal, when the United States is at war, willfully to make or convey false reports or false statements with intent to interfere with the success of the military or naval forces of the United States, or to promote the success of its enemies, which will exclude statements that on their face, to the common understanding, do not purport to convey anything new, but only to interpret or comment on matters pretended to be facts of public knowledge, or will excuse statements, however false, and with whatever evil purpose circulated, if accompanied with a pretense of comment upon them as matters of public concern. Pierce v. U. S., (1920) 252 U. S. 239, 40 S. Ct. 205, 64 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

In a prosecution under this section for making false reports or statements with intent to interfere with the operation or success of the military or naval forces of the United States, it is not essential that the false reports or statements must have been made to persons in the military or naval service of the United States. Mead v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1919) 257 Fed. 639, 168 C. C. A. 589, wherein the court, in holding that certain false statements made to recruits in the Canadian Expeditionary Forces, were violations of this section, said: "In view of the terms of the act of Congress and the obvious purposes of the enactment, we are unable to hold that in order to constitute a violation of its provisions it is essential that the false reports or statements must have been made to persons in the military or naval service of the United States. In the consideration of such cases it should never be forgotten that war is a matter of life or death, and that a nation in such circumstances is no more powerless to protect its life than is an individual to save his, when attacked, by the use of such force as is necessary. It was in the exercise of that power that Congress passed the act which is the basis of the present indictment. Free speech in times of war is by no means the same thing as free speech in times of peace. The false reports and statements inhibited by the statute under consideration are such as are willfully made or conveyed 'with intent to interfere with the operation or success of the military or naval forces of the United States, or to promote the success of its enemies.' . . . Congress by its act made it criminal for any one, while this country is at war, to willfully make false statements or convey false reports, 'with intent to interfere with the operation or success of the military or naval forces of the United States, or to promote the success of its enemies.' And by act approved May 7, 1917 (40 Stat. 39, c. 11), expressly authorized its allies, England and Canada, to open recruiting offices in the various cities of the United States. That any interference with such recruiting service necessarily interfered with the success of the military and naval forces of the United States and tended to promote the success of its enemies we consider too plain for argument."

Statements made in the course of private conversation, to a friend or traveling companion, and in no instance in the presence of any third party, and which are merely expressions of opinion, do not come within the provisions of this section. Sandberg v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1919) 257 Fed. 643, 168 C. C. A. 593.

Words alone may constitute a violation of this section by interfering with the operation or success of the military or naval forces of the United States. Wolf v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 259 Fed. 388, 170 C. C. A. 364, wherein the court said:

"Words which in their very nature, or which under the circumstances of their utterance, could not apparently have a tendency to cause such interference, are without the statute. The intent with which they are uttered cannot alone make them harmful. This law was intensely practical; it sought the utilitarian result of preventing actual interference or attempted interference. It did not concern itself about mere intentions, no matter how reprehensible. It comes fairly within the expression of Pollock, C. B., in Attorney-General v. Sillem, 2 H. & C. 431, 525, that 'human laws are made, not to punish sin, but to prevent crime and mischief.' Therefore it is necessary that the words should be of a character and uttered under such circumstances as would apparently result in such interdicted interference. These two elements are essential to the offense, and therefore to a proper charge of the offense. The effective way of pleading the character of the words is by setting them forth literally or substantially, as here done. If they carried to the hearers any hidden or special meaning, that should be alleged. The effective way of pleading the circumstances of utterance is by alleging such as show that the utterance was made to actual or possible members of such military forces, or under conditions where it would apparently reach or operate upon such persons."

Attempting to cause insubordination and refusal of military duty.—In a prosecution for attempting to cause insubordination, disloyalty and refusal of military duty, it is not necessary to show that the defendant succeeded in his efforts. The mere attempt constitutes a violation of this section. Wessels v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1920) 262 Fed. 389.

In Shidler v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1919) 257 Fed. 620, 168 C. C. A. 570, wherein the defendant was charged with willfully, unlawfully, and feloniously attempting to cause insubordination, disloyalty, and refusal of duty in the military forces of the United States by making certain remarks in the presence of men who had registered under the Selective Service Act (9 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 1136), it was argued that the alleged statements could be construed as the honest expression of an individual citizen, or a reckless statement of opinion. Answering this contention, the court said:

"Assuming, for the purposes of argument, that a man might express such opinions and still be loyal to his country, still, if willfully and with evil mind he uttered the language with the intention of bringing about insubordination, disloyalty, and refusal of duty in the military forces of the land, he has violated the law and is subject to punishment and should be brought to trial. His acts, his speech, and the state of his mind become matters for the consideration by a jury under proper instructions upon the law of attempt to commit crime."

"Obstructing recruiting or enlistment service"—"Obstruct."—To same effect as first and third paragraphs of annotation in 1919 Supplement, p. 504, see Heynacher v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 257 Fed. 61, 168 C. C. A. 273.

"The statute does not make it a crime to intend to obstruct, or to attempt to obstruct, but to intentionally obstruct. Where the utterance is calculated to result in obstruction, and is uttered under conditions which would naturally so result, there is a presumption that such a result followed, but that presumption is rebuttable." Granzow v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 261 Fed. 172.

Acts which tend to hinder.—To same effect as 1919 Supplement annotation, see Schumann v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 258 Fed. 233, 169 C. C. A. 299.

Conspiracy to obstruct the draft.—"The draft is comprehended within the expression 'recruiting or enlistment service' as used in section 3 of the Espionage Act. Therefore the conspiracy here charged falls within section 4 of the Espionage Act." Enfield v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 261 Fed. 141.

"Support or favor."—To same effect as 1919 Supplement annotation, see Schulze v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1919) 259 Fed. 189, 170 C. C. A. 257, affirming (S. D. Cal. 1918) 253 Fed. 377, in 1919 Supplement annotation.

"To the injury of the service of the United States."—In Shidler v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1919) 257 Fed. 620, 168 C. C. A. 570, it was held that the phrase "to the injury of the service of the United States" (since omitted by the amendment of this section by the Act of May 16, 1918, ch. 75, § 1) qualified only its immediate antecedent, that is, the third subdivision of this section which reads, "or shall willfully obstruct the recruiting or enlistment service of the United States," and did not relate back and become an essential element of all three of the offenses created by this section.

"In the military forces."—Men registered in accordance with the provisions of the Selective Service Law (9 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 1136) are in the military forces of the United States within the meaning of this section. Seebach v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 262 Fed. 885.

Conspiracy to obstruct recruiting and enlistment service.—This section makes criminal a conspiracy to obstruct the recruiting and enlistment service of the United States by inducement or persuasion. O'Connor v. U. S., (1920) 253 U. S. 142, 40 S. Ct. 444, 64 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

As to necessity of overt act for conspiracy.—Referring to sections 6 and 37 of the Criminal Code in PENAL LAWS, 7 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 423, 534, the court said: "The fact that the Espionage Act requires an overt act to complete the crime, which is made punishable up to 20 years' imprisonment, is not inconsistent with the declaration of the Penal Code that the bare conspiracy to use force, with no overt act, is also a crime, and punishable up to 6 years' imprisonment. The result is that section 6 is fully applicable to bare conspiracies to forcibly oppose the enforcement of the Selective Service Act, and that where an overt act has followed, section 4 of the Espionage Act is also applicable." Enfield v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 261 Fed. 141.

Publications after termination of hostilities designed to produce industrial dissatisfaction.—In U. S. v. Strong, (W. D. Wash. 1920) 263 Fed. 789; U. S. v. Listman, (W. D. Wash. 1920) 263 Fed. 798, and U. S. v. Ault, (W. D. Wash. 1920) 263 Fed. 800, sundry publications issued after the termination of active hostilities and designed in the main to produce industrial dissatisfaction were held not to be within the act.

Conduct sufficient to warrant conviction.—In White v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir.) 263 Fed. 17, it was held that a conviction was sustained by proof of the following statements by the accused:

"(1) That the soldiers in the camps were being mistreated, were not fed, were not getting proper medical attention, and were dying off like flies; (2) that the army trucks, under construction in that vicinity, would never get across, as they would be sunk by the submarines; and (3) that the murder of innocent women and children by the German soldiers was no worse than the United States soldiers did in the Philippines; (4) that the United States was never a neutral nation; (5) that the people lost on the Lusitania had no right to be there, because German officials had warned them to stay off; and (6) that this government had no business going into the war."

Circulation of handbills representing brutal punishments alleged to have been inflicted on "conscientious objectors" and calling a mass meeting has been held to sustain a conviction. U. S. v. Steene, (N. D. N. Y. 1920) 263 Fed. 130.

Indictment—In general.—"An indictment which follows the language of the statute, and gives a statement of facts and circumstances sufficient to identify the acts charged as an offense, is good. Armour Packing Co. v. U. S., 209 U. S. 56, 52 U. S. (L. ed.) 681, 28 S. Ct. 428; Rhuberg v. U. S., 255 Fed. 865." Kumpula v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1919) 261 Fed. 49, 171 C. C. A. 645.

As pointed out in Kumpula v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1919) 261 Fed. 49, 171 C. C. A. 645, there is a distinction between the crime of libel and the crime defined by this section; and an indictment charging the willful use of language well calculated to produce the different results condemned by the statute, informing the defendant of the nature of the accusation against him, and sufficiently definite to enable him to take advantage of a former conviction or acquittal, and to enable the court to determine whether the facts charged, if proved, constitute a crime under the law—is sufficient. Equi v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1919) 261 Fed. 53, 171 C. C. A. 649.

Necessity of averment that United States was at war.—An indictment under this section need not allege that the United States was at war when the acts charged were done, since the courts will take judicial notice of the joint resolution of Congress declaring the existence of a state of war. Stephens v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1919) 261 Fed. 590; Bouldin v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1919) 261 Fed. 674; Hamm v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1920) 261 Fed. 907.

False statements.—An indictment under this section for willfully making false statements with intent to interfere with the operation or success of the military or naval forces of the United States, should allege that the statements made by the defendant were false and willfully made. But, as to the last two offenses in this section, it is immaterial whether the statements made by the defendant were false or not. It is only necessary to allege that they caused, or were an attempt to cause, insubordination, etc., or that they obstructed the enlistment or recruiting service of the United States, and that they were willfully made with such intent. Balbas v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1919) 257 Fed. 17, 168 C. C. A. 229.

Incorporation of previous count by reference.—Where the second count of an indictment charges a violation of the Espionage Act by alleging that the defendant, in the aid of the German government, had control of and was willfully using a certain motion picture film as a means to violate this section in the manner fully described in the first count of the indictment, the first count is incorporated by reference into the second count, and if the first count is sufficient, the second is, too. Goldstein v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1919) 258 Fed. 908, 169 C. C. A. 628.

Supporting or favoring enemy country.—In a prosecution for a violation of this section by supporting or favoring the cause of a country with which the United States is at war, the intent need not be alleged in the indictment, since the offense is one whose very definition necessarily includes intent. Schulze v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1919) 259 Fed. 189, 170 C. C. A. 257, affirming (S. D. Cal. 1918) 253 Fed. 377.

Circumstances under which statements were made.—A defendant who has been convicted of making certain seditious statements with the intent to violate this section, may raise the objection in an appellate court for the first time that the indictment is fatally defective for want of averments setting forth the circumstances under which the seditious utterances were made and the persons to whom they were made. Shilter v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1919) 257 Fed. 724, 169 C. C. A. 12. Regarding the nature of such objections, the court said: "Dunbar v. United States, 156 U. S. 185, 15 Sup. Ct. 325, 39 L. Ed. 390, is authority for the proposition that a defendant who waits until after verdict before taking an objection to the sufficiency of the indictment waives all objections which run to the mere form in which the various elements of the crime are stated, or to the fact that the indictment is inartificially drawn. We take that decision as expressing in full the nature of the objections to an indictment which may be waived by nonaction in a trial court, objections to the form in which the elements of the crime are stated, and objections to the fact that the indictment is inartificially drawn; and it follows that objections which affect the substantial rights of the defendant are not thus waived, and they may be presented for the first time on writ of error. 'Defects in substance are not cured by verdict' (22 Cyc. 485), nor is a failure to state facts sufficient to constitute an offense cured by verdict (22 Cyc. 487). The most that can be claimed in the way of waiver is that it is too late to urge an objection in an appellate court, 'unless it is apparent that it affected the substantial rights of the accused.' . . . There is nothing in the indictment here to connect the acts of the accused directly or indirectly or in any way with the military or naval forces of the United States, and therefore there is nothing to advise a court that an offense has been committed against the United States. All that the indictment charges is that the defendant in a named city and at some time between January and May made certain seditious statements, with the intent denounced by the Espionage Act (Act June 15, 1917, c. 30, 40 Stat. 217), and thereby unlawfully, willfully, and knowingly attempted to cause insubordination, disloyalty, and refusal of duty in the military and naval forces of the United States. Such an indictment is insufficient, we think, to sustain a judgment of conviction." To same effect, see Guggolz v. U. S., (1920) 262 Fed. 764, which was decided on the authority of the above case.

Attempting to cause insubordination, etc.—An indictment for willfully attempting to cause insubordination, disloyalty and refusal of duty in the military forces, which sets forth statements alleged to have been made by the defendant which clearly have that tendency, and which states that they were made in willful attempt to cause that result, charges an offense against this section. See Bach v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 262 Fed. 885.

In Goldstein v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1919) 258 Fed. 908, 169 C. C. A. 628, the indictment charged the defendant with exhibiting to the general public a certain motion picture play designed to arouse hatred against the people of Great Britain, with the intent to cause insubordination and refusal of duty in the military and naval forces of the United States during war with Germany. In holding that the truth or falsity of the representation was immaterial, and that it need not actually be seen by soldiers and sailors already enlisted, the court said:

"The question of the truth or falseness of the thing done by the person who, when the state of war exists, attempts to cause disloyalty or any of the other conditions enumerated, is not the essence of the inquiry. Enacted as the statute was while the country was at war, the evident, underlying purpose of its language was to prevent any willful attempt to engender feelings of lack of fidelity to the United States among the military or naval forces or any attempt made with evil mind to cause any disobedience to lawful authority in the military or naval forces: and the statute should always be read in the light of the purpose of its enactment.

"It is clear that an attempt to create disloyalty may be by showing a picture to the public, as well as by uttering speech or publishing a writing. The picture might be a truthful representation of an historical fact, and yet the nature of it, the circumstances surrounding the exhibition thereof, the time, the occasions when the public exhibitions are had, may well tend to show whether the picture would naturally, in the light of great events, be calculated to foment disloyalty or insubordination among the naval or military forces. In time of peace, a picture purporting to show incidents of a war fought more than a hundred years before, and exhibiting soldiers of a foreign country bayoneting helpless American women and children, might arouse but ordinary interest. But, if it has come about that a war is being fought by the United States and in the war the cause of the United States is allied with that of the foreign country whose soldiers are pictured as murdering American women and children, and if at the time the United States is enforcing draft laws and raising a large army and navy to fight the common enemy of the two allied countries, it seems but reasonable to say that the exhibition of such a picture is calculated to arouse antagonisms and to raise hatred in the minds of some who see it against the ally of the United States, and as a probable effect put obstruction in the way of the necessary co-operation between the allied countries against the enemy, and to undermine an undivided sentiment for the United States and to encourage disloyalty and refusal of duty or insubordination among the military and naval forces. Schenck v. United States, 249 U. S. 47, 39 Sup. Ct. 247, 63 L. ed. —.

"Nor, in an attempt of the character indicated, is it necessary that the picture exhibited should actually be seen by soldiers and sailors already enlisted. Millions of men within the provisions of the conscription act and subject to call were in the military and naval forces throughout the country and were part of the public. The exhibition to the public at a public place, if given with the evil intent described, is sufficient. In Coldwell v. United States, 258 Fed. 805, — C. C. A. —, the Court of Appeals for the First Circuit considered an objection to an indictment wherein it did not appear that the persons whom the defendant was alleged to have addressed were in the military or naval forces of the United States. The court said: 'The act makes it an offense to willfully "attempt to cause insubordination, disloyalty, mutiny or refusal of duty in the military or naval forces of the United States," or to "willfully obstruct the recruiting or enlistment service of the United States," and its language is broad enough to include statements calculated to produce these results, when made in the presence of persons who are not in the military or naval force of the United States, provided they are willfully made and with the intent set out in the act.'"

See as following the foregoing decision, Stephens v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1919) 261 Fed. 590.

An allegation in the indictment that the defendant caused insubordination, etc., and one that he attempted to cause it, charge simply different modes of committing the same offense, and both may be alleged in one count. Balbas v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1919) 257 Fed. 17, 168 C. C. A. 229.

An allegation in an indictment under this section that defendant knowingly, willfully, unlawfully, and feloniously did attempt to cause and create insubordination and disloyalty in the military and naval forces, by doing the things charged, sufficiently charges that the attempt was done with willful and unlawful purpose. Henkin v. Fousek, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1920) 262 Fed. 957.

Insufficient description of offense.—An indictment charging that at a certain place on or about a specified date the defendant made certain specified statements with intent to interfere with the operation and success of the military and naval forces of the United States and to cause insubordination therein, and with intent to obstruct the recruiting and enlistment service of the United States, is defective as failing clearly to advise the defendant of the charge against him so as to give him reasonable opportunity to prepare his defense. Foutana v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 262 Fed. 283. In discussing the sufficiency of the indictment, the court said: "The averment in the indictment that the defendant made these statements on or about December 19, 1917, was a mere formal jurisdictional allegation, which permitted the introduction of evidence of any of them at any time before the indictment was filed within the statute of limitations, and there was nothing but that formal statement and the allegation that the statements were made at New Salem to indicate at what time, under what circumstances, on what occasions, to whom, in whose presence, or by what persons the government would attempt to prove that the defendant had made any of these statements, nothing to indicate to him whether he was to be tried for making all of them at one time, on one occasion, or for making some of them at one time to one person, and others at other times and on other occasions to other persons. . . . It is essential to the sufficiency of an indictment that it set forth the facts which the pleader claims constitute the alleged transgression, so distinctly as to advise the accused of the charge which he has to meet, and to give him a fair opportunity to prepare his defense, so particularly as to enable him to avail himself of a conviction or acquittal in defense of another prosecution for the same offense, and so clearly that the court may be able to determine whether or not the facts there stated are sufficient to support a conviction. United States v. Britton, 107 U. S. 665, 669, 670, 2 Sup. Ct. 512, 27 L. Ed. 520; United States v. Hess, 124 U. S. 483, 488, 8 Sup. Ct. 571, 31 L. Ed. 516; Miller v. United States, 133 Fed. 337, 341, 66 C. C. A. 399, 403; Armour Pkg. Co. v. United States, 153 Fed. 1, 16, 17, 82 C. C. A. 135, 150, 151, 14 L. R. A. (N. S.) 40; Etheredge v. United States, 186 Fed. 434, 108 C. C. A. 356; Winters v. United States, 201 Fed. 845, 848, 120 C. C. A. 175, 178; Horn v. United States, 182 Fed. 721, 722, 105 C. C. A. 163, 167. If the pleader had set forth in this indictment any fact or facts, such as the time, place, occasion, circumstances, persons present, or any other distinctive earmark whereby the defendant could have found out or identified the occasion or occasions when the government intended to attempt to prove that the defendant uttered any of the nine sayings charged, he might have been able to investigate the basis of the charges, to learn who were or were not present on the occasions referred to, hence who were possible witnesses, and to prepare his defense; but there is nothing of that kind in the indictment. As it reads, he might have been called to meet on each of the nine charges testimony that at any time of day or night, at any place in New Salem, on any occasion, public or private, before the indictment was filed, and after the Espionage Act was passed on June 15, 1917, he had uttered to any one whomsoever any of the statements charged in the indictment. These considerations compel the conclusion that this pleading signally failed to state the facts which the government claimed constituted the alleged offense in this case, so distinctly as to give the defendant a fair opportunity to prepare his defense to meet any of them, and that he could not and did not have that notice of them required to give him a fair trial.

"Nor were the charges in this indictment so certain and specific that upon conviction or acquittal thereon it or the judgment upon it constitutes a complete offense to a second prosecution of the defendant for the same offense. In determining this question the evidence on the trial may not be, and the indictment and the judgment alone can be considered, because the evidence does not become a part of the judgment, and as the indictment states no facts from which the time, places, or occasions on which the respective statements therein were alleged to have been made can be identified, the indictment and judgment failed to identify the charges so that another prosecution therefor would be barred thereby. Florence v. United States, 186 Fed. 961, 962, 964, 108 C. C. A. 577, 578, 580, and cases there cited; Winters v. United States, 201 Fed. 845, 848, 120 C. C. A. 175, 178."

Obstructing enlistment service.—In Wolf v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 259 Fed. 388, 170 C. C. A. 364, it was held that counts in an indictment sufficiently charged an obstruction of the enlistment service where they alleged in substance that the defendant made a statement that the war with Germany was an unjust war, and that such statement was made with unlawful intent and under circumstances where it would apparently accomplish the forbidden results. The court said:

"We are not concerned with the truth or falsity of such statement (U. S. v. Equi, Charge to Jury, Bul. 172), but only with the effect it would apparently have upon the obstruction of recruiting and enlistment. Enlistment is a voluntary act, and anything which would tend to prevent a state of mind favorable thereto would be deterrent, and therefore an obstruction to such action. Certainly the belief that a war was unrighteous would ordinarily be a decided barrier to a resolution voluntarily to risk life in its prosecution. This has been recognized in the Doe Case and many other cases. Therefore, as to those two counts, the language, as alleged, is sufficient to constitute the offense, if uttered with the unlawful intent and under circumstances where it would apparently accomplish the forbidden results. The intent is properly alleged. The circumstances, as alleged, are that the statements were 'publicly' made to certain named person or persons and 'to other persons to the grand jurors unknown.' 'Publicly' means in public, well known, open, notorious, common, or general, as opposed to private, secluded or secret. The clear inference from the allegation would seem to be that the statement was uttered in the presence of a number of persons. There is no allegation that any of the immediate listeners were within the enlistment ages. The doctrine of the O'Hare and Doe Cases [253 Fed. 538, 903] is that a statement to which wide publicity was given by the defendant would apparently reach men who might become recruits, and that it is unnecessary to prove, and therefore to allege, that such were actually present or actually were reached by the statements. Naturally the extent of publicity would be an important consideration and, within certain limits, decisive. The extent and character of the publicity must be such that the apparent result of the utterance would be obstruction of the recruiting and enlistment service. But these may be generally stated, subject to a bill of particulars in proper instances. No such bill was filed here, and the general allegations that the statements were publicly made to certain persons and to others unknown is sufficient."

To same effect, see Hamm v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1920) 261 Fed. 907, wherein the court, in distinguishing the case of Shilter v. U. S., in this annotation, said:

"Reliance is placed upon the decision of this court in Shilter v. United States, 257 Fed. 724, 169 C. C. A. 12; but that case is clearly distinguishable from this. In that case there was no allegation in the indictment that the statements made by the accused were made to or in the presence or hearing of any person or persons, or that the spoken words were ever conveyed to the human ear. In the present case the indictment charged that the books were sold to various and divers persons, one of whom was named."

Effect of error in indorsement.—Where an indictment sufficiently charges a violation of this section, the fact that the indorsement thereon erroneously states that the defendant is charged with violating section 3 of the Selective Service Act (9 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 1157), does not render the indictment defective. Wessels v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1920) 262 Fed. 389. Regarding the effect of such an error the court said:

"In returning the indictment there was indorsed on it:

"Charge: Obstructing the recruiting and enlistment service of the U. S.; violation section 3 of Act of May 18, 1917."

"This was undoubtedly a clerical error, as the offense that is set out is cognizable under section 3 of the Act of June 15, 1917, known as the Espionage Act [1918 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. 122], and not under the Selective Draft Act. It is well settled that the indorsement on an indictment is no part of the indictment. It is also well settled that if the prosecution be mistaken as to the particular law violated, nevertheless, if the indictment charges a crime under any law of the United States, it is sufficient to support the verdict."

Sufficiency.—In Reeder v. U. S., (C. C. A.

8th Cir. 1919) 262 Fed. 36, an indictment for a violation of this section was held to be sufficient.

Evidence—Other words or acts.—Evidence that the accused made statements to other persons similar to those set forth in an indictment under this section, is admissible to show intent. Seebach v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 262 Fed. 885.

In a prosecution for supporting or favoring the cause of a country with which the United States is at war, evidence may be received of acts or words of the defendant other than those alleged in the indictment for the purpose of showing his attitude of mind and his intent or purpose. Schulz v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1919) 259 Fed. 189, 170 C. C. A. 257, affirming (S. D. Cal. 1918) 253 Fed. 377.

In a prosecution for interfering with the operation and success of the military and naval forces of the United States, letters of the defendant to various persons, in which he stated that he was opposed to the Selective Service Act (9 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 1136) are admissible in evidence as showing the defendant's state of mind and the intention with which he posted a certain printed circular, on which act the indictment was based. Herman v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1919) 257 Fed. 601, 168 C. C. A. 551. To same effect, see Parton v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1919) 261 Fed. 515.

Statement made prior to act.—Prior statements and declarations of the accused made at a time when such statements and declarations were not prohibited by law are admissible against him for the purpose of enabling the jury to determine his purpose or intent in making the statements imputed to him in the indictment and proved. Equi v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1919) 261 Fed. 53, 171 C. C. A. 649.

Statements regarding loyalty.—Evidence of loyal declarations by a person charged with simulating disability to escape military service are not admissible on his behalf. Howenstine v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1920) 263 Fed. 1.

In a prosecution for a violation of this section it is error for the trial court to exclude evidence proving the truthfulness of an important statement made by the defendant, bearing directly on his loyalty. Caughman v. U. S., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1919) 258 Fed. 434, 169 C. C. A. 450.

Evidence of declarations not charged in the indictment tending to show disloyal intent is admissible. White v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1920) 263 Fed. 17. See to the same effect Albers v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1920) 263 Fed. 27, wherein the court said:

"In admitting the testimony the court distinctly ruled that it was admitted as tending to show the bent of the defendant's mind and his attitude as between the United States and Germany, with a view to enabling the jury to determine the defendant's real intention in saying and doing the things with which he was charged, and for that purpose only, and in its charge to the jury the court also specifically and clearly so limited it. There can be no doubt that the testimony had a tendency to establish the vital question of intent in the case. The question is: Was it too remote?

"In the recent case, decided by this court, of Equi v. United States, 261 Fed. 53, 171 C. C. A. 649, a like question was presented and was strenuously argued. There, the record showed, testimony was admitted of what the defendant to the indictment had said and done June 3, 1916, as bearing upon the intent with which he was alleged to have committed, on June 27, 1918, the offense there involved, in violation of the same Espionage Act—a period of more than two years between the two dates. This court there distinctly adjudged the testimony not too remote, the purpose being properly limited, and the Supreme Court on petition for a writ of certiorari has just denied the petition. It is manifest that a like ruling must be made in the present case, unless the Equi case is to be overruled, which we are not prepared to do."

Disloyal utterances prior to language charged in the indictment were properly admitted in evidence as bearing upon the intent of defendant, where the theory of the defense was that the defendant was so intoxicated that he was incapable of entertaining the necessary criminal intent. Stenzel v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 261 Fed. 161.

In a prosecution for violation of this section it was assigned as error that a witness, on objection, was not permitted to answer the question, "Did you ever hear him [defendant] make any remarks against this government before that time?" But "if there was any error in this ruling, it was harmless to defendant, since the most favorable answer to him would have produced purely negative evidence of a general character." Stenzel v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 261 Fed. 161.

Threats against President.—In a prosecution under this section for attempting to cause insubordination, disloyalty and refusal of military duty, evidence that the defendant, about the time of the commission of the acts alleged in the indictment, made threats against the President, is admissible on the question of his intent. Wessels v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1920) 262 Fed. 389.

Records of draft boards showing the physical condition of a person called for military service are admissible on his trial for simulating disability to escape military service. Howenstine v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1920) 263 Fed. 1.

Irrelevant matters.—Evidence regarding whether a certain person was present at the preliminary examination of the defendant before a commissioner is irrelevant matter and inadmissible in a prosecution under this section. Caughman v. U. S., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1919) 258 Fed. 434, 169 C. C. A. 450.

Interfering with Red Cross.—In a prosecution for interfering with the operation of the military and naval forces by interfering with the Red Cross, it was error to admit in evidence a report of the American Red Cross Society to the public of its war work as of March 1, 1918, the witness producing the report not claiming to know anything concerning the truth of the matters shown by the report, and no one connected with its preparation or the statements it contained being offered, and both sides regarding the report as important evidence. Granzow v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 261 Fed. 172, the court saying: "The Red Cross is a national corporation, and its services, volunteered, have been used during the war virtually as an auxiliary to the armed forces. The statute of incorporation (Act Jan. 5, 1905, c. 23, sec. 6, 33 Stat. L. 602 [2 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 64]) requires annual reports by such society to the Secretary of War, who audits the same, transmitting a copy to Congress. This report is required to contain an itemized report of receipts and expenditures. The report offered was not of this character, and came from no official source."

False reports or statements.—A conviction of making or conveying false reports or false statements with intent to interfere with the operation or success of the military or naval forces of the United States, or to promote the success of its enemies, contrary to the Espionage Act, is sustained by evidence which warranted the jury in finding that the statements in a pamphlet distributed by defendants during the war with Germany were false in fact, and known to be so by the defendants, or else were distributed recklessly without effort to ascertain the truth, and were circulated wilfully in order to interfere with the success of the forces of the United States. Pierce v. U. S., (1920) 252 U. S. 239, 40 S. Ct. 205, 64 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Causing insubordination and obstructing recruiting.—In Rietz v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 257 Fed. 731, 169 C. C. A. 19, it was held that the evidence was sufficient to sustain a conviction for a violation of this section by the use of certain language for the purpose of causing insubordination and mutiny in the military forces, and with the intent of willfully obstructing the recruiting and enlistment service.

Obstructing recruiting or enlistment service.—In a prosecution under this section for obstructing the recruiting or enlistment service, a letter written by the accused to the president of the German-American Alliance of his state and an inclosed newspaper clipping, which contained statements regarding German cruelty made by a German soldier who had escaped to this country, on which clipping the accused wrote a criticism of the soldier, are admissible in evidence. Heynacher v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 257 Fed. 61, 168 C. C. A. 273.

In Wolf v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 259 Fed. 388, 170 C. C. A. 364, it was held that the evidence was insufficient to establish an intention on the part of the defendant to obstruct the enlistment service. The court said:

"The sufficiency of the evidence is, in our judgment, properly challenged. There is no substantial testimony in either instance of the slightest intention to obstruct the service. The intention necessary to be shown is willfulness—deliberate purpose. Defendant is a merchant in a town in South Dakota. The statement covered by count 2 occurred during a discussion of the war between defendant on one side and three acquaintances on the other. The other three approved the war; one of them had three sons then enlisted. It is very evident that the sole result which occurred, or really was to be expected, was that each of the four remained firm in his own conviction. The statute, as originally enacted, was not framed to prevent free discussion or expression of opinion, so long as such was not deliberately employed for the purpose of interfering with the creation and operation of the armed forces of the nation. The statement covered by count 6 was made in the defendant's home, in the presence of his wife, to a chore woman. It was an ill-natured, intemperate outburst, brought on by seeing Red Cross pictures in a magazine. The woman properly resented his language, and stated that she had a son who had enlisted, and that she was proud of it. The evidence in the entire case clearly shows an instance of a headstrong, willful man, who felt strongly about the war, and who insisted, in and out of season and in intemperate and sometimes scurrilous language, on voicing his views."

Sufficiency.—In the following cases the evidence was held to be insufficient to sustain the conviction of the defendants for a violation of this section: Elmer v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 260 Fed. 646, 171 C. C. A. 410; Harshfield v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 260 Fed. 659, 171 C. C. A. 423; Fontana v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 262 Fed. 283; Kammann v. U. S., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1919) 259 Fed. 192, 170 C. C. A. 260.

In U. S. v. American Socialist Soc., (S. D. N. Y. 1919) 260 Fed. 885, it was held that the evidence was sufficient to sustain the conviction under this section of the publisher and distributor of certain pamphlets, and that the fact that the author was acquitted on the same counts of the indictment on which they were convicted was not sufficient ground for setting aside the verdict.

Questions for jury—Meaning of statements contained in pamphlet.—Whether statements contained in a pamphlet, the distribution of which is charged to amount to a violation of the Espionage Act, had a natural tendency to produce the forbidden consequences as alleged, is a question to be determined by the jury and not by the court. Pierce v. U. S., (1920) 252 U. S. 239, 40 S. Ct. 205, 64 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

What interpretation ought to be placed upon a pamphlet, the distribution of which by the defendants is alleged to have violated the Espionage Act, and what would be the probable effect of distributing it in the mode adopted, and what were defendants' motives in doing this, were questions for the jury, not the court, to decide. Pierce v. U. S., (1920) 252 U. S. 239, 40 S. Ct. 205, 64 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Whether printed words of a pamphlet, the distribution of which was alleged to have violated the Espionage Act, would in fact produce as a proximate result a material interference with the recruiting or enlistment service, or the operation or success of the United States forces, was a question for the jury to decide in view of all the circumstances of the time, and considering the place and manner of distribution. Pierce v. U. S., (1920) 252 U. S. 239, 40 S. Ct. 205, 64 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Knowledge and intent.—In a prosecution under this section for an attempt to cause insubordination, disloyalty, mutiny and refusal of duty in the military forces of the United States by the publication of an article in a newspaper of which the defendant was editor and manager, the questions of the defendant's knowledge of the article and his intent in publishing it are for the jury. Bouldin v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1919) 261 Fed. 674.

Instructions to jury.—No valid objection can be urged against that part of a charge to the jury, in a prosecution for publishing and conspiring to publish false news despatches with intent to interfere with the military and naval success of the United States and promote the success of its enemies, to cause insubordination in the military or naval forces, and to obstruct the recruiting or enlistment service, in which the minds of the jurors were directed to the gist of the case, which was despatches received and then changed to express falsehood, to the detriment of the success of the United States, and they were told that, in passing upon the questions of the falsity of these publications and of whether the United States was at war, and any other questions which were, in like manner, a matter of public knowledge and of general information, they might call upon the fund of general information which was in their keeping. Schaefer v. U. S., (1920) 251 U. S. 466; 40 S. Ct. 259, 64 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming in part and reversing in part (E. D. Pa. 1918) 254 Fed. 135.

In a prosecution for a violation of this section by making a speech to a public meeting with intent to willfully obstruct the recruiting and enlistment service of the United States, the court may properly instruct the jury that the constitutional guaranty of the right of freedom of speech cannot be successfully resorted to as a protection in time of war, where the statements that are made are not honest criticisms, based upon truth, but are false and uttered with the willful intent to injure the interests of the United States and disobey its statutes. Dodge v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 258 Fed. 300, 169 C. C. A. 316, 7 A. L. R. 1510.

An instruction in a prosecution under this section that the defendant is presumed to be innocent until proven guilty beyond a reasonable doubt and "from that time the burden is on him to establish his innocence," is erroneous. Caughman v. U. S., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1919) 258 Fed. 434, 169 C. C. A. 450. Regarding the correctness of this instruction, the court said:

"We cannot doubt, that the concluding clause of this instruction, the last word from the court to the jury, was seriously misleading and prejudicial. It is clearly at variance, in our opinion, with the rule laid down in the familiar cases of Coffin v. United States, 156 U. S. 432, 458, 15 Sup. Ct. 394, 39 L. Ed. 481 and Cochran v. United States, 157 U. S. 286, 299, 15 Sup. Ct. 628, 39 L. Ed. 704, and frequently since repeated. For example, in Davis v. United States, 160 U. S. 469, 487, 16 Sup. Ct. 353, 358 (40 L. Ed. 499), the Supreme Court says:

"Strictly speaking, the burden of proof, as those words are understood in criminal law, is never upon the accused to establish his innocence, or to disprove the facts necessary to establish the crime for which he is indicted. It is on the prosecution from the beginning to the end of the trial, and applies to every element necessary to constitute the crime."

"The point needs no discussion. In the light of the cited cases it seems plain that the instruction under review gave to the jury an erroneous impression as to the continuing presumption of innocence, which, as said in Coffin v. United States, supra, 'is an instrument of proof created by the law in favor of one accused.'"

Where the indictment was based upon language of defendant constituting obstruction of the enlistment service and actual and attempted causation of insubordination, disloyalty, and refusal of duty in the military forces, and the defense was intoxication, depriving defendant of the necessary criminal intent, it was reversible error to instruct the jury that it could not be rightly considered as a defense but might be a circumstance in mitigation which was for the court to find. Stenzel v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 261 Fed. 161, where the court said: "While there was conflict in the evidence as to the fact or degree of intoxication at the time of the alleged statements by Stenzel, yet there was distinct and positive evidence that Stenzel was so drunk at that time that he did not know what he was saying. In this state of the evidence he was entitled to have the jury pass upon the question of whether or not he was at the time so drunk that he was incapable of entertaining the specific criminal intent required by the Espionage Act."

In Kumpula v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1919) 261 Fed. 49, 171 C. C. A. 645, a judgment of conviction for violation of this section was reversed because the court gave a positive instruction that the I. W. W., with which defendant had been in some way connected, is a disloyal and unpatriotic organization and that adherents thereof owe no allegiance to any organized government, while the evidence, though of sufficient strength to go to the jury, did not warrant such conclusive determination by the court. The court said:

"True, the court told the jury that even if defendant did belong to the I. W. W. that of itself would not condemn him under the charge. But we are not satisfied that this qualification could relieve defendant of the feeling, and especially in time of war, that naturally must have arisen in the minds of the jury by the declaration of the court."

Sentence.—A defendant who has been convicted of a violation of this section may not be sentenced to imprisonment in a state penitentiary for a shorter period than one year. Hickson v. U. S., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1919) 258 Fed. 867, 169 C. C. A. 587, wherein the court said:

"It appears that the defendant was sentenced to the penitentiary for a term of six months. We think this was unauthorized. This question was passed upon in the case of In re Bonner, Petitioner, 151 U. S. 242, 14 Sup. Ct. 323, 38 L. ed. 149. The court in discussing this phase of the question, said:

"Section 5356 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, under which the defendant was indicted and convicted, prescribes as a punishment for the offenses designated fine or imprisonment—the fine not to exceed $1,000 and the imprisonment not more than one year, or by both such fine and imprisonment. Such imprisonment cannot be enforced in a state penitentiary. Its limitation, being to one year, must be enforced elsewhere. Section 5541 of the Revised Statutes provides that: "In every case where any person convicted of any offense against the United States is sentenced to imprisonment for a period longer than one year, the court by which the sentence is passed may order the same to be executed in any state jail or penitentiary within the district or state where such court is held, the use of which jail or penitentiary is allowed by the legislature of the state for that purpose." And section 5542 provides for a similar imprisonment in a state jail or penitentiary where the person has been convicted of any offense against the United States and sentenced to imprisonment and confinement at hard labor. It follows that the court had no jurisdiction to order an imprisonment, when the place is not specified in the law, to be executed in a penitentiary when the imprisonment is not ordered for a period longer than one year or at hard labor. The statute is equivalent to a direct denial of any authority on the part of the court to direct that imprisonment be executed in a penitentiary in any cases other than those specified. Whatever discretion, therefore, the court may possess, in prescribing the extent of imprisonment as a punishment for the offense committed, it cannot, in specifying the place of imprisonment, name one of these institutions. This has been expressly adjudged in Re Mills, 135 U. S. 263, 270 [10 Sup. Ct. 762, 34 L. ed. 107], which, in one part of it, presents features in all respects similar to those of the present case."

1918 Supp., p. 124, sec. 4.

Failure to agree upon precise method of violation as material.—A conspiracy to violate the Espionage Act, made criminal by this section, provided one or more of the conspirators do any act to effect the object of the conspiracy, is none the less criminal, if thus attempted to be carried into effect, merely because the conspirators failed to agree in advance upon the precise method in which the law shall be violated. Pierce v. U. S., (1920) 252 U. S. 239, 40 S. Ct. 205, 64 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Pleading.—While the averment of a conspiracy cannot be aided by allegations respecting the overt acts, and while under section 4, as under the Criminal Code, § 37 (see vol. 7, p. 534), a mere conspiracy without overt act done in pursuance of it is not punishable criminally, yet the overt act need not be, in and of itself, a criminal act, still less need it constitute the very crime that is the object of the conspiracy. Pierce v. U. S., (1920) 252 U. S. 239, 40 S. Ct. 205, 64 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

In Enfield v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 261 Fed. 141, the court said: "Each count charges conspiracy between certain dates, to procure arms and ammunition, and to offer armed resistance to the induction into the army of men qualified therefor and registered under the Selective Service Act. This is sufficient so far as particularity of statement is concerned."

Averments in an indictment that defendants, charged with committing and conspiring to commit acts forbidden by the Espionage Act, unlawfully, wilfully, or feloniously committed such forbidden acts, fairly import an unlawful motive. Pierce v. U. S., (1920) 252 U. S. 239, 40 S. Ct. 205, 64 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Judicial notice.—No prejudice could arise in a prosecution for conspiring to violate the Espionage Act, from an instruction that the jury might be supposed to know the fact that the United States was at war. Stilson v. U. S., (1919) 250 U. S. 583, 40 S. Ct. 28, 64 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (E. D. Pa. 1918) 254 Fed. 120.

The constitutional freedom of speech and press was not infringed by the provisions of the Espionage Act of June 15, 1917, as amended by the Act of May 16, 1918, under which convictions may be had for conspiring when the United States was at war with Germany, unlawfully to utter, print, write, and publish disloyal, scurrilous, and abusive language about the form of government of the United States, or language intended to bring the form of government of the United States into contempt, scorn, contumely and disrepute, or intended to incite, provoke, and encourage resistance to the United States in said war, or unlawfully and wilfully, by utterance, writing, printing, and publication, to urge, incite, and advocate curtailment of production of things and products necessary and essential to the prosecution of the war. Abrams v. U. S., (1919) 250 U. S. 616, 40 S. Ct. 17, 64 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Sufficiency of evidence.—A conviction of conspiring, contrary to the Espionage Act, as amended by the Act of May 16, 1918, to publish language intended to incite, provoke, and encourage resistance to the United States in the war with Germany and by writing, printing and publication to urge, incite, and advocate curtailment of production of things and products necessary and essential to the prosecution of the war—is sustained by evidence that defendants united to print and distribute circulars intended to excite, at the supreme crisis of the war, disaffection, sedition, riots, and, as they hoped, revolution in the United States, for the purpose of embarrassing, and, if possible, defeating, the military plans of the government in Europe, and plainly urging and advocating resort to a general strike of workers in ammunition factories for the purpose of curtailing the production of ordinance and munitions necessary and essential to the prosecution of the war. Abrams v. U. S., (1919) 250 U. S. 616, 40 S. Ct. 17, 64 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Evidence that defendants, acting in concert, with full understanding of its contents, distributed publicly a highly colored and sensational pamphlet fairly to be construed as a protest against the further prosecution by the United States of the war with Germany, is sufficient to support convictions of conspiring, contrary to the Espionage Act, to cause insubordination, disloyalty, and refusal of duty in the military or naval forces, and to obstruct the recruiting and enlistment service of the United States. Pierce v. U. S., (1920) 252 U. S. 239, 40 S. Ct. 206, 64 U. S. (L. ed.) —.

Convictions of conspiring to violate the Espionage Act are supported by the evidence if there was substantial evidence inculcating the defendants, which, if believed by the jury, would justify the submission of the issues to it. Stilson v. U. S., (1919) 250 U. S. 583, 40 S. Ct. 28, 64 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (E. D. Pa. 1918) 254 Fed. 120.

On the trial of an indictment for conspiracy to oppose by force the enforcement of the Selective Service Act it was reversible error to admit in evidence against defendants, over objection, the fact that a brother of defendant Enfield had deserted from the service, and a speech by one Hicks, an ex-convict under indictment at the time of the trial for some of his utterances in that speech, and not shown to be connected with the alleged conspiracy, the court saying: "A portion of Hicks's extended speech had been taken by a stenographer. Upon the above slender basis this portion was introduced against Enfield. It was a vicious, scurrilous, seditious outburst against the government, which would naturally inflame the righteous anger of every patriotic man upon the jury. Enfield was not shown to be in any way responsible for this speech, nor was it properly shown that he in any wise approved the highly intemperate passages introduced." Enfield v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 201 Fed. 141.

Charge to jury.—There is no well-founded objection to that part of the charge to the jury in a prosecution for conspiring, contrary to the Espionage Act, to cause insubordination in the military or naval forces of the United States, and to obstruct the recruiting or enlistment service, in which the jury were told to look at all the evidence, including the character of the publications complained of, and determine from them, assisted by all the other evidence, whether there was an attempt to cause insubordination, and a wilful obstruction of enlistment, although this language was used in connection with observations concerning judicial notice to be taken by the jury as to the country being in a state of war, where, taking the charge together, the determination as to whether the facts made a case coming within the denunciation of the statute was fairly left to the jury upon the evidence. Stilson v. U. S., (1919) 250 U. S. 583, 40 S. Ct. 28, 64 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (E. D. Pa. 1918) 254 Fed. 120.

1918 Supp., p. 132, sec. 1.

Mandamus to compel admission to mails.—Where the settled policy of a newspaper has been such as to brand it as a hostile or enemy publication, and the Postmaster General has refused it the privilege of the mail on the ground that it violates the Espionage Act, he will not be compelled by mandamus to admit it to the mails as "mailable matter of the second class." U. S. v. Burleson, (App. Cas. D. C. 1919) 258 Fed. 282.

CUSTOMS DUTIES

Vol. II, p. 724, sec. 1. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 59.]

Classification for duty determined as of what time.—Although the rate of duty applicable to imported goods at the time they come into customs may or may not be the rate lawfully assessed against them (United State v. Cronkhite Co., 9 U. S. Cust. App. 129; T. D. 37980), their classification for duty is determined by their condition at that time. Minneapolis Cold Storage Co. v. U. S., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 225.

"Not specially provided for."—The general rule that the presence of the "Not specially provided for" clause in one of two competing provisions and its absence from the other may affect the classification of the merchandise under the provision which lacks it applies only where the goods are equally included within each of the competing provisions. Drankenfeld & Co. v. U. S., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 124.

Classification by use.—A designation according to a specific use prevails over a competing description of a general character, without special limitation as to use or other qualification. Drankenfeld & Co. v. U. S., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 124.

Authority of Treasury Department to limit statute.—The Treasury Department has no authority to engraft upon a statute a term or limitation not placed there by Congress. Saji, etc., Co. v. U. S., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 78.

Ex nomine designation as governing classification for duty.—An ex nomine designation of an article, nothing appearing to indicate a contrary legislative intent, should govern its classification for duty. Burr v. U. S., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 71.

Giving benefit of doubt to importer.—When there is doubt as to the construction of a provision of law levying duty upon imported merchandise, it is the duty of the court to resolve that doubt in favor of the importer. Aetna Explosives Co. v. U. S., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 298; U. S. v. Golden Co., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 229.

Vol. II, p. 726, par. 5. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 59.]

"Chemical mixtures" as including nitric acid mixed with sufficient sulphuric acid to prevent corroding of tanks.—The provision of this paragraph for "chemical . . . mixtures" imports mixtures susceptible of commercial use as they exist, or at least such as are purposely started on their way toward adaptation to such use. Aetna Explosives Co. v. U. S., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 298, wherein it appeared that nitric acid was imported in tank cars with a sufficient addition of sulphuric acid to prevent it from corroding the tanks, in accordance with the regulations of the Interstate Commerce Commission. It was shown that it was commercially impracticable at that time to ship nitric acid in any other way; that the mixture had no commercial use; that no commercial advantage was gained by the importation of either acid in this manner; that there was no chemical union of the two acids; and that, before being used by the importer in manufacturing explosives, it was necessary to add more sulphuric acid. It was held that this was not a "chemical . . . mixture" within the meaning of that term in this paragraph. What was imported was nitric acid, admissible free of duty under paragraph 387 (see vol. II, p. 848). The sulphuric acid (also admissible free of duty under paragraph 387) should be treated as a part of the packing of the goods for shipment.

Homatropine hydrobromide is not composed of a single element, nor is it natural or uncombined. It is a product of chemical reactions, and is composed of various chemical elements. This constitutes the article a chemical compound as distinguished from a chemical mixture, and brings it within the classification "chemical . . . compounds" in this paragraph. U. S. v. Mallenckrodt Chemical Works, (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 252.

Vol. II, p. 728, par. 15. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 60.]

"Suitable for medicinal or toilet purposes."—A thing to be suitable, as that term is commonly understood, must be fit and appropriate for the end to which it is to be devoted. In the tariff law the term "suitable" means actually, practically, and commercially fit. The provision of this paragraph, "chalk, precipitated, suitable for medicinal or toilet purposes," will be so construed. U. S. v. Amerman, (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 244, wherein it appeared that chalk which had been precipitated from municipal water in order to make the water fit for use was imported. While it was shown to meet the requirements of the United States Pharmacopeia for use as a medicine and to be capable of use in tooth powder, it was also shown that it was bolted in this country to separate it from impurities before being so used and to be quite largely devoted to uses other than medicinal and toilet. It was held that it should not be regarded as "suitable for medicinal or toilet purposes" under this paragraph; and the decision of the Board of United States General Appraisers classifying it as "chalk, ground or bolted," under paragraph 60 (see vol. II, p. 739) was affirmed.

Vol. II, p. 730, par. 17. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 60.]

Weight as sole test.—The language of this paragraph, "put up in individual packages of two and one-half pounds or less gross weight," is unambiguous, unmistakable, and unqualified; it should therefore be free from extraneous construction. The sole and single test is that of weight; no reference is made, either directly or indirectly, to any other consideration, such as price, quality, origin, method of manufacture, character of container, suitability for use or sale, or any other matter. Nor does any distinction between wholesale and retail packages appear, the only line of demarkation being weight. U. S. v. Mallinckrodt Chemical Works, (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 252, wherein it was held that ten ounces of homatropine hydrobromide contained in a single glass bottle, which was packed in a small wooden box, the entire parcel weighing less than 2½ pounds, was dutiable under this paragraph "chemical . . . compounds . . . put up in individual packages of two and one-half pounds or less gross weight"—notwithstanding that this is so large a quantity as to suffice a wholesale house for several months' stock.

Vol. II, p. 734, par. 34. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 62.]

Gelatin.—A physical (not chemical) solution of gelatin with acetic acid, water, and coloring matter, the gelatin being the component material of chief value and still possessing its natural inherent qualities, known as "Red Top roller varnish" or "roller varnish," used to dress the surfaces of leather rollers in woolen mills to keep the wool from sticking to them, is not a varnish under paragraph 58 (see vol. II, p. 738) or a nonenumerated manufacture under paragraph 385 (see vol. II, p. 839) but a manufacture of gelatin under this paragraph. U. S. v. Vandegrift, (1918) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 30.

Vol. II, p. 734, par. 36. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 62.]

Chicle, the sap having been drawn from the tree and coagulated by artificial heat into hard chunks in Mexico, shipped to Canada, and there ground and dried, the grinding and drying bearing no relation to transportation and being a process in the manufacture of chewing gum, known commercially as desiccated chicle, is dutiable under this paragraph as chicle "advanced in value by drying, straining, or any other process or treatment whatever beyond that essential to the proper packing," and not as "chicle, crude." American Chicle Co. v. U. S., (1918) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 1.

Vol. II, p. 736, par. 46. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 63.]

Distilled oil.—The presumption of correctness attaching to the collector's classification of certain merchandise as distilled oil under this paragraph, aided by the testimony of a competent witness, is not overcome by the testimony to the contrary of a witness who admitted that his testimony was based on what people told him. U. S. v. Vandegrift, (1918) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 25.

Vol. II, p. 738, par. 49. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 63.]

Synthetic coumarin.—Synthetic coumarin, a coal-tar product which closely resembles a natural product obtained from the tonka bean, shown to be substantially used in the manufacture of perfumery, though chiefly used in the manufacture of flavoring extracts, concededly odoriferous or aromatic, is dutiable under the provision of this paragraph for "all natural or synthetic odoriferous or aromatic substances, preparations, and mixtures used in the manufacture of, but not marketable as, perfumes or cosmetics." The decision of the Board of United States General Appraisers classifying it under the provision for "all similar products," section 500, (see 1918 Supp., p. 140) is reversed. The provision of section 502, revenue act of September 8, 1916, (see 1918 Supp., p. 142) that laws inconsistent therewith are thereby repealed, does not operate upon the provision of this paragraph for "all natural or synthetic odoriferous or aromatic substances, preparations, and mixtures used in the manufacture of, but not marketable as, perfumes or cosmetics" sufficiently (if at all) to prevent classification of synthetic coumarin under it. U. S. v. Lehn, (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 309.

Substantial "use" as sufficient.—The language of this paragraph "used in the manufacture of, but not marketable as, perfumes or cosmetics," does not require that the chief use of an article must be in the manufacture of perfumes or cosmetics in order that it may be dutiable under the paragraph. A substantial use is sufficient. U. S. v. Lehn, (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 309.

Ceramic colors.—The context of this paragraph (as also that of its ancestor paragraph 56, tariff act of 1909) evinces Congress's unmistakable purpose to select from all colors those colors which are used in the ceramics and expressly rate them for dutiable purposes. Drakenfeld & Co. v. U. S., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 124, wherein it was held that merchandise invoiced as "dunkelpurpur" (German for dark purple), conceded to be a ceramic color and also a mixture of which gold constituted the element of chief value, was dutiable under this paragraph, as a ceramic color, and not under paragraph 65 as a mixture of which gold constitutes the element of chief value.

Vol. II, p. 742, par. 78. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 66.]

Ornament or toy answering description of both this and the following paragraph.—Merchandise which answers the description of paragraph 78, "common yellow, brown, or gray earthenware made of natural unwashed and unmixed clay," and also that of paragraph 79, "earthenware and crockery ware composed of a nonvitrified absorbent body . . . and stoneware, including . . . ornaments, toys . . .," is, by reason of its being an ornament or toy, more specifically described by paragraph 79, and, therefore, dutiable under it. Butler Bros. v. U. S., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 90.

Earthenware garden ornaments.—Diminutive earthenware figures of birds, plants, houses, and people, designed to be exposed for amusement or ornament and not intended for amusement or ornament and not intended for suitable for any utilitarian purpose, are dutiable as earthenware ornaments or toys under this paragraph and are not to be classified as earthenware articles under paragraph 78. Butler Bros. v. U. S., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 90.

Article when "ornamented" or decorated.—Whether or not an article is "ornamented" or "decorated" within the meaning of those terms in this paragraph, is a question of fact to be determined with reference to the particular article; and it is not every minute appearance of ornamentation or decoration upon an article that will bring it within the paragraph. Certainly neither every deviated line nor undulated surface can be held an ornamentation or decoration, although pleasing to the eye. U. S. v. Mutual China Co., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 232, which affirmed the Board of United States General Appraisers' decision directing classification of cups, saucers, and plates, with slightly fanciful outlines and raised lines produced with the mold or a stylus, under this paragraph, as "plain white," rather than as "ornamented or decorated."

Vol. II, p. 743, par. 80. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 66.]

Chinaware semivitrified and nonabsorbent.—When Congress provided in paragraph 79 for a nonvitrified absorbent body and in paragraph 80 for a vitrified nonabsorbent body with the further provision that the latter, when broken, must show a vitrified or semivitrified or vitreous or semivitreous fracture, it understood that such wares as are dealt with in the paragraphs, if entirely vitrified are nonabsorbent, if entirely nonvitrified are absorbent; and that when partially vitrified they may be absorbent or nonabsorbent, depending upon the degree of vitrification. "Vitrified" means substantially converted into glass. "Vitreous" means consisting of or resembling glass in its important characteristics. The words "semivitrified" and "semivitreous," in paragraph 80, do not require the bodies of the wares to be 50 per cent or more vitrified in order to warrant classification under the paragraph; vitrification to an appreciable extent, and not to a negligible degree only, is sufficient. Any power of absorption whatever is not sufficient to exclude merchandise from paragraph 80. Vantine & Co. v. U. S., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 291, wherein it was held that chinaware known as "banko ware," shown to be about half vitrified and wholly nonabsorbent, was correctly classified accordingly under paragraph 80, rather than under paragraph 79, and that a showing that chinaware, when permitted to stand immersed in water, or when boiled in water, absorbed some water, but less than half of the quantity absorbed by some such wares, with no other showing as to the quantity absorbed, was not sufficient to support a protest against the collector's classification as "nonabsorbent" (par. 80), claiming classification as "absorbent" (par. 79).

Vol. II, p. 744, par. 81. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 66.]

Plates composed wholly or in chief value of carbon.—The provision in this paragraph for "plates . . . composed wholly or in chief value of carbon," should, in view of the fact that the provisions of the paragraph associated with it relate plainly to articles of electrical use and construction, be limited in application to carbon plates as known and used in those arts and industries, and should not be extended so as to include all flat and relatively thin slabs of carbon whatsoever. Knott v. U. S., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 92.

Manufacture of carbon not specifically provided for.—Merchandise invoiced as carbon blocks consisting of carbon which has been molded into rectangular pieces, running in size from 1 $\frac{1}{8}$ to 8 $\frac{1}{4}$ inches in length, from 1 $\frac{1}{2}$ to 3 $\frac{1}{2}$ inches in width, and from 3 $\frac{1}{16}$ to 1 $\frac{1}{2}$ inches in thickness, was shown to be devoted, by means of considerable further processing, to the manufacture of brushes and plates for electrical machinery. Since they are so far advanced as to be appropriated to a particular use, they must be regarded as manufactures, but, since they may not be put to that use until after substantial further manufacturing processes, they cannot be regarded as the finished articles. They are accordingly classifiable under this paragraph, as "manufactures of carbon not specifically provided for," and not as brushes or plates of carbon. Knott v. U. S., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 92.

Glass tray bottoms, made of two plain panes of common window glass with decorative threads, leaves, and butterflies between them, not attached to either of the two panes but held there by pressure when the panes are fastened into the frame of the tray, cannot be regarded as glass "ornamented or decorated" or processed in any of the ways specified in this paragraph, nor in any manner ejusdem generis therewith. U. S. v. Bush & Co., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 160.

Trays with glass bottoms and bamboo frames.—Trays, the rims of which are of stained bamboo and the bottoms of two panes of common flat window glass, between which are natural butterflies with paper bodies, leaves, and silk threads so arranged as to give the effect of a decoration on glass, the decoration not being attached to either pane of glass but held in position by the fastening of the panes of glass into the rims of the trays, are not classifiable under this paragraph, as articles in chief value of glass "ornamented or decorated" or processed in any of the ways specified therein. U. S. v. Bush & Co., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 160.

Mountings for opera glasses.—The word "mountings" refers to opera and field glasses as well as to optical instruments. This is shown by the wording of the ancestor paragraphs 111 of the act of 1897 and 108 of the act of 1909. U. S. v. Sheldon, (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 153, which held that mother-of-pearl staves and name rings for mountings or embellishments of opera glasses were classifiable as mountings for opera glasses rather than as manufactures of mother-of-pearl under par. 369.

Mountings for optical instruments.—The word "mountings" employed in this paragraph with reference to "opera and field glasses and optical instruments," when used in connection with optical instruments such as the microscope and polariscope, is used in the sense of accessories, adjuncts, or parts thereof. U. S. v. International Forwarding Co., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 156.

Optical instruments.—An instrument is or is not an "optical instrument" within the meaning of that expression in this paragraph, according to whether or not it is designed directly or indirectly as an aid to vision, or to produce for optical inspection the picture of some object. U. S. v. International Forwarding Co. (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 156, following U. S. v. Bliss, 6 U. S. Cust. App. 433.

Polariscope as "optical instrument."—A polariscope, being an instrument used to enable the observer to view the phenomena of polarized light, and particularly to examine objects under polarized light, is classifiable as an optical instrument rather than as a metal manufacture under par. 167. U. S. v. International Forwarding Co., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 156.

Vol. II, p. 757, par. 127. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 72.]

Containers of hydrosulphite of soda.—Hydrosulphite of soda was imported packed in tin containers about the size of an ordinary barrel, some of the containers being packed in close-fitting wooden drums which are fortified by iron, and some of them in barrels or casks, the space between the container and the barrel or cask being packed with straw. It was shown that it was necessary to protect the merchandise from moisture; that such containers are the usual ones for such merchandise; that they are not heavy, but sufficiently strong for their purpose; and that the contents of only one-fourth of them could be removed without destroying them. As to those whose contents cannot be removed without destroying them, the decision of the Board of United States General Appraisers sustaining a protest against the collector's classification as "cylindrical or tubular tanks of vessels," under this paragraph, and claiming dutiability at the same rate as the merchandise in accordance with paragraph R of section 3 (see vol. II, p. 1086), is affirmed. As to those whose contents can be removed without destroying them, there being no evidence that they are useless commercially, the presumption of correctness attendant upon the collector's action is not overcome, and the decision of the board sustaining the protest is reversed. U. S. v. Murphy, (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 248.

Vol. II, p. 763, par. 157. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 75.]

Combination penholders.—The provision of this paragraph that pens and penholders shall be assessed separately does not qualify the provision for combination penholders in the second clause of the paragraph, but relates to the general provision for penholders in the first clause. This paragraph provides a rate of 25 per cent ad valorem for combination penholders, comprising penholder, pencil, rubber eraser, automatic stamp, or other attachment, treating such combination penholders as distinct entities. The Board of United States General Appraisers having construed the provisions of the tariff act of 1909 which correspond essentially to those of paragraph 157, and Congress having reenacted the provision, legislative adoption of the board's construction is to be inferred. U. S. v. Illfelder, (1918) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 40.

Vol. II, p. 763, par. 161. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 75.]

Watch movement and cases.—Where watches and wrist straps for them were imported together but packed separately, a concession that the movements were properly held dutiable eo nomine under this paragraph, carries with it a concession that the cases were also properly held dutiable eo nomine under the same paragraph. U. S. v. Strasburger & Co., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 138.

Vol. II, p. 765, par. 165. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 76.]

Embroidery and sewing machines.—The provision of this paragraph for "embroidery machines" refers to a class of machines which is imported, designed, constructed, and adapted for embroidering only. A machine that is primarily constructed and designed for sewing fabrics is still a sewing machine although used for the purpose of embroidery work; and, on the other hand, a machine primarily constructed and designed to do embroidering would remain such, even assuming that it might be used for ordinary machine sewing. The provision of this paragraph for "embroidery machines" and that of paragraph 441 for "sewing machines" will be so construed. The question is not so much what the machine does as what it was primarily constructed and designed to do. Durbrow, etc., Mfg. Co. v. U. S., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 148.

Vol. II, p. 765, par. 167. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 76.]

Sewing machines shuttles.—See annotation under par. 441, infra, p. 490.

Watch bracelets.—Wristlets or straps for holding wrist watches, in chief value of metal, are classifiable, not under paragraph 356, tariff act of 1913, as articles worn on the person for comfort, convenience, or adornment, as like articles, or as parts of such articles or like articles, but under paragraph 167 as miscellaneous articles in chief value of metal. U. S. v. Strasburger & Co., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 138.

Polariscope tubes, specially designed glass tubes with brass fittings for holding liquids to be examined in polarized light, are dutiable as mountings for optical instruments (par. 93) rather than as metal manufactures under this paragraph. U. S. v. International Forwarding Co., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 156.

Plated with gold or silver.—To meet the requirement of the word "plated" in this paragraph, it is not necessary that an article be wholly covered with gold or silver, nor can any hard and fast mathematical line of distinction be drawn in the application of the provision. The classification includes all such metallic articles as have a substantial portion of their surface, that is to say, more than an insignificant or negligible portion, covered with gold or silver. Cloisonné vases of beautiful and artistic appearance, their value being materially enhanced by the plating with gold or silver of certain ornamental and artistic parts and decorations, are "plated with gold or silver," notwithstanding that only about 10 per cent of their surfaces are plated, and notwithstanding the violation by the collector of customs of the instructions of the Secretary of the Treasury that articles, to be classified as plated under the paragraph, must have at least 15 per cent of the exposed surface plated. Saji, etc., Co. v. U. S., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 78.

Vol. II, p. 769, par. 170. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 76.]

"Poles" as including what.—The provision of this paragraph, for "telephone, trolley, electric-light, and telegraph poles" was intended by Congress as a comprehensive one and includes all poles of a character adapted to the uses indicated. In order that a pole may answer the description of this paragraph, it is not necessary that it have attached any cross arm or even that it be notched to receive any. Nor is it necessary that it should be drawshaved, creosoted, squared, or roofed, or far advanced in manufacture as to be devoted to some one of the particular uses designated. The fact that certain poles may be and are used to some extent as piles is not sufficient to prevent their classification under this paragraph as "telephone, trolley, electric-light and telegraph poles." Cedar poles of a kind shown to be mainly used as "telephone, trolley, electric-light, and telegraph poles" are classifiable accordingly under this paragraph, notwithstanding that they may be and are used also for other purposes, notwithstanding that before being used as designated they are usually draw-shaved, painted, notched, squared, creosoted, and roofed, and notwithstanding that they answer also to the call of free-list paragraph 647 for "logs, timber, round, unmanufactured," and that of free-list paragraph 648 for "cedar . . . in the log, rough, or hewn only." U. S. v. Baxter, (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 99.

"Wood" as embracing what.—In common parlance wood is the tough, hard substance of all trees and shrubs, and it includes not only the hard fiber bundles of trees and shrubs in general but also the tougher fibrous components of some herbaceous plants. It is a very broad term and includes not only material obtained from exogenous plants but also like substances obtained from palms, from bamboo (which is a giant grass), and from some ferns (which are herbaceous plants). The word "wood" in this paragraph will be so construed. Steinhardt v. U. S., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 62.

Baskets made of raffia, wood, cane and willow, and lined with silk, the silk being greater in value than any one of the other component materials, but less than all, are classifiable, not under paragraph 318 as miscellaneous manufactures in chief value of silk, but under this paragraph as baskets "in chief value of . . . wood" or "like material." This is true notwithstanding that the silk lining may be greater in value than the wood, cane, and willow, since raffia is held to be wood within the meaning of that term as used in this paragraph. Steinhardt v. U. S., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 62.

Vol. II, p. 771, par. 177. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 77.]

Sugar cane.—The results effected by steaming sugar cane and packing it with sugar and water in hermetically sealed tins are not within the judicial knowledge; and the court is unable to say that such merchandise is either sugar cane in its natural state or sugar cane unmanufactured, within the meaning of those expressions in this paragraph. The only evidence as to the nature of the commodity being the classification of the merchandise by the collector as "sweet-meats" under paragraph 217, the decision of the Board of United States General Appraisers sustaining the protest of the importers is reversed. U. S. v. Brown & Co., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 146.

Vol. II, p. 776, par. 194. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 78.]

"Confectionery" as covering coating on surface of baked loaf.—A thin, glazed coating on the surface of a baked loaf, possibly composed of water and the white of an egg or of sugar and water and applied with a brush, cannot be regarded as "confectionery" under this paragraph. U. S. v. Menzel, (1918) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 16.

Sponge rusks.—Merchandise known as "sponge rusks"—toasted slices of sponge cake—is not dutiable under this paragraph, since it does not contain chocolate, nuts, fruit, or confectionery. There is nothing in the record to show that its components are the same as those employed in making sweetened breads, crackers, or biscuits, so that it cannot be held free of duty under paragraph 417 as "biscuits, bread, and wafers." It is a manufacture of sponge cake and dutiable as a miscellaneous manufactured article under paragraph 385. U. S. v. Hermanos, (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 66.

Similitude.—Biscuits, bread, wafers, cakes, and other baked articles not containing chocolate, nuts, fruit, or confectionery are excluded from the operation of this paragraph, and, having been excluded, they cannot be subjected to its provisions by similitude without violating the expressed will of Congress. U. S. v. Hermanos, (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 66.

Vol. II, p. 776, par. 200. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 79.]

"Vegetables" as including canned grapevine leaves.—Canned grapevine leaves, used to flavor roulades of meat and rice, which are rolled up and cooked in them, served with the roulades, sometimes eaten and sometimes not, are not vegetables, prepared, under this paragraph. The decision of the Board of United States General Appraisers sustaining the claim of the protest for classification under paragraph 385 as a nonenumerated manufactured article is affirmed. U. S. v. Caroneos Bros., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 220.

Vol. II, p. 777, par. 201. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 79.]

"Sauces" as including flavoring materials used in kitchen.—Flavoring materials which are used exclusively in the kitchen for the cooking or preparation of foods are not sauces within the meaning of this paragraph, because that term as now understood does not include relishes which are not served on the table for individual use. It is not true, however, that sauces cease to be sauces if they are used in greater quantity in the kitchen than on the table. Yuen & Co. v. U. S., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 108.

Chinese soy as "sauce."—Thin Chinese soy, made by mixing cooked soy beans with wheat flour, salt, and water and exposing to the sun for about three months, used to flavor and color soups, fish and meats, about 80 per cent being used in the kitchen and about 20 per cent on the table, is dutiable as a sauce under paragraph 201, tariff act of 1913, and not as a miscellaneous manufacture under paragraph 385. Yuen & Co. v. U. S., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 108.

Quince seed.—See annotation under par. 477, infra, p. 490.

Vol. II, p. 785, par. 235. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 81.]

Paprika is a capsicum or red pepper.—Vandegrift & Co. v. United States, 8 U. S. Cust. App. 1; T. D. 37121. The evidence as to a contrary commercial designation being insufficient, the decision of the Board of United States General Appraisers so classifying it under this paragraph is affirmed. Littlejohn & Co. v. U. S., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 207.

Vol. II, p. 795, par. 258. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 85.]

The language "all other Jacquard figured manufactures of cotton," in this paragraph, was employed as a precautionary measure rather than as indicating an intention to defeat or invade the specific eo nomine designations of paragraph 358. Burr v. U. S., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 71.

Vol. II, p. 796, par. 262. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 86.]

Ladder tape.—See annotation under par. 266, next following.

Vol. II, p. 797, par. 266. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 86.]

"Manufactures of cotton" as including ladder tape.—Merchandise known as "ladder tape," woven as an entirety of cotton, used in the manufacture of Venetian blinds, identical with that in United States v. Burlington Venetian Blind Co. (3 Ct. Cust. App. 378; T. D. 32967), consisting of two longitudinal fast-edge woven pieces about 1½ inches wide, connected at intervals of about 2 inches by similar transverse pieces about three-eighths of an inch wide and 2½ inches long, are dutiable as "manufactures of cotton" and not as "fabrics with fast edges" (par. 262). While the tapes, if produced and imported as separate entities, might be dutiable under paragraph 262, the fact that they have never had an existence separate from that of the finished article is sufficient to exclude them from the operation of this paragraph. Western Blind, etc., Co. v. U. S., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 68.

Vol. II, p. 801, par. 284. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 88.]

"Manufactures of vegetable fibre" as including jute paddings.—Plain woven fabrics called "paddings," the warp being single yarns of cotton and the weft being single yarns of jute, are not classifiable under paragraph 408, as "plain woven fabrics of single jute yarns," notwithstanding that jute may be 60 per cent of the value of the fabrics. They are woven, not of jute yarns but of jute yarns and cotton yarns. The decision of the Board of United States General Appraisers sustaining the collector's classification of them as a manufacture of vegetable fiber under paragraph 284 is affirmed. Simiansky v. U. S., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 288.

Vol. II, p. 801, par. 288. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 88.]

Effect given collector's classification as to half hose.—The court cannot take judicial notice that exhibits of half hose are not "selvaged, fashioned, narrowed, or shaped wholly or in part by knitting machines or frames, or knit by hand," or "commercially known as seamless"; and, in the absence of other evidence, the collector's classification of them as such under this paragraph, must be sustained and the decision of the Board of United States General Appraisers sustaining a protest claiming them dutiable as knitted wopen half hose not specially provided for under the paragraph reversed. U. S. v. Lee & Co., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 111.

Vol. II, p. 803, par. 289. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 88.]

Flannels.—While paragraph 379, tariff act of 1909, was limited to flannels for underwear, its successor, this paragraph, covers all flannels, regardless of use. Connor v. U. S., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 312, wherein the court said that with conflicting testimony as to the meaning of the term "flannels," the Government could not be said to have established a commercial designation different from the common meaning, in the face of harmonious testimony by the importers' witnesses that the merchandise is flannels, supported as to much of it by the finding of a Government appraiser and examiners to the same effect. The decision of the Board of United States General Appraisers sustaining the collectors' classifications as cloths composed wholly or in chief value of wool under paragraph 288, or as women's and children's dress goods composed wholly or in chief value of wool under paragraph 290, and overruling protests claiming classification as "flannels" under this paragraph was reversed except as to certain items admitted by importers' witnesses not to be flannels. The decision was predicated upon the stipulation of counsel that goods covered by various protests are substantially of the same kind.

Vol. II, p. 805, par. 294. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 89.]

Wilton rugs.—Machine-made Wilton rugs are not dutiable under paragraph 300 ("Oriental, Berlin, Anbusson, Axminster, and similar rugs"), but are dutiable under this paragraph by virtue of paragraph 303.

Beuttell v. U. S., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 38.

Machine-made Wilton rugs are dutiable, by virtue of paragraph 303, at the rate imposed by this paragraph upon Wilton carpets. Beuttell & Sons v. United States, 8 Ct. Cust. App. 409; T. D. 37666. They are not classifiable under paragraph 300 as "carpets woven whole for rooms." U. S. v. Snellenburg, (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 59, wherein the court said that it would not take judicial notice that a sample was a Wilton rug as claimed, and not a moquette carpet as assessed, and, in the absence of testimony, must affirm the collector's classification.

Pleading protest.—Paragraph 303 provides that rugs for floors not specially provided for shall be subjected to the rate of duty imposed upon carpets or carpeting of like character or description. A protest claiming classification for such merchandise under this paragraph as Wilton carpets is not rendered insufficient by the lack of a reference to paragraph 303. The collector is presumed to understand the provisions of the law, and the record shows that he was not misled. U. S. v. Snellenburg, (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 59.

Vol. II, p. 805, par. 300. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 89.]

"Carpets woven whole for rooms."—The provision in this paragraph for "carpets woven for rooms" does not include all rugs which are woven whole; nor can the question of whether or not a rug is classifiable under this provision be determined by the size of the rug. It refers to a carpet which has been specially woven for a particular room. U. S. v. Snellenburg, (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 59.

Wilton rugs.—See annotation under par. 294, supra, p. 486.

Water color designs for gowns.—See annotation under par. 652, infra, p. 491.

Paper cartons.—Merchandise consisting of a paper carton or box, fitted with small boxes and baskets, intended for counter display after children's handkerchiefs have been put into the small boxes and baskets, is not an entirety. The decision of the Board of United States General Appraisers refusing to sustain the collector's classification thus and assessment of duty as being in chief value of surface-coated paper under paragraph 324 and directing classification of the carton under this paragraph as a manufacture in chief value of paper, and the smaller containers some as articles in chief value of surface-coated paper under paragraph 324 and some as manufactures in chief value of wood under paragraph 176, is affirmed. U. S. v. Thomsen & Co., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 223.

Vol. II, p. 816, par. 333. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 93.]

Beads and spangles and articles composed thereof.—It has been the constant and continuing purpose of Congress in this paragraph, and its ancestor paragraphs in other tariff acts, to regard beads and spangles and articles composed thereof as a separate and distinct subject of tariff classification and duty, but this paragraph should not be regarded as invading the field of the subject matter of paragraph 357 (jewelry and jewelry material) unless manifestly so intended. U. S. v. Battiloro, (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 180.

Beads of all kinds.—The term "beads of all kinds," in this paragraph, does not include any of that class of beads constituting jewelry or the materials for, or suitable for, use in making jewelry. U. S. v. Bartiromo, (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 183.

Coral beads.—See the annotation to par. 357, infra, p. 488.

Vol. II, p. 818, par. 335. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 93.]

What constitutes blocking of hats.—Hats which have been shaped in part as an incident only to the forming of their brims, or partly shaped by hand pressure or manipulation only, without any treatment for the purpose or with the effect of bringing them to their final shape by blocking, are "not blocked" within the meaning of that language in this paragraph. Thus straw hats of "Alpine" shape, known as "bodies," which have been placed upon a zinc brim form and subjected to slight hydraulic pressure in order to bring their brims to the proper widths according to style and demand, but which must yet be subjected to a blocking process by which they are stiffened with suitable sizing and pressed into permanent shape and conventional sizes, are entitled to claim classification as "not blocked," under this paragraph. Donat & Co. v. U. S., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 162.

Vol. II, p. 820, par. 342. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 94.]

Jew's-harps are not "toys" under this paragraph. U. S. v. Sears, Roebuck & Co., (1918) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 33.

Vol. II, p. 822, par. 347. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 94.]

"Of whatever material composed."—This paragraph indicates very clearly a congressional purpose to make it exclusive in the field of its application. "Artificial . . . fruits, grains, leaves and stems or parts thereof," are of necessity made of materials presumptively covered elsewhere in the act, and it is hardly conceivable that the paragraph can have operation at all without invading some other paragraph. The effect of the phrase "of whatever material composed" is to make the paragraph invasive of others, and to suspend the force of a particular material as a factor in determining the question of specificity, as, whatever the material, the paragraph has provided for certain specific articles composed of it. If the phrase may be likened to "by whatever name known" in relative comprehensiveness, its use amounts to an eo nomine designation of the material. U. S. v. American Bead Co., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 193.

"Artificial" as meaning exact imitation.—An exact imitation is not necessary to bring an article within the meaning of the word "artificial" as used in this paragraph. If an article is in size, shape, and color like "fruits, grains, leaves, flowers and stems or parts thereof," it falls within the provision. The association of the word "artificial" with the words "suitable for use as millinery ornaments" would indicate that an imitation close enough to render an article suitable for such use would bring it within the provision. U. S. v. American Bead Co., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 193.

Artificial flowers, leaves, and stems, made of beads with the aid of wires and silk threads, having the size, form, color, and outline of natural flowers, are dutiable under this paragraph as "artificial and ornamental . . . leaves, flowers, and stems or parts thereof, of whatever material composed," rather than as beaded articles under paragraph 333. U. S. v. American Bead Co., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 193.

Crude feathers.—The covering, and with it the shorter lateral growth on one side of goose quills, was stripped by hand and imported, to be used, after having received appropriate treatment, for making millinery and other ornaments, for trimming Christmas trees, and for various other purposes. Conceding the merchandise to be feathers, it is classifiable under this paragraph as "crude" and not as "advanced" feathers. In this paragraph such treatment as dressing or coloring was deemed an advancement by Congress, indicating that some processing of the feathers by which their condition was improved or their value enhanced was the advancement which Congress intended to be necessary to an increased rate of duty. U. S. v. Massace, (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 256.

Goat skin articles as including kid skin articles.—With proof that kid skins and goatskins are different things commercially, the provisions for goatskin articles in this paragraph will be held not to include kid-skin articles. Seward v. U. S., (1918) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 4.

Kid-skin crosses.—Crosses made of dressed kid skins sewed together are dutiable under this paragraph, not as "plates and mats of

. . . goatskins," but as "manufactures of fur . . . , when prepared for use as material, joined or sewed together . . ." Seward v. U. S., (1918) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 4.

Vol. II, p. 825, par. 356. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 95.]

"Part thereof"—An article not an actual constituent of a manufacture cannot be considered as a part thereof unless it has been advanced to a point which definitely commits it to that specific class and kind of manufacture. An article commercially suitable and commercially used for the making of different things is a material which is just as much adapted to the production of any of them as to any other of them, and until it has been finally appropriated to some definite manufacturing use and has been given the distinguishing characteristics which clearly identify it as one of the components ultimately to be assembled into a completed whole, it cannot be regarded as a part of any specified manufacture. U. S. v. American Bead Co., (1918) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 27.

Base metal snaps, clasps, and swivels which have been dipped in acid and lacquered, employed in the manufacture of bead necklaces and neck, fan, vest, and eyeglass chains, are not classifiable under paragraph 356 as parts of chains, or under paragraph 167 as miscellaneous metal articles, but under paragraph 356 as metal materials suitable for use in the manufacture of the articles named in the paragraph. U. S. v. American Bead Co., (1918) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 27.

Coral beads which have been cut to final globular shape, pierced, graded, and temporarily strung in final relation from large to small, for use and wear as coral necklaces, are classifiable not as beads or articles in chief value of beads under the last part of paragraph 333, but as "coral . . . cut but not set, and suitable for use in the manufacture of jewelry" under this paragraph. U. S. v. Bartiromo, (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 183.

Coral beads, graduated and temporarily strung loosely on strings for facility in transportation, suitable for use in the manufacture of jewelry, are classifiable not as beads or articles in chief value of beads under paragraph 333, but as "coral . . . cut but not set, and suitable for use in the manufacture of jewelry" under this paragraph. U. S. v. Battiloro, (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 180.

"Not set" as applied to coral beads.—Coral beads which have been graduated as to size and temporarily strung are "not set" within the meaning of that language in this paragraph. U. S. v. Bartiromo, (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 183.

Vol. II, p. 827, par. 358. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 96.]

Jacquard figured cotton laces and nets.—Jacquard figured cotton edgings, insertings, flouncings, and nettings are dutiable ex nomine under this paragraph. They are not to be classified under paragraph 258 within the provision for "all other Jacquard figured manufactures of cotton." Burr v. U. S., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 71.

Vol. II, p. 835, par. 373. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 97.]

Article capable of producing complete tune.—It is not necessary that an article be capable of producing a complete tune to warrant its classification as a musical instrument under this paragraph. U. S. v. Sears, Roebuck & Co., (1918) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 33.

Jew's-harps are "musical instruments" under this paragraph. U. S. v. Sears, Roebuck & Co., (1918) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 33.

"Reibkuchen," a baked loaf composed mainly of some kind of flour, about 2 feet long by 1½ feet wide and 2 inches thick, covered with a thin glaze probably applied with a brush and composed of water and the white of an egg or sugar and water, the sole use of which is in making sauces for boiled fish, is classifiable not under paragraph 417 as bread, or paragraph 194 as containing confectionery, but under paragraph 385 as an unenumerated manufactured article. U. S. v. Menzel, (1918) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 16.

Ensilage cutter.—An implement used exclusively for the purpose of cutting corn raised on the farm and storing the product to be fed on the same farm to cattle raised and fed on the same farm, is an instrument employed in supplying sustenance to cattle and, in even a very narrow sense, is used as an agricultural implement. Such an implement is an ensilage cutter; and it is admissible free of duty under the provision for "agricultural implements" in this paragraph. Tower & Co. v. U. S., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 307.

Custom regulation affecting free entry of goods of domestic origin.—This paragraph entitles certain goods of domestic origin to free entry provided proof of the identity of such goods shall be made under regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury. Article 333, Customs Regulations of 1915, sets out such regulations. Merchandise was exported from Malone, N. Y., and subsequently imported and entered at Malone for immediate transportation without appraisement to New York city, where it was entered for consumption and bond given for production of evidence of outward shipment. The certificate of exportation by the collector at Malone was not furnished by the importer to the collector at New York. In view of the provision of article 333 that such certificate "will be issued on application of the importer or collector," and of the fact that the papers in the case set forth the facts necessary for such inquiry, it was the duty of the collector at the port of New York to satisfy himself by application to the collector at Malone as to whether or not the goods had been exported. U. S. v. Golden Co., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 229.

Tungstic acid and tungsten scrap.—Tungstic acid having been exported from the United States to Canada and the tungsten having been there recovered from it, the insoluble residue, when brought back to the United States for the purpose of reclaiming the tungstic acid in it, is entitled to claim identity as between what was exported from and imported to the United States, within the meaning of this paragraph, granting free entry to certain American goods returned. United States v. Rubelli's Sons et al., 8 Ct. Cust. App. 399; T. D. 37645. Scraps or clippings of tungsten ingots and wire are not entitled to claim such identity. The insoluble residue is a part of what was exported, while the scraps or clippings are manufactures from what was exported. U. S. v. Tower & Son, (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 135.

"Exported for repairs."—An American vessel, outward bound, was wrecked. Later she was salvaged and her engine sold to a firm in British Columbia. This firm repaired it and shipped it back to the United States. It was "exported . . . for repairs" within the meaning of this paragraph. It was manifestly impossible to comply with the Treasury regulations as to the manner of proving the identity of American goods returned, and other proof was properly received. The merchandise was dutiable under this paragraph, to the extent of the value of the repairs, and not as a steam engine under paragraph 165. U. S. v. Coastwise Steamship, etc., Co., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 216.

"Woven fabrics of single jute yarns."—The yarns of which a woven fabric is composed are both warp and weft, and if one is composed of jute and the other of cotton the fabric is not woven of jute yarns within the meaning of the language "woven fabrics of single jute yarns" in this paragraph. Simiansky & Co. v. U. S., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 288.

Jute paddings.—See annotation under par. 284, supra, p. 486.

"Reibkuchen" a baked loaf composed mainly of flour as "bread."—See annotation to par. 385, supra, p. 489.

"Bread" as including article sole use of which is making fish sauce.—While remnants and dried portions of ordinary bread are used in making a fish sauce or other sauces or dressings, the word "bread" in the free-entry, this paragraph, does not include an article the sole use of which is in making a fish sauce. The word bread is used to designate a baked product the predominant use of which is as an independent article of food. U. S. v. Menzel, (1918) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 16.

Sponge rusks.—See annotations under par. 194, supra, p. 485.

Vol. II, p. 855, par. 441. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 102.]

A sewing machine imported for use in embroidering, and for that reason lacking the presser foot and feed as being unnecessary, this lack making no change in the stitch made by the machine, is still a sewing machine, entitled to free entry as such, or part of such, under paragraph 441, tariff act of 1913, and not dutiable as an embroidery machine under paragraph 165. Durbrow, etc., Mfg. Co. v. U. S., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 148.

Parts of sewing machines used on embroidery machines.—From the fact that the tariff act of 1913 makes no provision for parts of embroidery machines, it is concluded that the provision of this paragraph for parts of sewing machines should cover such parts no matter whether or how much they might be used on embroidery machines. Durbrow, etc., Mfg. Co. v. U. S., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 177.

Sewing-machine shuttles are classifiable as parts of sewing machines rather than as manufactures of metal (par. 167), even though they be imported for use in embroidery machines. Durbrow, etc., Mfg. Co. v. U. S., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 177.

Vol. II, p. 858, par. 477. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 103.]

Quince seeds being shown to be a drug, and the court judicially knowing them not to be garden seeds, are entitled to free entry under this paragraph, as "drugs, such as barks, beans, berries, . . . seeds (aromatic, not garden seeds)" and are not dutiable under paragraph 212 as "seeds not specially provided for." Ross & Co. v. U. S., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 235.

Garden seeds.—The expression "garden seeds," in this paragraph, tariff act of 1913, means seeds for kitchen gardens, and does not include orchard seeds, fruit seeds, nut seeds, agricultural seeds, grass seeds, berry seeds, or flower seeds. Ross & Co. v. U. S., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 235.

Similar provisions in previous acts contrasted.—This paragraph eliminated from its predecessors in the acts of 1897 and 1909 (568 and 580) the words "and which are fit only for such uses." The purpose of this change was to broaden the scope of the provisions and include not alone those solely so used but also those commonly so used. U. S. v. Seward, (1918) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 18.

"Such as."—The use of the expression "such as" in this paragraph is as a similitude provision, classifying merchandise of the kinds named which is like or similar to those substances which "are commonly used in soap making or in wire drawing, or for stuffing or dressing leather." U. S. v. Seward, (1918) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 18.

Tea oil, being shown to be not compounded, suitable for use in the soap and textile industries, and similar to commercial olive oil, which is shown to be commonly used in these industries, is classifiable accordingly under this paragraph. U. S. v. Seward, (1918) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 18.

Natural sun-bleached wheat stems and heads tied into small bundles for use as semifloral ornaments or emblems are admissible free of duty under this paragraph, as crude or unmanufactured vegetable substances, or under paragraph 497 as textile grasses or fibers, and are not dutiable under paragraph 385 as nonenumerated manufactured articles. U. S. v. Rice Co., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 165, wherein it was said that the issue being whether or not certain wheat stems with heads on were sun bleached, testimony by government chemists that they contained a certain percentage of a chemical bleaching agent and that sun-bleached wheat usually contained a much smaller percentage or none at all is not sufficient to overcome the finding of the Board of United States General Appraisers supported by testimony that they were sun bleached, by the admission of one of the government chemists that they were identical in appearance with sun-bleached wheat, by the testimony of the importers contrasting the appearance of chemically bleached wheat with that of the merchandise in controversy, and by testimony that some chemical powder is sprinkled upon such wheat when sun bleached in order to protect it from insects during shipment.

Waste bagging.—Upon the testimony of a competent, undiscredited, and uncontradicted witness that half of a certain lot of pieces of old bags was of a kind chiefly used in paper making, the protest claiming classification as paper stock under this paragraph, should have been sustained as to 50 per cent. The rest of the importation was properly classified by the collector as waste not specially provided for under paragraph 384. U. S. v. Downing Co., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 84, which further held that testimony that merchandise could not be used for paper making does not sustain a protest claiming classification under this paragraph as being "used chiefly for paper making."

"Rags" as including waste bagging.—Pieces of old bags of comparatively large size, frequently entire bags cut open at one end or side, the fabric in most cases being still sound, cannot be regarded as rags under this paragraph. U. S. v. Downing Co., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 84.

Vol. II, p. 876, par. 627. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 110.]

Containers of tea.—Baskets imported which are admittedly containers of tin packages of tea which weigh less than 5 pounds, are made dutiable by the express terms of the proviso to this paragraph. U. S. v. Brown, (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 45.

Vol. II, p. 879, par. 648. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 112.]

Round cedar timber.—While the free-list provisions of this paragraph for "logs, timber, round, unmanufactured," and of paragraph 648 for "cedar . . . in the log, rough, or hewn only" are sufficiently comprehensive to include round cedar timber of any length or diameter, there can be no doubt that the provision of paragraph 170 for telephone, trolley, electric-light, and telegraph poles is more specific. U. S. v. Baxter, (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 99.

Vol. II, p. 880, sec. 652. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 112.]

"Replicas or reproductions."—In U. S. v. Twenty-five Pictures, (S. D. N. Y. 1919) 260 Fed. 851, regarding the meaning of the words "replicas" and "reproductions," as used in this section, the court said:

"It has been urged by counsel for the claimant that all of the merchandise should have been classified under section 652, which covers, not only original paintings, but original drawings and sketches in pen and ink, 'including not more than two replicas or reproductions of the same.' It is contended that the words 'replicas' and 'reproductions' mean any copies, and that this statute is intended to place on the free list all works of art of this kind, whether wrought by the original artist or another. In other words, an importer could bring in free an original and two copies by any one of the same thing. A 'replica' is defined by the Standard Dictionary as a 'duplicate executed by the artist himself and regarded equally with the first as an original.' I think a 'reproduction,' while it is sometimes loosely used as meaning a copy, does not really differ from a replica, within the meaning of the above section. It suggests the idea of a second effort by the same artist. Any other interpretation would make the word 'original,' as well as the clause 'providing for replicas or reproductions,' though not strictly meaningless, entirely unnecessary.

"Moreover, the Tariff Act, under paragraph 376, subjected 'works of art, including paintings in oil, or water colors, pastels, pen and ink drawings, or copies, replicas or reproductions of any of the same,' to a duty of 15 per cent ad valorem. Here it is to be noticed the word 'copies,' a word of much broader significance than 'replicas' or 'reproductions,' is added. I think this shows that any of the paintings which were not originals, or were not reproductions made by the same artist, were subject to duty, unless they had been 'produced more than 100 years prior to the date of importation'; but in the last case the free importation was 'subject to such regulations as to proof of antiquity as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe.' The prescribed regulations were not complied with and they therefore became dutiable. When paragraph 376 provides that works of art, including paintings, water colors, and pen and ink drawings, or copies, are in general subject to a duty of 15 per cent. ad valorem, it cannot be contended that the court can take judicial notice of the fact that the merchandise may be on the free list if the real facts were known, because it may be an original painting or a replica. If such is the law, the government would have to prove a negative in the case of the importation of any painting."

Water color designs for gowns.—Pen-and-ink or pencil drawings colored with water colors, made on heavy paper or cardboard by artists working with the assistance or under the direction of a master artist, imported to serve as originals for making plates to illustrate women's wearing apparel in dress catalogues and magazines, are classifiable as "original drawings and sketches in pen and ink or pencil and water colors" under this paragraph, and not as manufactures of paper under paragraph 332. American Colortype Co. v. U. S., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 212.

Articles of utility.—The provision of this paragraph excluding from the operation of the paragraph certain articles of utility, applies only to the enumerations of the provision, viz., "'painting' and 'sculpture' and 'statuary.'" It does not exclude "original drawings and sketches in pen and ink or pencil and water colors" which serve a utilitarian purpose. American Colortype Co. v. U. S., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 212.

"Original drawings" and "original paintings."—The provision of this paragraph for "original drawings and sketches in pen and ink or pencil and water colors" is narrower than the provision in the same paragraph for "original paintings in . . . water or other colors." American Colortype Co. v. U. S., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 212.

"Original."—A sketch or drawing is not taken without the meaning of the word "original" in this paragraph, by the fact that it is the result of the combined concurrent efforts of several artists. American Colortype Co. v. U. S., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 212.

Vol. II, p. 884, par. 656. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 113.]

Sufficiency of certificate as to antiques.—One purpose of article 395, Customs Regulations of 1915, is to furnish the customs officers facts upon which an investigation may be based. United States v. Thomas (3 Ct. Cust. App. 142; T. D. 32385). That purpose is not accomplished by a certificate stating that antiquities were purchased from "various persons" on different days of the years 1914 and 1915, without stating what persons, what days, for which years. Such certificate is insufficient to support a claim for free entry under this paragraph. U. S. v. Tsai, (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 42.

[First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 129.]

Models of women's wearing apparel.—When women's wearing apparel, which had been entered in bond under subsection 4 of paragraph J of section 4, as being for use as models and not for sale, was presented for exportation showing that the seals affixed in accordance with article 383, Customs Regulations of 1915, had been tampered with and the cords attached pursuant to the same article had been cut, it must be presumed that the identification marks had been designedly interfered with to facilitate the use of the apparel for some purpose other than as models. Bergdorf, etc., Co. v. U. S., (1918) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 11, wherein it appeared that the manager of the importing company testified that the identification marks had been unintentionally or accidentally interfered with, and that the apparel had not been out of the importing company's establishment or lent to anyone. It was held that since it did not appear that he had direct charge or custody of the apparel or that he was in a position to know of his own knowledge whether or not the goods had been taken out of the establishment and put to a use other than that for which they had been entered, he was not competent so to testify, and his testimony did not establish such statements as facts.

Vol. II, p. 887, par. Q. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 133.]

Effect of Revenue Act of 1916.—There being no conflict between paragraph Q and the Revenue Act of September 8, 1916 (see 1918 Supp. 270), the paragraph was not repealed by the Revenue Act. Nor should they be regarded as separate and independent of each other. The principle of paragraph Q, that goods in bond shall be subjected to the rate of duty in force at the time of withdrawal and not to that in force at the time of entry, should be applied in the administration of the Revenue Act. Vandegrift & Co. v. United States, decided concurrently herewith (9 Ct. Cust. App. 112; T. D. 37978). Consequently merchandise which was entered and bonded before, but withdrawn after, the Revenue Act went into effect is ratable for duty under the Revenue Act of 1916, and not under the Tariff Act of 1913. U. S. v. Cronkhite Co., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 129; Vandegrift & Co. v. U. S., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 112.

Vol. II, p. 902, sec. 1. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 57.]

Scope of President's authority.—Under the provisions of this section relating to the reorganization of the customs service, the President is authorized to abolish positions such as those of naval officers, surveyors, appraisers, and assistant appraisers; to dispense with their statutory functions; to transfer the auditing functions of the naval officer to a deputy auditor for the Treasury Department or to a deputy collector of customs; to consolidate certain customs positions; to abolish the fee system and place all officers on a flat salary basis; to abolish the authority of collectors to sell blank manifests, etc.; and to require a protest fee for the lodging of protests before the Board of General Appraisers or a similar board. The President is not authorized to change the functions and personnel of the Board of General Appraisers; nor can he place in the classified civil service the Board of General Appraisers and collectors of customs, appraisers, surveyors, naval officers, and assistant appraisers. The President is authorized to transfer or consolidate with the Bureau of Customs the functions now exercised by the Customs Division of the Treasury Department, by the Division of Special Agents of the Treasury Department, and such of the functions of the Appointment Division of the Treasury Department as pertain to customs matters; but he is unauthorized to transfer to the Bureau of Customs certain functions pertaining to imports and exports now exercised by the Bureau of Statistics of the Department of Commerce and Labor and he cannot transfer to the Department of Commerce and Labor functions exercised by customs officers in enforcing the navigation laws. The President may, within certain limits, increase the functions of the employees of the Customs Division, the special agents force, and the Appointment Division, and he may also increase the number of such employees other than the special agents. Reduction of the cost of collecting the customs revenue to the maximum prescribed by the above Act is not a condition precedent, in a legal sense, to the taking effect of the reorganization. The scheme of reorganization to be submitted to Congress need not show in detail the estimated items of reductions in expenditure, though it should contain some general estimate as to that matter. The transfer of the auditing functions of the naval officer to a deputy auditor for the Treasury Department does not authorize the President to omit from the estimates for collecting customs revenue the expenses of such auditing work. feited under R. S. sec. 3082. In re 200 7/12 Dozen Wool Hose, etc., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 263 Fed. 376.

Appeal from collector's liquidation.—This section directing customs officers to carry out the instructions of the Secretary of the Treasury confers no rights upon an appellant from a collector's liquidation. Saji, etc., Co. v. U. S., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 78.

Vol. II, p. 989, sec. 2809. [First ed., vol. II, p. 647.]

Validity of penalty for smuggling smoking opium into United States.—This section does not authorize the Customs Department to impose a penalty on a person smuggling smoking opium into the United States, since it applies only to "merchandise," which is defined by R. S. sec. 2766, (2 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 973) as "goods, wares, and chattels of every description capable of being imported," whereas the importation of smoking opium is absolutely prohibited by section 1 of the Act of Feb. 9, 1909, ch. 100 (3 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 723). Moreover, in order to justify the imposition of a penalty under this section the court must be able to measure the penalty in the case by the value of the imported thing, which cannot be done as to smoking opium, since it is not a thing of value because its importation is prohibited. Nor is the imposition of such a penalty authorized by section 8 of the Act of Jan. 17, 1914, ch. 9 (3 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 727), since that section relates only to opium which may be lawfully imported into the United States, and not to smoking opium. U. S. v. Sischo, (W. D. Wash. 1919) 262 Fed. 1001.

Vol. II, p. 1010, par. C. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 114.]

Quantity.—Paragraph C requires that all invoices of imported merchandise "shall contain a correct, complete, and detailed description of such merchandise and of the packages, wrappings, or other coverings containing it." If the invoice of imported liquor states its quantity incorrectly, or does not state it, the importer has no right to complain if the capacity of the containers as reported by the gauger be accepted by the collector as the quantity in them at the time of exportation. Park & Tilford v. U. S., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 53.

Vol. II, p. 1012, par. E. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 115.]

Nature of bond required.—When entry of merchandise exceeding one hundred dollars in value is made by a statement in the form of an invoice, the collector may only require a bond for the production of a duly certified invoice. He has no authority under this section to require a bond containing the provision that the obligor shall pay to the collector "the amount of duty to which it shall appear by such invoice the said goods . . . are subject over and above the amount of duties estimated on the appraisement of said goods." U. S. v. Romeo, (S. D. N. Y. 1918) 258 Fed. 497.

Vol. II, p. 1019, par. I. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 117.]

Entered value in excess of market value.

—Where, in the entry, two separate additions were made to the invoice value "to make market value," while, in the certificate provided by the Treasury Department for claiming assessments of duty on less than the entered value in accordance with the concluding sentence of this paragraph, only one of these sums was claimed to be added to "meet advances by appraiser in similar cases," the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury, upon final appraisement at the invoice value that duty be assessed on the entered value, less the sum so claimed in the certificate and not upon the invoice value or the entered value, less both sums, was correct. Twell & Co. v. U. S., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 73.

Clerical error.—Where merchandise, designed by the seller and the importers to be distributed by the importers gratuitously as samples, was, for this reason, invoiced at a specially reduced price which the importers knew to be below the foreign market value, its entry at the specially reduced price was not "manifest clerical error" within the meaning of that expression in this paragraph, and additional duty as provided by the paragraph was correctly levied upon the difference between the entered and appraised values. Fougera & Co. v. U. S., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 296.

Excess merchandise.—Where regular-sized packages of merchandise were invoiced to the importers at a special price in consideration of an understanding between the seller and the importers that they were to be distributed by the importers gratuitously as samples, and the importers entered them at the special price instead of the market value, the fact that the importers believed the samples to be smaller than the regular-sized packages did not constitute the case one of excess merchandise within the rule of Downing & Co. v. United States (2 Ct. Cust. Appls., 278; T. D. 32033), since the importers' misapprehension as to the size of the packages did not affect the question of value, and additional duty upon the difference between the entered and appraised values was justly levied under this paragraph. Fougera & Co. v. U. S., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 296.

Value of carton as part of value of handkerchiefs therein.—Handkerchiefs were imported in individual cartons, a number of the cartons being packed in large pasteboard boxes, and a number of the large pasteboard boxes packed in wooden cases. The value of the handkerchiefs alone was stated at entry. The appraiser added the value of the cartons, and the collector imposed the additional duty provided by this paragraph in cases where the appraised exceeds the entered value. Since the handkerchief and the carton were shown to be the unit of trade in the country whence exported, the value of the carton is a part of the value per se of the handkerchief, and the additional duty was justly imposed. U. S. v. Rappolt, (1918) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 21.

"Appraised" and "entered" value as "unit" value.—In this paragraph, levying additional duty in case the appraised exceeds the entered value, the "appraised value" and the "entered value" must be taken to mean the unit value and not the total value. U. S. v. Kuttroff, (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 239.

An importation of 114 casks containing 17,920 pounds net of hydrosulphite of soda was erroneously entered on a pro forma invoice as 104 casks of hydrosulphite of soda containing 19,040 pounds at $1.25 per pound and 10 casks of zinc formosul containing 1,120 pounds at 50 cents per pound. The appraiser returned a value of 62½d. per pound. Since 62½d. per pound at the current rate of exchange exceeds $1.25 per pound by between 1 and 2 per cent, the collector's action in treating the whole importation as having been entered at $1.25 per pound and in assessing additional duty of one per cent under this paragraph, furnished the importer with no just ground for complaint. The fact that the importer's misapprehension as to the content and weight of the importation resulted in his having paid to the collector a greater sum than the duty he really owed does not relieve him of the penalty incurred under the law for undervaluation, since the valuation was the unit value and not the total. U. S. v. Kuttroff, (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 239.

Withdrawal from customs custody, when complete.—Merchandise is not "imported" until it has passed beyond the custody and control of the customs officials and into the custody and control of the importer, his agent or consignee, thereby becoming a part of the body commerce of this country. Five Per Cent Cases, 6 Ct. Cust. App. 291; T. D. 35508. So long as goods remain in the custody and control of the officers of the customs they are to be regarded as in customs custody so as to be affected by any new legislation in relation to the duties that Congress may see fit to adopt. Withdrawal from the custody of the customs and introduction into the body commerce requires payment of duties and the due delivery to and receipt by an importer of an unconditional permit of delivery. Since a permit of delivery has no legal efficacy until signed by the naval officer, withdrawal of bonded merchandise under a permit of delivery dated September 8, 1916, but signed by the naval officer and delivered to the importer September 9, 1916, was not made on September 8. U. S. v. Cronkhite Co., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 129.

Conflicting customs regulation.—This section provides that, if the appraiser shall find a deficiency in imported merchandise, he shall certify it to the collector and an allowance shall be made in estimating the duties. Article 608, Customs Regulations of 1915, provides that this shall be done provided the collector be satisfied that such articles were not in the importation. The proviso is an attempt by the Treasury Department to amend the law, and is of no force. Madeira Embroidery Co. v. U. S., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 140.

Weight given appraiser's report showing shortage.—Where the appraiser reported a shortage, and the collector investigated and decided, without impeaching the appraiser's report for fraud or mistake, that he was not satisfied that there was a shortage, his action in refusing to make an allowance was without warrant of law. Madeira Embroidery Co. v. U. S., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 140.

Vol. II, p. 1062, par. K. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 118.]

Market value.—Within the meaning of the term "market value," in paragraphs K, L, and R, a single actual buyer may be a market. Lloyd Co. v. U. S., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 280.

Books of wall-paper samples, made up to illustrate the stock of wall paper purchased, were imported. These books were paid for by the importer at a price based upon the cost of production. They were not sold by the importer to his customers, but distributed free, their cost being recouped as a part of the overhead expense. It cannot be said that the action of the reappraisal board in refusing to hold them samples of no commercial value and in affirming their appraisal at the price paid for them was, in view of paragraphs K, L, and R, illegal and of no effect as proceeding upon a wrong principle of law. Lloyd Co. v. U. S., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 280.

Vol. II, p. 1064, par. L. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 118.]

"Consigned for sale in the United States."
—The expression in paragraph L, "consigned for sale in the United States," does not have reference only to cases where the consignment was made to an "agent" of the consignor; it includes cases where the consignor in another country shipped the goods to himself in this country. U. S. v. Johnson Co., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 258.

"Such" as equivalent of "identical."—In the language of paragraph L, "the whole-sale price at which such or similar imported merchandise is actually sold or freely offered for sale in usual wholesale quantities in the United States in the open market," the word "such" means identical. The provision does not mean that the inquiry must be confined to the identical merchandise if possible and extended to similar merchandise only in the event of the absence of proof as to the identical merchandise. It means that appraising officers may take into consideration not only sales of the very merchandise imported but also sales of similar merchandise. Since the word "such" means identical, the paragraph cannot be taken to mean that the inquiry as to market value in this country must be as of the time when the exportation was made. U. S. v. Johnson Co., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 258.

Finality of appraisement by Board of Appraisers.—Pineapples were prepared and canned in Bahama by the Johnson Co. and shipped by them to themselves in New York. The merchandise concededly had no market value in Bahama. Appraisement by a board of general appraisers was nullified by a classification board. There was before the appraisement board evidence as to the cost of production and as to the sale price in this country of it and similar merchandise. Of this evidence and the weight to be given it or any part of it the appraisement board were the sole judges. Whatever method of appraisement prescribed by paragraphs K and L, Section III, Tariff Act of 1913, was adopted by them—cost of production, sale price of the identical merchandise, or sale price of similar merchandise—was supported by some substantial evidence. The decision of the Board of United States General Appraisers nullifying their appraisement is reversed. U. S. v. Johnson Co., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 258.

Vol. II, p. 1065, par. M. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 119.]

Decisions by Court of Customs Appeals—Classification board's power over appraisement.—To justify a classification board in declaring null and void an appraisement by three general appraisers on the ground that it was based upon a wrong theory of law, it must appear positively, clearly, and certainly that they did proceed upon such wrong theory. U. S. v. Johnson Co., 7 Ct. Cust. App. 466; T. D. 37050. All appraising officers and boards of appraising officers authorized and directed by the statute to assess and charge the property of the citizen with government dues, being creatures of the statute, their procedure finding warrant only in the words of the statute, are bound in their procedure to follow the statute; and any deviation therefrom is without warrant of law and void. The prescribed mode is the measure of power. U. S. v. Johnson Co., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 258.

Vol. II, p. 1071, par. N. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 120.]

Scope and effect of collector's liquidation.—The collector, not the Secretary of the Treasury, is the liquidating officer, and paragraph N makes the collector's decision final and conclusive unless or until appealed from according to law. This is true, even though the collector's decision may violate the direction of the Secretary. Saji, etc., Co. v. U. S., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 78.

Scope of provision providing for transmission of exhibits to appraisers.—The provision of paragraph N, that "the collector shall transmit the . . . exhibits to the board of nine general appraisers" cannot be construed as authority for a motion originating in this court for an order to the Board of United States General Appraisers directing them to send to this court the official samples of the merchandise, which were not forwarded to the board by the collector but were retained by the appraiser. It cannot be permitted a party to add thus to the record either pleading or evidence not before the trial court. Fougere & Co. v. U. S., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 284.

Thirty days after.—Where merchandise had been withheld from warehouse in bond under a claim of free entry as being for American vessels, the thirty days allowed by paragraph N began to run from the time the collector assessed the merchandise with duty, and not from the time the duty was paid. A protest filed more than thirty days after the assessment and less than thirty days after the payment will not be considered. Kennedy v. U. S., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 49.

Protest containing alternative claims.—A protest may make alternative claims; and one which makes a large number of such claims as to three kinds of wares, each of the paragraphs claimed under bearing some relation to the merchandise, and the protest being sufficiently explicit to direct the attention of the collector to what claims were made, is not subject to motion to dismiss for multifariousness. U. S. v. Willenborg & Co., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 187; U. S. v. Koscherak Bros., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 190.

Variance between allegations in protest and proof.—Under a protest alleging goods to be dutiable under a certain paragraph, the protestant may not prove them to be dutiable at the same rate under another paragraph. U. S.

v. International Forwarding Co., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 144.

Sustaining protest upon claim not made.—A protest cannot be sustained upon a claim which it does not directly or indirectly make. Four protests involving similar merchandise were combined by stipulation. Three of them contained a claim for free entry as a crude drug under paragraph 477, but the one at bar did not. The Board of United States General Appraisers held that the merchandise was entitled to free entry under paragraph 477. In drafting the judgment entry all of the protests were scheduled together as making claim for free entry under paragraph 477. The decision of the board is modified so as to overrule the protest at bar. U. S. v. National Gum, etc., Co., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 250.

Vol. II, p. 1086, par. R. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 122.]

Coverings with merchandise but not on it.—The provision of this paragraph that the value of imported merchandise subject to an ad valorem duty shall include the value of usual and necessary coverings does not include coverings which were with the merchandise but not covering it at the time it came into customs custody. Minneapolis Cold Storage Co. v. U. S., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 225, wherein it appeared that quarters of beef were imported, some covered with an inner covering of cotton and an outer one of burlap and others uncovered at the time the beef came into customs custody. Coverings for the uncovered beef were imported with it and were put on it at the time it was unloaded. It was held that a duty was properly levied upon the coverings which were not on the beef at the time it came into customs custody. Minneapolis Cold Storage Co. v. U. S., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 225.

Vol. II, p. 1090, par. X. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 123.]

"Perishable" defined.—The adjective "perishable," when used as descriptive of commodities, primarily signifies a natural liability to speedy deterioration or decay, as is the case with fruit, fish, and similar articles, rather than the general tendency to deterioration or decay from age or exceptional circumstances which is common to most, if not all, edible articles. It will be given this meaning in paragraph X, and article 600, Customs Regulations 1915 pursuant thereto, prescribing the method of claiming allowance in duty for shortage or nonimportation caused by decay, destruction, or injury to perishable merchandise. The term was employed with reference to the class of merchantable commodities to which a given importation may belong, rather than to the exceptional, perhaps latent, condition of the particular importation when exported. Poole Co. v. U. S., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 271.

"Fruit" as restricted to perishable fruit.—The word "fruit" in paragraph X does not apply to only such fruits as are perishable. Houlder v. United States (4 Ct. Cust. App., 247; T. D. 33480). Olives in brine, which will keep two to three years, and dried figs, which will keep six months to a year, are within its meaning. Any claim for allowance in duty by reason of their shortage or non-importation caused by decay, destruction, or injury must be made according to the customs regulations promulgated pursuant to this paragraph. U. S. v. Mascablades, (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 40.

Weight given official classification of merchandise as nonperishable.—The fact that Reggiano cheese is admitted to the Government warehouses (article 240, Customs Regulations, 1915), from which all "perishable" goods are barred by specific regulations, amounts to a practical official classification of Reggiano cheese as a nonperishable article, and is entitled to great force in an issue as to whether or not it is "perishable" within the meaning of that term in paragraph X, and article 600, Customs Regulations, 1915, pursuant thereto. Poole Co. v. U. S., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 271.

Goods spoiled in transit.—Where part of a shipment has been utterly destroyed and not simply damaged by decay in transit, the case is one of destruction and not of damage. United States v. Pastene (3 Ct. Cust. App., 164; T. D. 32458). In such case the part destroyed is not dutiable, and the importer's claim to that effect may be presented by protest. Poole Co. v. U. S., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 271, wherein it was held that it would be inequitable and presumably not within the intention of Congress to assess duty upon an article which on a voyage to this country and before arrival within the limits of a port of entry had become utterly worthless by reason of casualty, decay, or other natural causes, and which the importer might rightfully abandon and refuse to receive or enter for consumption. Articles thus circumstanced are not in truth within the category of goods, wares, and merchandise imported into the United States, within the meaning of the tariff laws. Poole v. U. S., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 271.

Claim for allowance for spoiled merchandise, how made.—Reggiano cheese was shown to be, when properly cured or seasoned, an article which would keep for a very long time. A particular shipment of it was made so green that part of it spoiled in transit. The importer was not compelled to make his claim for allowance under paragraph X, and article 600, Customs Regulations, 1915, pursuant thereto, which provide for such claims in the case of "perishable" merchandise, but properly presented his claim by protest against the assessment of duty upon the spoiled portion. Poole Co. v. U. S., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 271.

Validity of Treasury regulations.—To same effect as 1919 Supplement annotation, see U. S. v. Regensburg, (S. D. Fla. 1919) 258 Fed. 243.

Vol. II, p. 1118, sec. 29, note.

Antimonial lead as "refined metal"—Antimonial lead, which is a combination of metals obtained from the smelting or refining process, is a "refined metal" within the meaning of section 29 of the Tariff Act of July 24, 1897 (30 Stat. 210), and might be exported and cancellations or credits had upon the warehouse bond in the ratio of the respective metals contained in the imported ore or bullion. (1916) 31 Op. Atty-Gen. 13.

Cancellation on warehouse bonds.—Under this section providing for cancellation on warehouse bonds upon the exportation of ninety per centum of the refined metal produced from the imported bullion, it was incumbent upon the refining company to ascertain, set aside and export the metals in the exact proportions in which they were contained in the bullion; and refined metal, neither derived from the bullion imported nor set aside in the representative proportions of the metal contents of such bullion, cannot constitute any portion of the ninety per centum export required for cancellation on its bond. (1916) 31 Op. Atty-Gen. 29.

Parties to protest.—Ordinarily different parties are not permitted to litigate their diverse claims against a common defendant in a single proceeding, because such procedure would tend to make complications and cause such confusion and delay as would hamper the administration of justice and make impossible the speedy settlement of legal controversies. In customs cases, however, while different importers importing the same kind of merchandise may not have a common interest in the merchandise imported, they frequently do have a common interest in the rulings of the collector affecting the customs status of merchandise of the same kind imported by them. As such rulings are generally the same, the protests against them usually raise the same issue, and that issue may be tried out and finally disposed of in one proceeding with less embarrassment to judicial tribunals and less expense, annoyance, and delay to litigants than if determined in separate proceedings initiated by each importer. Thus the permitting of misjoinder in customs proceedings is designed to achieve the very result aimed at by its prohibition in other proceedings. Such has been the continuous and unquestioned practice before the Board of United States General Appraisers and the United States Court of Customs Appeals practically since their respective organizations. The government's motion to dismiss for misjoinder the petition by two importers for review of decisions by three different boards on five diverse dates overruling 11 different protests involving the same kind of merchandise is denied. Cochran Co. v. U. S., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 172.

Mistake as to destination.—Merchandise came into the port of Vanceboro, Me., from New Brunswick, Canada, en route to Boston, Mass., for shipment to Cuba. The agent of the shipper (who was also the consignee) at Vanceboro, seemingly not understanding that the goods were destined for Cuba, entered them for consumption, and duty was paid. The entry was one which the broker had authority to make, and it was the entry he intended to make. Repayment of the duty may not be had. U. S. v. Maine Cent. R. Co., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 192.

Vol. II, p. 1154, par. O. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 132.]

Departmental construction of drawback provision as controlling on Supreme Court.—The Supreme Court will follow the long-standing ruling of the Treasury Department under which the drawback provided for by the Act of August 27, 1894, § 22, upon the exportation of articles manufactured from imported dutiable materials, to be "equal in amount to the duties paid on the materials used," less one per cent, is computed, where linseed oil and oil cake have both been manufactured from imported linseed paying a specific duty and the oil cake has been exported, upon the basis of the value of the two products, and not in proportion to their respective weights. National Lead Co. v. U. S., (1920) 252 U. S. 140, 40 S. Ct. 237, 64 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1918) 53 Ct. Cl. 635.

Diamond necklace.—Drawback should be allowed upon the exportation of a certain diamond necklace manufactured in the United States with the use of twenty-two imported diamonds. (1917) 31 Op. Atty.-Gen. 92.

Cigarettes shipped abroad for destruction as entitled to drawback provision.—A drawback is not allowable under this paragraph on cigarettes manufactured in the United States from imported Turkish tobacco for domestic trade and which have been recalled from domestic trade, after having become deteriorated or unsalable, and then shipped abroad, not for use in the commerce of any foreign country, but for the purpose of destruction.

The sending of goods out of this country merely for the purpose of destruction does not constitute an "exportation" within the intent of the drawback provision of the statute in question. (1916) 31 Op. Atty.-Gen. 1.

Vol. II, p. 1161, sec. 3061. [First ed., vol. II, p. 742.]

Liability of collector for assault in stopping vehicle for search.—A deputy collector of the United States customs service may not be prosecuted in a state court for felonious assault because he fired a shot at an automobile in order to intimidate the occupants and cause them to stop the automobile so that it could be searched in accordance with the provisions of this section. Ex p. Beach, (S. D. Cal. 1919) 259 Fed. 956.

Vol. II, p. 1161, sec. 3062. [First ed., vol. II, p. 743.]

Transportation of merchandise prohibited from importation.—This section has no application to vehicles used to transport merchandise which cannot be entered in the custom house at all. Thus, an automobile used to bring intoxicating liquors into the United States may not be forfeited under this section, since the importation of such liquors is prohibited by the Act of Aug. 10, 1917, ch. 53, § 15 (1918 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. 188). U. S. v. One Ford Automobile, etc., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 262 Fed. 374. The court said: "By the act of August 10, 1917, it is an offense to import distilled spirits, and the act prescribes a new and specific punishment for its violation. It was a war measure. The customs law statutes referred to do not make it a crime to bring in distilled spirits into the United States from the Dominion of Canada, and it was not until August 10, 1917, that such action constituted a breach of the criminal law. This act makes no reference to any other statute, and if a forfeiture be granted now of the automobile of the defendant in error, it would be imposing added punishment not provided for in the statute. Indeed, it would be a double punishment for the commission of one offense, and this is not permissible. The customs laws referred to have for their purpose and intention a prevention of smuggling merchandise into the United States. It was intended to provide customs duties to be paid for the importations. After August 10, 1917, Tourville could not bring distilled liquors into the United States, irrespective of the customs law."

Failure to enter free goods.—To same effect as original annotation, see U. S. v. Twenty-Five Pictures, (S. D. N. Y. 1919) 260 Fed. 851.

Failure to present certified invoice.—In U. S. v. Twenty-Five Pictures, (S. D. N. Y. 1919) 260 Fed. 861, an importer failed to present a certified consular invoice for certain oil paintings imported by him as required by section 3E of the Tariff Act of Oct. 3, 1916, ch. 16 (2 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 1012). In holding that such failure was sufficient to show intent on the part of the importer to violate the law and to sustain a forfeiture, the court said:

"The question remains whether the words of section 3082, supra, 'fraudulently or knowingly' make it necessary to show intent to violate the law on the part of the claimant, or his agent, in order to establish a cause of forfeiture under the fourth count.

"It was held by Judge Ray in the Case of Fifty Waltham Watch Movements (D. C.) 139 ed. 291, and by the Supreme Court of Arizona, in Six Parcels of Placer Gold v. United States, 8 Ariz. 389, 76 Pac. 473, that a failure to comply with the customs provisions as to entry would not be excused in a proceeding to forfeit merchandise merely because the goods were not in fact dutiable. By both courts it was apparently thought that an intention to defraud the United States of customs revenues was not a necessary ingredient of the crime covered by section 3082. See, also, United States v. McKim, Fed. Cas. 15,693. I am inclined to think that proof of purpose to do the forbidden act is enough to satisfy the requirements of the provisions of section 3082. But if the addition of the word 'fraudulently' (though in the disjunctive) requires proof of an intention to defraud the government, the requisite fraud need not consist of deprivation of customs revenues. The collation of information in order to pass upon the classification of merchandise, and the question often most difficult as to whether it is dutiable, and, if so, just what duty is imposed, is an important function of the revenue department of the government. Without such information, the Customs Act cannot really be enforced or the revenues collected.

"By the failure of the importer to comply with section 3 E and produce a consular invoice, any part of the shipment that was not original paintings or replicas or works of art over 100 years old apparently escaped duty, and the antiquities also escaped duty because the importer did not furnish satisfactory proof of age. Indeed, in the case of all this merchandise, any exemption and classification was dependent on proof. To deprive the United States of the information it was entitled to, and of the opportunity for investigation and classification afforded to it by the express provisions of section 3 E, was to defraud the United States. In Haas v. Henkel, 216 U. S. 462, 30 Sup. Ct. 249, 54 L. Ed. 569, 17 Ann. Cas. 1112, which was an indictment for a conspiracy to defraud the United States by bringing an employee of the Department of Agriculture to furnish secret information, the Supreme Court says that it is enough to defraud the government if an act is done calculated to obstruct or impair its efficiency and destroy the value of its operations and reports as fair, impartial, and reasonably accurate. See, also, Stager v. United States, 233 Fed. at page 511, 147 C. C. A. 396. It seems clear from the conduct of the importer that he avoided submitting the merchandise to the investigation which the production of a proper consular invoice and a regular entry would have involved, and that he did this deliberately and clandestinely because he wished to take no chances of paying duty."

Goods imported by a customs official in violation of R. S. sec. 2638 are imported "contrary to law" and subject to forfeiture under this section. In re 200 7/12 Dozen Wool Hose, etc., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1920) 263 Fed. 376.

Stolen goods.—This section is applicable to the receipt of a coil of rope stolen and brought ashore by a sailor from a vessel from a foreign port. Goldman v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1920) 263 Fed. 340. The court said: "We think section 3082 was not intended to be limited to cases of smuggling in the sense of introducing dutiable merchandise without paying and with the intent to avoid paying the duty on it. The proper administration of the custom laws requires that it be given a wider scope. It is important, in order to enforce the collection of duties, to establish many regulations relating to the introduction of merchandise into the country, other than the ultimate one of requiring the payment of duties. These are auxiliary regulations and can only be enforced by the imposition of penalties and punishment for their infraction. It is necessary not only to establish them, but to make disobedience of them criminal. This Congress accomplished through the enactment of section 3082, the effect of which, as we construe it, is to punish criminally and by forfeiture the bringing into the United States of any merchandise, whether dutiable or nondutiable, contrary to law, and the receiving and buying of it knowing it to have been brought in contrary to law. "Contrary to law" we construe to mean to be in violation of any regulation, relating to its introduction, established by law (other than section 3082 itself) and made punishable when disobeyed. Keck v. U. S., 172 U. S. 434-437, 19 Sup. Ct. 254, 43 L. Ed. 505; One Pearl Chain v. U. S., 123 Fed. 371, 59 C. C. A. 499; Estes v. U. S., 227 Fed. 818, 142 C. C. A. 342.

"It is further urged by the defendant that the rope was not 'merchandise' within the meaning of section 2872. It may be conceded that it was originally part of the ship's tackle, and that so long as it remained so it could not be merchandise, nor require a permit for its landing. U. S. v. A Chain Cable, 25 Fed. Cas. 391, No. 14,776; The Gertrude, 10 Fed. Cas. 265, No. 5,370. It was not therefore subject to forfeiture, at least as against the ship's owner. However, when the sailors from whom the defendant received it stole it from the ship by paying it out over the ship's side into a skiff with the intent to sell it when landed, it ceased to be a part of the ship's tackle as to them and as to their guilty receiver and forthwith became merchandise. It was being landed by the sailors for the purpose of sale, and the fact that they acquired possession of it by theft does not as to them and their guilty receiver prevent this conclusion."

Concealment by agent.—Where an agent, contrary to the orders of his principal, conceals and fails to declare merchandise brought by him into this country, the principal is bound by the acts of the agent, and the merchandise is subject to forfeiture. U. S. v. One-Strand Pearl Necklace, (S. D. N. Y. 1919) 260 Fed. 671.

Indictment—description of goods.—It is not necessary to describe the smuggled merchandise by the name under which it is described in the tariff schedule. U. S. v. Powers, (W. D. Wash. 1920) 263 Fed. 724, holding a description of the property as "four bottles of whiskey" to be sufficient.

"When imported."—The expression "when imported," in this section, should be read as meaning "which are imported," and should be construed as having no purpose to change the time or condition under which a collection of revenue is to be had. Vandegrift & Co. v. U. S., (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 112.

"Flavors."—Synthetic coumarin, shown to be used as a material in the manufacture of flavoring extracts, and not as a flavor itself, is not classifiable under the provision for "flavors," in Group III, of this section. U. S. v. Lehn, (1919) 9 U. S. Cust. App. 309.

Furnishing information to War Trade Board.—The United States Tariff Commission is not prohibited from placing in the hands of the War Trade Board for appropriate use trade secrets which have come into the possession of the commission in the course of the exercise of its official functions. The Tariff Commission should furnish such information to the War Trade Board only after due consideration of the use designed to be made of it, and if, as a result of its inquiry, the commission has any doubt as to whether the proposed use of such information would be inimical to the purpose of the statutory inhibition against divulging trade secrets, it would be entirely within the scope of its sound discretion to decline to disclose it. EMINENT DOMAIN

1918 Supp., p. 166. [Lands for military purposes, etc.]

Necessity of condemnation—Review by courts.—The question of the necessity of a condemnation under this section rests with the Secretary of War and his action is not reviewable by any court. U. S. v. Forbes, (M. D. Ala. 1919) 259 Fed. 585. In passing upon these questions, the court said:

"There appears to be a clear distinction between the adjudged cases brought under acts of the state legislature by railroad companies, waterworks companies, and the like, and those adjudged cases where the United States has sought to condemn, under Act of Congress, lands for public use.

"In the first class of cases the necessity for the condemnation seems to be a question for judicial determination. In the other class, to which class the case we are now trying belongs, the question of the necessity for the condemnation is not left to judicial determination, for this power was bestowed by Congress on the Secretary of War, the Secretary of the Treasury, or Secretary of the Interior, as the case may be; and the weight of authority sustains the proposition that the action of the official to whom this duty and discretion is delegated by Congress is not reviewable by any court. . . . It is also competent to delegate the authority to decide upon the necessity for its taking. Cooley, Const. Lim. (5th ed.) 668-670. As was said in the Narragansett Case [145 Fed. 654]: 'While the taking of property must always be limited to the necessity of the case, and consequently no more can be appropriated in any instance than the proper tribunal shall adjudge to be needed for the particular use for which the appropriation is made, the Secretary of War is authorized by Congress to make the judgment as to what land is needed.'

"Again, in the case of the United States v. Burley (C. C.) 172 Fed. 615, in a proceeding by the United States to condemn land for reservoir purposes, under the Irrigation Act, Act of Congress June 17, 1902 c. 1093 32 Stat. 388, the court held that 'Whether a more feasible plan of irrigation than the one adopted might be devised, or some other site selected for the reservoir, is immaterial; the determination of the proper government authorities being conclusive.' (1st headnote.)

"And in the case of the United States v. O'Neill (D. C.) 198 Fed. 677, where the power conferred upon the Secretary of the Interior by the Reclamation Act (Irrigation Act), Act of Congress June 17, 1902, was to condemn lands necessary for use in constructing irrigation works, the court said: ' . . . It must be borne in mind that the petitioners here are not exercising in this proceeding the state's power, and therefore are not bound by the limitations and restrictions placed on that power; but they are exerting their own sovereign right, and the only restriction on the exercise of that right is that just compensation shall be made for private property taken for public use. Fifth Amendt. Const. U. S.'

"The court also declared: 'The question of necessity is political, and must be determined by Congress. "When the use is public, the necessity or expedience of appropriating any particular property is not a subject of judicial cognizance."' Citing Boom Co. v. Patterson, 98 U. S. 403, 406, 25 L. Ed. 206; U. S. v. Jones, 109 U. S. 513, 518, 519, 3 Sup. Ct. 346, 27 L. Ed. 1015. And in the O'Neill Case, supra, it was held that "The question of necessity is not one of a judicial character, but rather one for determination by the lawmaking branch of the government." Backus v. Depot Co., 169 U. S. 567, 568, 18 Sup. Ct. 445, 450, 42 L. Ed. 853. The legislative branch may delegate the determination of the question of necessity. The Reclamation Act imposes that duty on the Secretary of the Interior. . . . On the facts here presented, the conclusion is reached that the only inquiry for determination in limine is whether the contemplated purpose to which the lands sought to be condemned are to be devoted to is a public use.'

"And quoting from the case of Shoemaker v. United States, 147 U. S. 282, 13 Sup. Ct. 361, 37 L. Ed. 170, the court continued: 'If this question is decided in the affirmative, the judicial function is exhausted.'

"Other decisions of the federal courts, including the Supreme Court, uphold these principles.

"This court, therefore, cannot review the discretion of the Secretary of War in causing this proceeding to be instituted through the duly authorized and responsible official of the government, the United States Attorney for this district, or in maintaining the suit after he has caused it to be brought. If he had the undoubted authority and discretion to cause the condemnation proceedings to be instituted, then, for the same reason, or perhaps for stronger reason, he has the right to prosecute and maintain the suit to a conclusion. . . . It would also appear to be obvious that where possession of the property has been taken, and condemnation proceedings have been instituted, and expensive improvements erected, it is not for a defendant, or a judge or court, to determine as to whether the property will be used by the Secretary of War permanently, temporarily, or for the purpose for which the condemnation proceedings were brought.

"If the use be a public one — and such it is here — whether the necessity exists for the taking, and the extent of the taking, is exclusively within the province of Congress to determine, and Congress has, under this act, vested this authority, not in a court or a jury, but in the Secretary of War. Kaw Valley Drainage Dist. v. Metropolitan Water Co., 186 Fed. 315, 319, 108 C. C. A. 393. The Secretary of War has exercised the discretionary power conferred upon him by law, and I do not think that Mr. Forbes can open this question at any stage of the proceeding; and, certainly, he cannot now raise such issues after the judgment of the court ordering the lands condemned under the prayer of the petition, which judgment of the court was not only not objected to at the time, but was acquiesced in by the defendant until after the award was made by the commissioners.

"The status of this case, and the rights of the parties, were fixed at the time the petition for condemnation was granted, and the further operation of the law invoked to ascertain the just compensation to be awarded to the owner. . . . And again, after the Secretary of War has exercised the authority vested in him to determine that there is a necessity to condemn the fee, the condemnation proceedings have been resorted to, an award made, and an appeal from the award is taken to a jury, it is not within the province of the court to say what shall be done with the land or to what use it shall be put. This is reserved to the Congress, which, of course, can act, or authorize the Secretary of War to act."

Jurisdiction of federal courts over proceedings under Act.—Condemnation proceedings under this Act may be instituted in the District Court for the district where the land is situated, since the Act of August 1, 1888, ch. 728 (8 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 1111) in terms provides "that such proceedings instituted by the Secretary of the Treasury or any other officer of the government, seeking to acquire property for the United States by condemnation, or under judicial process, may be instituted whenever it is necessary or advantageous to the government so to do, and that the United States District Courts of the district where the land lies shall have jurisdiction of such proceedings." In re Military Training Camp, (E. D. Va. 1919) 260 Fed. 986.

Questions to be determined.—Under this Act the judicial question to be determined is whether the use for which it is proposed to take the property sought to be condemned, is a public one or not. When that is done, the judicial function is exhausted, and the extent to which property may be taken, or just how it will be paid for, rests in the legislative discretion; the court, however, to see that just compensation is made before the property is taken. In re Military Training Camp, (E. D. Va. 1919) 260 Fed. 986.

Objections to granting of petition first made on appeal.—Where the defendant in a condemnation proceeding under this section makes no objection to the granting of the petition for condemnation, he may not raise the objection for the first time in the appellate court. U. S. v. Forbes, (M. D. Ala.) 1919) 259 Fed. 585, wherein it was said:

"It is also urged that the Act of Congress (Act of July 2, 1917) authorizing this and the like condemnation proceedings requires them to 'be prosecuted in accordance with the laws relating to suits for the condemnation of property of the states wherein the proceedings may be instituted.' And it was further contended that section 914, R. S. [vol. IV, Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 21], known as the Conformity Statute, is applicable here.

"It is apparent, of course, from an examination of the Alabama statutes governing condemnation proceedings (Code Ala. 1907, §§ 3860-3887) that the practice governing the Alabama courts cannot be followed in every particular by this court.

"The books contain many cases where the United States District and Circuit Courts have not conformed to the practice, pleadings, and forms and modes of proceeding existing at the time in like causes in the courts of record of the state within which such circuit or district courts are held. See Nudd v. Burrows, 91 U. S. 426, 23 L. Ed. 286; United States v. Fidelity Co., 236 U. S. 512, 35 Sup. Ct. 298, 59 L. Ed. 696; St. Clair v. United States, 154 U. S. 134, 14 Sup. Ct.

1002, 38 L. Ed. 936; In re Chateaugay Iron Co., 128 U. S. 544, 9 Sup. Ct. 150, 32 L. Ed. 508; McDonald v. Pless, 238 U. S. 264, 35 Sup. Ct. 783, 59 L. Ed. 1300; Beers v. Hauffman, 34 U. S. (9 Pet. 329, 9 L. Ed. 145; Insurance Co. v. Morse, 20 Wall. 445, 22 L. Ed. 365; Parsons v. Bedford, 3 Pet. 433, 7 L. Ed. 732; Kennon v. Gilmer, 131 U. S. 24, 9 Sup. Ct. 696, 33 L. Ed. 110; Brackenn v. Union Pacific Ry. Co., 56 Fed. 447, 5 C. C. A. 548; Shepard v. Adams, 168 U. S. 625, 18 Sup. Ct. 214, 42 L. Ed. 602; Lamaster v. Keller, 123 U. S. 389, 8 Sup. Ct. 197, 31 L. Ed. 238. In the trial of this case in this court the condemnation procedure prescribed by the Alabama statutes cannot be followed in every particular. In the first instance, under section 3860, Code Ala. 1907, the application must be made to the court of probate of the county in which the lands are situated, and if the petition is granted, then, under section 3869, the judge of probate must appoint commissioners, who must assess the damages and compensation. Section 3871. The commissioners are required by section 3874, after hearing all the evidence, to make a report in writing to the court stating the amount of damages and the compensation ascertained and assessed by them. Under the provisions of section 3875, any party may appeal from the order of condemnation to the circuit court, the superior tribunal, where the matter of damages must be submitted to a jury; and upon the hearing of such appeal, the statute (Code of Alabama 1907, § 3875) provides that the trial 'shall be de novo.' Other sections of this Alabama law provide for an appeal to the Supreme Court of the state, etc.

"In the instant case the petition for condemnation was filed in this court, and the court heard the petition without objection—that is to say, no question of the jurisdiction of the court was made, and no question of the authority of the Secretary of War to cause these proceedings to be instituted was raised; and the court, after a full and fair hearing, the defendant being present by his attorney, granted the prayer of the petition for condemnation, and appointed commissioners to assess the damages, and gave these commissioners appropriate written instructions as to their duties. . . .

"I think the defendant's attorneys would have the court give too broad a meaning to the words, 'on such appeal (to the circuit court and to a jury) the trial shall be de novo.' Section 3875, Code Ala. 1907. There are similar statutes of other states, where it is provided that the case on appeal shall be tried 'anew,' or a 'new trial had,' or the trial 'shall be de novo.' And some of the courts in defining these terms have given necessary limitations to these terms, or restricted the scope of their meaning, in order that the statute may be workable and brought into harmony with common sense and the doing of justice in the particular case.

"In the case of Ea parte Morales, 53 S. W. 107, 108, where the defendant sought to file new pleas, the Court of Appeals of Texas, construing the Texas statute providing for a trial de novo in the county court where the case was appealed from the justice of peace said: 'These articles certainly require that the trial shall be de novo upon the original papers. The term "de novo" means "anew"; a second time. . . . In civil cases this term has been construed to mean that a trial de novo, where an appeal is taken from a judgment of a justice court to the county court, is a trial upon the original papers, and upon the same issues had in the court below.' See Ostrom v. Tarver (Tex. Civ. App.) 29 S. W. 69.

"It does not seem that the defendant Forbes can here, on appeal from the award of the commissioners and for the first time, file pleas denying the right to condemn, or the necessity to condemn, when the matter has already been decided by the court at a former hearing of the cause, when he was present by his attorneys, and when and where he made no objection to the granting of the petition for condemnation. To allow him to do this would be to approve his speculation upon the award of the commissioners."

Promulgation by President of regulation affecting surgeons which creates deficiency in pay fund.—The President has authority to promulgate the amended regulation 47 of the Public Health Service, which gives passed assistant surgeons a right to promotion to any vacancy in the grade of surgeon, whether a vacancy exists or not, after 12 years' service and passing an examination, provided they are appointed by the President, with the advice and consent of the Senate; and the fact that the amended regulation will or will not have an effect to create or increase a deficiency in the pay fund appears to bear upon its wisdom as an administrative measure and not upon its legality. Miss. 1919) 260 Fed. 438, it was held that depositions of witnesses absent from the state, taken on such short notice that the defendants were precluded from filing cross-interrogatories to accompany the commission, were inadmissible because of lack of reasonable notice required by this section and because of the failure to give ten days' notice as required by the state statute.

Determination of necessity for dedimus.—The only requirement of this section for the issuance of a commission is that it be necessary "in order to prevent a failure or delay of justice." The determination of this question is for the court issuing the commission and cannot be collaterally attacked in another federal court. Levinstein v. Du Pont De Nemours, (D. C. Del. 1919) 258 Fed. 662.

Vol. III, p. 193, sec. 868. [First ed., vol. III, p. 23.]

Refusal to testify before commissioner as contempt.—In Levinstein v. Du Pont De Nemours, (D. C. Del. 1919) 258 Fed. 662, a witness was held guilty of contempt in refusing to testify before a commissioner appointed under R. S. sec. 906 (3 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 189). The court said: "The witness last asserts as a defense a disclaimer of intentional disrespect or design to embarrass the due administration of justice. Such denial may be considered as purging the contempt, if there be any real justification for the act constituting the contempt. But the question whether a certain act is or is not a contempt does not depend upon whether there is present an actual intent to embarrass the due administration of justice, but may be determined from the nature of the act and by the presence or absence of any sound and substantial reason for its occurrence. No sound reason has been shown by the witness in this case for his refusal to testify. But the absence of an actual intent may properly be taken into account when fixing the punishment.

"The case presented by the foregoing facts is radically different from a case certified for the refusal of a witness to answer questions upon the ground of personal privilege, or where it clearly or affirmatively appears that the evidence sought cannot possibly be competent, material or relevant, and that it would be an abuse of the process of the court to compel its production.

"The subpoena issued by the clerk was not only a subpoena requiring the production of certain books and papers, but was also a subpoena requiring the witness to appear and testify. Either of these objects may be enforced without the other. Wilson v. United States, 221 U. S. 361, 373, 31 Sup. Ct. 538, 55 L. Ed. 771, Ann. Cas. 1912D 558. The rule issued in this case is to show cause why the witness should not be adjudged guilty of contempt, not for his failure to produce the books called for by the subpoena, but solely because he declined to be sworn and to testify. It is immaterial to a decision in this proceeding whether or not the command to produce the books was rightfully inserted in the subpoena. . . .

"It appears from the foregoing that the commission in question was issued by a court of the United States for taking the testimony of a witness named therein at a place within this district. Further, that the clerk of this court did on the application of the plaintiff issue a subpoena for the witness Lammot Du Pont commanding him to appear and to testify before the commissioner named in the commission at a time and place stated in the subpoena. And it also appears that the witness, after being duly served with such subpoena refused to testify, not being privileged from giving testimony, and such refusal is not only proven to the satisfaction of the court, but is admitted. From this it unavoidably follows that the witness must be adjudged in contempt, and the rule made absolute."

Order directing service of process to aid foreign tribunal.—While a federal court has power to execute letters rogatory, it will not by order direct the service of process to aid a foreign tribunal to acquire jurisdiction over a party within the United States. In re Letters Rogatory, etc., (S. D. N. Y. 1919) 261 Fed. 652, wherein Hand, J., said: "Letters rogatory have been so long familiar to our courts, and so exclusively limited by understanding and in practice to proceedings in the nature of commissions to take depositions of witnesses at the request of a foreign court, that I should hardly feel inclined to assume such a novel jurisdiction as is proposed without statutory authority, even if I regarded the case as one where, as a matter of sound policy, aid should be given to the foreign tribunal."

Letters and carbon copies of letters, introduced in evidence at a naval court-martial and required by article 34 of the Articles for the Government of the Navy (1 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 432) to be kept on file in the Navy Department, are within the scope of this section, and hence, copies of them authenticated under the seal of the department are as admissible in evidence as the originals. Cohn v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 258 Fed. 355, 169 C. C. A. 371. With reference to the scope of this section, the court said:

"In Block v. United States, 7 Ct. Cl. 406, 413, the statutory provision above referred to was considered, and the court declared that—

"The words 'documents and papers,' used in the several acts of Congress, cannot be held to mean every document or paper on file in the Department, but such only as were made by an officer or agent of the government in the course of the discharge of his official duty. Any other rule of interpretation would defeat the reason on which all public writings are admissible as evidence, i. e., that they have been made by authorized and accredited agents, appointed for the purpose, and that the subject-matter of such writings is of a public nature.

"Official documents, duly certified, need no further proof; but other documents, so certified, do not, by the mere fact of certification, become so authenticated as to entitle them to be received as evidence if they are objected to; but the originals must be produced and proved according to the course of the common law."

"But if the 'originals' above referred to happen themselves to be on file in one of the departments, there must be power in the courts to compel their production when needed in a judicial proceeding, or else transcripts or copies of them certified under the seal of the department must be admissible in evidence. And if the statute applies only to such writings as 'were made by an officer or agent of the government in the course of the discharge of his official duty,' then, of course, it has no application to letters by this defendant to the Chief Yeoman of the battleship

Arkansas, although it would extend to any letters written by the latter to the defendant or to the defendant's father. We are not inclined to put so narrow a construction upon the statute, and we can see no substantial reason for thinking that copies of such letters as are on file in the record of the proceedings of the court-martial, and which are authenticated by the Department of the Navy as provided in the act, may not be introduced in evidence at the trial of the defendant. The statute authorizes the introduction in evidence of copies of any documents or papers which are required by law to be kept on file in the departments, provided such copies are authenticated under the seal of the department in which the document is kept. It is the opinion of the majority of this court that the statute was intended to apply at least to any document or paper which is by law required to be filed and kept on file in any of the Executive Departments of the government. A document or paper which is required to be so filed and kept on file is in the opinion of the majority of the court an official document as much so as one which is written or published by an officer in his official character or in the performance of an official duty. The word 'official' is defined in the New Standard Dictionary as follows:

"1. Of or pertaining to an office or public trust; as official duties.

"2. Derived from the proper office or officer, or from the proper authority; authoritative; as, an official report."

"A paper which must be kept on file in a designated office and which cannot be removed therefrom, pertains to that office, and so becomes official. And we are unable to see why the statute is not as applicable to that class of official papers as well as to the other class. The one class is as much within the letter of the statute as is the other, and it is also as much within the reason and the spirit of the statute."

Memorandum of decision as evidence of judgment.—A memorandum of decision by a judge for the information of the clerk whose duty it is forthwith to make an entry of judgment is but a direction to enter judgment as distinguished from a judgment and is an action on the judgment brought in a state other than that in which it was rendered; such memorandum of decision is not admissible as proof of the judgment. Bruce v. Ackroyd, (Conn. 1920) 110 Atl. 835.

Full faith and credit—Evidence of judgment roll and jurisdictional facts.—In an action on a judgment of a sister state the introduction of the judgment duly authenticated as required by this section is sufficient to sustain the plaintiff's case if the defendant offered no evidence; in other words such introduction makes a prima facie case. It is not necessary to introduce the judgment roll or offer proof of jurisdictional facts. Lang v. Lang, (S. D. 1919) 173 N. W. 443.

Sufficiency of record as establishing judgment.—"There can be no doubt but that any state may determine for itself what are the essentials of a judgment of record in its own courts. If the record discloses such essentials as to entitle it to recognition as a judgment in a domestic court, it is, under the United States Constitution and the statute, entitled to the same recognition in the courts of other states. Bank of North America v. Wheeler, 28 Conn. 433, 73 Am. Dec. 683. Conversely, it must follow that if the domestic courts would not recognize the record as establishing a judgment, it cannot be given that effect in any other state. The law of the state in which the judgment is rendered governs, and not the law of the other state in which the record is sought to be used to establish the fact of a judgment in the original jurisdiction." Bruce v. Ackroyd, (Conn. 1920) 110 Atl. 835.

EXECUTION

Vol. III, p. 243, sec. 3. [First ed., vol. III, p. 54.]

"For at least four weeks."—To same effect as original annotation see Walker v. Stuart, (D. C. Md. 1919) 261 Fed. 427, holding that there was not a compliance with the statute where the first publication was only 23 days before the date of sale.

"If the respondent can recover, under the guaranty clause in the contract, more than the prices fixed by the Federal Food Administration, the law under which such prices were so fixed would be nullified. The purpose of the Food Control Act, as applied to the subject-matter of the contract here in controversy, was to insure fishermen a reasonable price for the fish they caught, enable the cannery men to secure an adequate supply of fish for canning purposes at such a reasonable price as would enable them to sell the same at a reasonable price to the purchasing public and make a fair profit. If the act could be avoided by contracts such as the one here in question, its provisions would be largely defeated. To hold that this contract was one of employment, and therefore not subject to the regulations of the Federal Food Administration, would be to put a premium upon subterfuge. While the Food Control Act remains in force and effect, its provisions must be held controlling, and that contracts made in violation thereof are unenforceable."

Sugar refiners' agreement with Food Administration as violating Sherman Antitrust Act.—A certain agreement negotiated by the United States Food Administration with the leading refiners of sugar in the United States which provides that until December 31, 1919, the refiners should purchase their entire requirements of raw sugar from the United States Sugar Equalization Board, Inc. (an agency of the Food Administration), and that during such period the refiners shall observe a fixed maximum price on all sugar manufactured by them, was authorized by the Food Control Act and was not prohibited by the Sherman Antitrust Act. Punishment for making unreasonable rates.—In U. S. v. Mossew, (N. D. N. Y. 1919) 261 Fed. 999, it appeared that the defendant was indicted for a violation of this section in making unreasonable rates and charges for a necessary. He pleaded guilty and was fined five hundred dollars. In granting a writ of error on the ground that this Act provided no punishment for such an offense, the court said:

"While by section 4 it is declared to be unlawful to make any unjust or unreasonable rate or charge in handling or dealing in necessities, it is impossible to find in the act any provision for the punishment of this particular act so made unlawful.

"Penalties and punishments are denounced by the act for the doing of certain acts by this section made unlawful as well as for other acts forbidden by other sections of the act, but no penalty is prescribed for doing other of the acts made unlawful by this section.

"There is no general provision in the act denouncing a penalty or punishment for a violation of these provisions where no specific penalty or punishment is provided. The result is that, while it is made 'unlawful' to make an unreasonable and unjust charge for a necessary, no penalty or punishment is expressly denounced or prescribed for the doing of such unlawful act, and made unlawful by a valid statute. . . . In the instant case Congress has defined the act of making an excessive and an unreasonable charge for a necessary by any dealer therein an offense against the law of the United States, and hence the act is denounced as a criminal offense, in that it is declared to be unlawful. The District Courts are given general original power and jurisdiction to try all indictments for crimes committed against the United States. Section 24, Judicial Code (Act March 3, 1911, c. 231, 36 Stat. 1091). Hence we have a law making the act unlawful and a general law giving to the United States District Court jurisdiction to try and determine the case, but we have in the act itself no penalty or punishment denounced or prescribed for the doing of the unlawful act. By section 4 of the act of Congress referred to, the doing of each of more than half a dozen independent acts is made unlawful; but the act, in no part or section of it, prescribes a penalty or punishment for the commission of several of these unlawful acts. The omission seems to have been deliberate and intentional.

"I think it doubtful whether the statute makes it a crime or misdemeanor to commit the act charged in the indictment against Mossew; no punishment for the commission of such act being denounced or prescribed, even though the commission of such act is declared to be unlawful. 1 Bouvier (14th ed.) defines a 'crime' as 'an act committed or omitted in violation of a public law forbidding or commanding it.' But 1 Bishop's Criminal Law, § 43, gives this definition: 'A wrong which the government notices as injurious to the public and punishes in what is called a criminal proceeding in its own name.'

"However, in 12 Cyc. 142, it is said:

"It has been held in some of the cases that, where an act is a crime solely by statute and no penalty is prescribed in the statute, an indictment will be quashed, or judgment arrested"—citing Curry v. Dist. of Columbia, 14 App. D. C. 423; Cribb v. State, 9 Fla. 409; Gibson v. State, 38 Ga. 571; Rosenbaum v. State, 4 Ind. 599.

"Also it is said (same page):

"Other courts have held that where a statute prohibits any matter of public grievance or commands a matter of public convenience, although no penalty is prescribed for disobeying its prohibitions or commands an indictment will be sustained and the offense punished by a fine"—citing State v. Fletcher, 5 N. H. 257; Keller v. State, 11 Md. 525, 69 Am. Dec. 226; People v. Shea, 3 Parker's Cr. Rep. (N. Y.) 562; United States v. O'Connor, (D. C.) 31 Fed. 449; 2 Hawkins, P. C. c. 25, § 4; Russell on Crimes, 40; People v. Long Island R. Co., 134 N. Y. 506, 31 N. E. 873.

"In United States v. O'Connor, supra, the court, by Thayer, J., said:

"At the beginning of the inquiry it may be further conceded that no statute of this state or of the United States, in so many words, forbids the writing of names in the registration book in the manner charged to have been done by the defendant, or imposes a penalty for so doing. The fact, however, that no penalty has been imposed is unimportant, if the act in question has been in effect prohibited, as an act which is prohibited by law is none the less unlawful, although no penalty is denounced."

"This decision in United States District Court was rendered in 1887, and I cannot find that it has ever been cited or referred to.

"In New York this subject is fully covered by section 1937 of the Penal Law (Consol. Laws, c. 40), which declares:

"A person convicted of a crime declared to be a misdemeanor, for which no other punishment is specially prescribed by this chapter, or by any other statutory provision in force at the time of the conviction and sentence, is punishable by imprisonment in a penitentiary, or county jail, for not more than one year, or by a fine of not more than five hundred dollars, or by both."

"The same provision, except as to penalty which is greater, is made as to felonies by section 1935. Diligent search fails to find any similar provision in the statutes of the United States, or any general provision authorizing punishment for offenses against the law where no provision for punishment is made in the act creating them.

"In this case, on the imposition of the fine of $500 by the court after plea of guilty, the defendant paid the fine and made no motion in arrest of judgment, nor did the defendant move at that term, nor has he moved at any subsequent time or term, to set aside or quash the indictment, or set aside or vacate the conviction. The plea of guilty was entered, and the fine imposed and paid, at the June term of this court held at Binghamton. That term ended October 7th, when the October term of this court commenced. The October term expired December 2d, when the December term commenced. That term has not expired.

"The defendant now applies for a writ of error, and I assume that it is my duty to grant same, and therefore the writ is granted and signed."

Manner of serving process on United States.—In the suit against the United States authorized by this section, the petition should be served on both the district attorney and the Attorney-General. National Casket Co. v. U. S., (S. D. N. Y. 1920) 263 Fed. 246, wherein it was said:

"It seems to me that in this dilemma the analogy of sections 5 and 6 of chapter 359 of the Laws of 1887 should be adopted, and that the proper procedure is to file and serve petitions as therein required. There is, it is true, force in the assertion of the United States that the difference of expression between section 10 and sections 12, 16, and 25 might indicate a difference in intent. Obviously it does to some extent, because the jurisdiction of this court extends to 'all such controversies,' regardless of their amount. Moreover, it is a little perplexing to learn that the original form of section 10 conformed to that of the later sections and that the change was deliberately made in the Senate. Nevertheless, some solution must be found, or the purpose of Congress will miscarry, and I think that the difference of intent between section 10 and the later sections is satisfied by the removal of limitation in amount upon the jurisdiction of the District Court.

"The service of a summons upon the local district attorney has the support of no prior procedure ever sanctioned by Congress, and it seems to me more likely to accord with what must have been meant to adopt the nearest analogy which has any warrant of law. The case is wholly of first impression, but it must be decided in one way or the other, and in such circumstances courts should, I think, try to find that way out which leaves the fewest anomalies, exceptions, or diversities between cases in substance the same.

"The motion to vacate the summons is therefore granted, but, to avoid further perplexities, I may add, in accordance with what I have just said, that petitions following the provisions of the Tucker Act would in my judgment answer the requirements of section 10."

Forfeiture of vehicles.—To same effect as 1919 Supplement annotations, see U. S. v. One Ford Automobile, (N. D. N. Y. 1919) 259 Fed. 894, wherein it was said:

"The vehicles used by the offender against this statute are not, of themselves, unlawfully in the United States, or subject to seizure, condemnation and sale. They were used in the commission of a crime against the United States and to aid in the commission of such offense. The property itself and not the owner is proceeded against, but if seized, condemned as forfeited to the United States and sold, the owner is deprived of his property and of his ownership in such automobile for the sole reason he used it as an instrumentality in the commission of a crime. The automobile did nothing of its own volition. It cannot be compared to the case of a vicious bull, or dog, or other animal or to the case of a nuisance. It cannot be doubted, I think, that the state in one statute may provide by law for the seizure, condemnation, and killing of every ferocious or dangerous animal apprehended at large and doing damage, or for the suppression of a nuisance, and in another statute may make it a crime for the owner to harbor such an animal and allow it to go at large and denounce a punishment by fine or imprisonment or by both for so doing. If the owner of such animal offends, he may be apprehended, convicted, and fined or imprisoned. This would not bar the seizure, condemnation, and killing of the ferocious animal under the other statute, even though it deprives the owner of such animal of his property. I do not think this would be regarded as the imposition of a double or added punishment. The animal is killed or the nuisance suppressed because obnoxious to the law and prejudicial to the general welfare. But an automobile or other vehicle is only operated by the owner or by his authority and is of itself harmless and of considerable value. It is not dangerous to the public or a nuisance. The opium act of 1909 (act of February 9, 1909, c. 100, 35 Stat. 614), above referred to, not only made it a crime to bring smoking opium into the United States, but denounced the penalty of fine or imprisonment and also in terms provided for the forfeiture of the opium. The seizure and disposition of the opium in the one case and of the distilled spirits in the other is necessary to the effective operation and enforcement of the law, but the forfeiture of the vehicle used, automobile in this case, is not. The seizure and condemnation and disposition of the opium in the one case and of the distilled spirits in the other are not acts done by way of punishment for the commission of the offense of bringing them into the United States contrary to law, but to prevent such obnoxious and forbidden articles going at large or into use in the United States.

This cannot be said of the automobile used to transport the prohibited merchandise. In the exercise of its police power, the general government has declared that distilled spirits shall not be brought into the United States. It is true that the prohibitory act unlike the opium act does not itself state what shall be done with such spirits if brought in, but the old statute then and still in force does. This provision is separable from the part providing for the seizure and forfeiture of the vehicles used in bringing in such articles in defiance of law. The one provision is applicable here, the other not. Logically we well may inquire why Congress specifically provided in the opium act for its seizure and condemnation when brought into the United States in defiance of law if it was thought the old statute authorized the seizure, etc., of such goods when so brought in.

"I am of the opinion and hold that the seizure, condemnation, and disposition of distilled spirits brought into the United States in violation of the act of August 10, 1917, is not illegal or adding to the punishment prescribed by the statute itself, but that the seizure, condemnation, or forfeiture of the vehicle or instrumentalities used by the offender in so unlawfully bringing in such prohibited article would be."

1918 Supp., p. 191, sec. 25.

Power of President to regulate directly.—"The word 'may' in the last clause of the first paragraph of section 25 of the National Defense (Lever) Act (40 Stat. 276) is permissive. The President is thereby empowered, not required, to exercise his authority to regulate the prices and production of coal through the Federal Trade Commission in each instance. This is the ordinary significance of the word. United States v. Lexington Mill Co., 232 U. S. 399, 34 Sup. Ct. 337, 55 L. Ed. 658, L. R. A. 1915B 774. And that it was so intended is clear from the context. It may be noted that the third paragraph vests in the President a similar optional discretion to act through the commission or otherwise." U. S. v. Ford, (S. D. Ohio, 1920) 263 Fed. 449.

Authority of commission contingent.—"The authority of the commission under the thirteenth paragraph of the section is to fix local prices only after direction by the President to make the investigation authorized by the eleventh paragraph. The grant of powers to the commission is contingent, and does not become effective until that direction is given. Such grant does not, therefore, require the construction of the first paragraph, to the effect that the President can act only through the commission, for which the defendant contends." U. S. v. Ford, (S. D. Ohio, 1920) 263 Fed. 449.

Contract in violation of Act.—Though the Act does not interfere with contracts made before its enactment, if such a contract has terminated, a new contract renewing it is invalid if the price is higher than that fixed under this section. Bewly-Darst Coal Co. v. Chattanooga Gas Co., (Tenn. 1920) 220 S. W. 1083.

Contracts below fixed price.—The price fixed under this section is merely a maximum price and the fixed price cannot be recovered under a contract for a less price. Bewly-Darst Coal Co. v. Chattanooga Gas Co., (Tenn. 1920) 220 S. W. 1083.

GAME ANIMALS AND BIRDS

1918 Supp., p. 196, sec. 1.

Constitutionality.—The rights of the several states are not unconstitutionally infringed by the Migratory Bird Treaty of December 8, 1916, and the Act of July 3, 1918, enacted to give effect to such treaty, under which the killing, capturing, or selling any of the migratory birds included in the terms of the treaty is prohibited except as permitted by regulations compatible with those terms to be made by the Secretary of Agriculture. Missouri v. Holland, (1920) 252 U. S. 416, 40 S. Ct. 382, 64 U. S. (L. ed.) —, (affirming) (W. D. Mo. 1919) 258 Fed. 479), wherein the court said:

"To answer this question it is not enough to refer to the Tenth Amendment, reserving the powers not delegated to the United States, because by article 2, section 2, the power to make treaties is delegated expressly, and by article 6 treaties made under the authority of the United States, along with the Constitution and laws of the United States made in pursuance thereof, are declared the supreme law of the land. If the treaty is valid there can be no dispute about the validity of the statute under article 1, section 8, as a necessary and proper means to execute the powers of the government. The language of the Constitution as to the supremacy of treaties being general, the question before us is narrowed to an inquiry into the ground upon which the present supposed exception is placed.

"It is said that a treaty cannot be valid if it infringes the Constitution, that there are limits, therefore, to the treaty-making power, and that one such limit is that what an act of Congress could not do unaided, in derogation of the powers reserved to the states, a treaty cannot do. An earlier act of Congress that attempted by itself and not in pursuance of a treaty to regulate the killing of migratory birds within the states had been held bad in the District Court. United States v. Shauver, 214 Fed. 154; United States v. McCullagh, 221 Fed. 288. Those decisions were supported by arguments that migratory birds were owned by the states in their sovereign capacity for the benefit of their people, and that under cases like Geer v. Connecticut, 161 U. S. 519, 16 Sup. Ct. 600, 400 L. Ed. 793, this control was one that Congress had no power to displace. The same argument is supposed to apply now with equal force.

"Whether the two cases cited were decided rightly or not they cannot be accepted as a test of the treaty power. Acts of Congress are the supreme law of the land only when made in pursuance of the Constitution, while treaties are declared to be so when made under the authority of the United States. It is open to question whether the authority of the United States means more than the formal acts prescribed to make the convention. We do not mean to imply that there are no qualifications to the treaty-making power; but they must be ascertained in a different way. It is obvious that there may be matters of the sharpest exigency for the national well being that an act of Congress could not deal with but that a treaty followed by such an act could, and it is not lightly to be assumed that, in matters requiring national action, 'a power which must belong to and somewhere reside in every civilized government' is not to be found. Andrews v. Andrews, 188 U. S. 14, 33, 23 Sup. Ct. 237, 47 L. Ed. 366. What was said in that case with regard to the powers of the states applies with equal force to the powers of the nation in cases where the states individually are incompetent to act. We are not yet discussing the particular case before us but only are considering the validity of the test proposed. With regard to that we may add that when we are dealing with words that also are a constituent act, like the Constitution of the United States, we must realize that they have called into life a being the development of which could not have been foreseen completely by the most gifted of its begetters. It was enough for them to realize or to hope that they had created an organism; it has taken a century and has cost their successors much sweat and blood to prove that they created a nation. The case before us must be considered in the light of our whole experience and not merely in that of what was said a hundred years ago. The treaty in question does not contravene any prohibitory words to be found in the Constitution. The only question is whether it is forbidden by some invisible radiation from the general terms of the Tenth Amendment. We must consider what this country has become in deciding what that amendment has reserved.

"The state, as we have intimated, founds its claim of exclusive authority upon an assertion of title to migratory birds,— an assertion that is embodied in statute. No doubt it is true that, as between a state and its inhabitants, the state may regulate the killing and sale of such birds, but it does not follow that its authority is exclusive of paramount powers. To put the claim of the state upon title is to lean upon a slender reed. Wild birds are not in the possession of anyone; and possession is the beginning of ownership. The whole foundation of the state's rights is the presence within their jurisdiction of birds that yesterday had not arrived, tomorrow may be in another state, and in a week a thousand miles away. If we are to be accurate, we cannot put the case of the state upon higher ground than that the treaty deals with creatures that for the moment are within the state borders, that it must be carried out by officers of the United States within the same territory, and that, but for the treaty, the state would be free to regulate this subject itself.

"As most of the laws of the United States are carried out within the states, and as many of them deal with matters which, in the silence of such laws, the state might regulate, such general grounds are not enough to support Missouri's claim. Valid treaties, of course, 'are as binding within the territorial limits of the states as they are effective throughout the dominion of the United States.' Baldwin v. Franks, 120 U. S. 678, 683, 30 L. ed. 766, 767, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 656, 763. No doubt the great body of private relations usually falls within the control of the state, but a treaty may override its power. We do not have to invoke the later developments of constitutional law for this proposition; it was recognized as early as Hopkirk v. Bell, 3 Cranch 454, 2 L. ed. 497, with regard to statutes of limitation, and even earlier, as to confiscation, in Ware v. Hylton, 3 Dall. 199, 1 L. ed. 568. It was assumed by Chief Justice Marshall with regard to the escheat of land to the state in Chirac v. Chirac, 2 Wheat. 259, 275, 4 L. ed. 234, 238; Hauenstein v. Lynham, 100 U. S. 483, 25 L. ed. 628; Geofroy v. Riggs, 133 U. S. 258, 33 L. ed. 642, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 295; Blythe v. Hinckley, 180 U. S. 333, 340, 45 L. ed. 557, 561, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 390. So, as to a limited jurisdiction of foreign consuls within a state. Wildenhus's Case, 120 U. S. 1, 7 Sup. Ct. 385, 30 L. ed. 565. See Ross v. McIntyre, 140 U. S. 453, 11 Sup. Ct. 897, 35 L. ed. 581. Further illustration seems unnecessary, and it only remains to consider the application of established rules to the present case.

"Here a national interest of very nearly the first magnitude is involved. It can be protected only by national action in concert with that of another power. The subject-matter is only transitorily within the state, and has no permanent habitat therein. But for the treaty and the statute, there soon might be no birds for any powers to deal with. We see nothing in the Constitution that compels the government to sit by while a food supply is cut off and the protectors of our forests and of our crops are destroyed. It is not sufficient to rely upon the states. The reliance is vain, and were it otherwise, the question is whether the United States is forbidden to act. We are of opinion that the treaty and statute must be upheld. Cary v. South Dakota, 250 U. S. 118, 63 L. ed. 886, 39 Sup. Ct. Rep. 403."

This act is constitutional as being one to carry into effect a valid treaty made by the President and the Senate under art. 2, sec. 2 of the Constitution. And it does not infringe upon the rights reserved to the several states under the Tenth Amendment. U. S. v. Thompson, (E. D. Ark. 1919) 258 Fed. 257. The court, in passing upon the validity of the treaty and this act, said: "The issue in this cause, raised by demurrer to an information filed by the United States attorney, charging the defendant with a violation of the Migratory Bird Act of July 3, 1918, entitled 'An Act to give effect to the convention between the United States and Great Britain for the protection of migratory birds, concluded at Washington, August 16, 1916, and for other purposes,' is whether the act is constitutional. This, of course, involves the power to make the treaty.

"The contention of counsel for the defendant, briefly stated, is that a treaty or convention between the United States and a foreign nation is of no higher grade than an act of Congress, and if an act of Congress regulating migratory birds is beyond the constitutional powers of Congress a treaty on the same subject is also void.

"The constitutional provisions relating to the treaty power are: Article 2, § 2, cl. 2, which, among the powers granted to the President provides that: 'He shall have power, by and with the . . . consent of the Senate, to make treaties: Provided, two-thirds of the Senators present concur.'

"Article 1, § 10, cl. 1, provides that: 'No state shall enter into any treaty, alliance or confederation.'

"The Tenth Amendment to the Constitution provides: 'The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the states, are reserved to the states respectively, or to the people.'

"It is now contended that as it was held by this court in United States v. Shauver (D. C.) 214 Fed. 154, by Judge Pollock in U. S. v. McCullagh (D. C.) 221 Fed. 288, and in State v. Sawyer, 113 Me. 458, 94 Atl. 93, L. R. A. 1915F 1031, Ann. Cas. 1917D 650, and State v. McCullagh, 96 Kan. 786, 153 Pac. 657, that the migratory bird section of the Appropriation Act for Department of Agriculture of March 4, 1913, c. 145, 37 Stat. 828, 847, was unconstitutional, the same result must follow in this case; or, in other words, that the treaty power under the Constitution is no greater than the power of Congress to enact statutes. (The Act of 1913 was not enacted to carry into effect a treaty.)

"In construing the Constitution it is the settled canon of construction that every part of it must be given effect, and none of its provisions may be disregarded. Article 6, cl. 2, of the Constitution, provides:

"This Constitution, and the laws of the United States which shall be made in pursuance thereof, and all treaties made, or which shall be made, under the authority of the United States, shall be the supreme law of the land; and the judges in every state shall be bound thereby, anything in the constitution or laws of any state to the contrary notwithstanding."

"It will be noticed that this section, in speaking of the laws of the United States, limits the power to enact them to such laws as are 'made in pursuance thereof.' On the other hand, when referring to treaties, the only limitation is 'which shall be made under the authority of the United States,' omitting the words 'in pursuance of the Constitution.' It cannot be assumed that the framers of that instrument intended to make no distinction between laws and treaties, when using language differing so materially. The words, 'laws made in pursuance of the Constitution,' can have but one meaning, namely, when authorized by the Constitution, while as to treaties the limitation is when made 'by authority of the United States.' The reason for this distinction is obvious. In making laws, our own consent alone is necessary, but in forming treaties the concurrence of the other power to the treaty is required.

"To subject the treaty power to all the limitations of Congress in enacting the laws for the regulation of internal affairs would in effect prevent the exercise of many of the most important governmental functions of this nation, in its intercourse and relations with foreign nations, and for the protection of our citizens in foreign countries. The states of the Union may enact all laws necessary for their local affairs, not prohibited by the national or their own constitution; but they are expressly prohibited from entering into treaties, alliances, or confederations with other nations. If, therefore, the national government is also prohibited from exercising the treaty power, affecting matters which for internal purposes belong exclusively to the states, how can a citizen be protected in matters of that nature when they arise in foreign countries? . . . To make treaties is one of the highest attributes of every sovereign government, and if the United States does not possess it to the fullest extent it would not be invested with the powers which belong to independent nations, and the rights of our citizens in their intercourse with foreign nations, or their right to the protection of life, liberty, and the enjoyment of property in foreign countries would be at the mercy of foreign nations, as the states are without authority to enter into treaties.

It is impossible to conceive that the framers of the Constitution overlooked a matter of such importance, and intended to deprive the people of protection in foreign lands, which can only be secured by treaty.

"To say that by the exercise of that power the people of the states may be deprived of their liberties is to reflect, not only on those who by the Constitution are invested with that power, but on the people themselves, for a treaty can only be made by the President and the concurrence of two-thirds of the Senators, all elected by the people, and their servants.

"Aside from this, a treaty may be repealed by Congress at any time, as there is no principle of law more firmly established by the highest court of the land than that, while a treaty will supersede a prior act of Congress, an act of Congress may supersede a prior treaty. The latest expression controls, whether it be a treaty or an act of Congress. Therefore, if it be conceivable that a President, with the concurrence of two-thirds of the Senators, should make a treaty subversive of the rights and liberties of the people, a Congress would be elected pledged to repeal it.

"In the opinion of the court, the power to make the treaty in controversy exists, and the act of Congress to carry it into effect was in discharge of a moral obligation assumed by the nation, by the convention with Great Britain."

To the same effect, see U. S. v. Rockefeller, (D. C. Mont. 1919) 260 Fed. 346; U. S. v. Samples, (W. D. Mo. 1919) 258 Fed. 479. In the latter case the court said: "The validity of this act then depends upon whether this treaty was a valid exercise of federal authority as delegated by the Constitution. A treaty is a compact between two or more independent nations with a view to the public welfare. It is a compact made between two or more nations, entered into for the common advancement of their interests and the interests of civilization. Michie's Encyc. of U. S. Sup. Ct. Rep., vol. 11, p. 636; Altman & Co. v. United States, 224 U. S. 583, 32 Sup. Ct. 593, 56 L. Ed. 894; 14 Diamond Rings v. United States, 183 U. S. 176-182, 22 Sup. Ct. 59, 46 L. Ed. 138.

"A treaty is invalid if in violation of or inconsistent with the Constitution. Butler on Treaties, vol. 2, par. 455, p. 350; Crandall on Treaties (2d ed.) p. 268; Federal Statutes Annotated, vol. 9, p. 29; Cherokee Tobacco Case, 11 Wall. 620, 20 L. Ed. 227; United States v. Old Settlers, 148 U. S. 427, 13 Sup. Ct. 650, 37 L. Ed. 509; Fong Yue Ting v. United States, 149 U. S. 698, 13 Sup. Ct. 1016, 37 L. Ed. 905; Ex parte Dos Santos, Fed. Cas. No. 4,016, 7 Fed. Cas. 949; Geofroy v. Riggs, 133 U. S. 266, 10 Sup. Ct. 295, 33 L. Ed. 642.

"And this being true, the court, in a proper case where the rights of citizens are involved, may so declare. Michie's Encyc. of U. S. Sup. Ct. Rep., vol. 11, p. 640; Head

Money Cases, 112 U. S. 580-598, 5 Sup. Ct. 247, 28 L. Ed. 798; In re Cooper, 143 U. S. 473, 501, 503, 12 Sup. Ct. 453, 36 L. Ed. 232; Jones v. Meehan, 175 U. S. 32, 29 Sup. Ct. 1, 44 L. Ed. 49.

"The general rule as to limitations upon the treaty making power is most comprehensively stated in Geofroy v. Riggs, 133 U. S. 266, 10 Sup. Ct. 295, 33 L. Ed. 642. If this pronouncement, in any view, could properly be regarded as obiter, nevertheless it has been so frequently and approvingly restated that it must now be regarded as the settled rule in the courts of this country.

"The treaty power, as expressed in the Constitution, is in terms unlimited except by those restraints which are found in that instrument against the action of the government or of its departments, and those arising from the nature of the government itself and of that of the states. It would not be contended that it extends so far as to authorize what the Constitution forbids or a change in the character of the government or in that of one of the states, or a cession of any portion of the territory of the latter, without its consent. . . . But with these exceptions, . . . there is no limit to the questions which can be adjusted touching any matter which is properly the subject of negotiation with a foreign country." Geofroy v. Riggs, 133 U. S. 266, 10 Sup. Ct. 297, 33 L. Ed. 642.

"As has been frequently stated, 'An attempt to enumerate these limitations in more specific terms than here used by Mr. Justice Field would be idle.' It is sufficiently comprehensive to include all acts by the treaty making power which might seek or tend to impair or destroy the constitutional functions exclusively conferred upon this government and its several departments.

"Is the protection of migratory birds then 'properly the subject of negotiation with a foreign country'? In the opinion of a former Attorney General the United States is given power to enter into treaty stipulations with Great Britain for the regulation of the fisheries in the waters of the United States and Canada along the international boundary; and such is now the accepted view. This is because 'the nature and habits of fishes, the means necessary to their preservation from extinction, and their protection in spawning time are such as to render it of importance that laws regulating their capture shall be uniform and uniformly enforced over the whole extent of the body of water which they inhabit. Where a lake or river is divided into two jurisdictions by a boundary line between two nations, it is manifest that it would be not only convenient, but almost necessary, for the adequate regulation of the subject that an agreement by treaty or other stipulation should exist between the governments of the two countries, in order to make any system of regulation and protection effective.' Otherwise 'it is impossible of regulation by uniform and reciprocal rules.' Mutuality and the attainment of reciprocal benefits are distinctive features of international conventions. Of course, such must be tangible and proximate. The subject-matter must be of the nature of those that have usually been made the subject of negotiation and treaty in the ordinary intercourse of nations, provided, always, that they are consistent with the nature of our institutions. It is, of course, unnecessary that the precise subject shall have been previously under consideration. This would mean that nations have exhausted the subject-matter of their intercourse, and can no longer extend their avenues of mutual advantage. But, as above stated, the matter of negotiation must be one which falls naturally and logically into recognized classification. It must not be arbitrary, disconnected, and remote from international intercourse.

"The case of free-swimming fishes in international waters is one which appeals more readily to the common understanding, because there international contract is apparent. But does the case of migratory birds differ in principle from that of migratory fishes or other similar forms of wild life? The term 'migrate' as used in this connection is thus defined:

"To pass periodically from one region or climate to another for feeding or breeding. . . . The majority of birds of the north temperate and arctic regions perform regular migrations, which are dependent on food supply more than on temperature, moving north in the spring and south in the fall."

"Seals go regularly to their breeding and feeding grounds. Fishes migrate during the spawning season. Migratory birds nest in the north and feed in the south with the regularity of the seasons. The movements of all these forms of life may be computed almost with mathematical precision. Their courses through the water and through the air are almost as well defined as though marked by Old Trails' monuments. Their movements are dictated by neither whim nor caprice, but are impelled by an instinct which inheres in the law of their being. If this be true, what distinction can we draw between the fish which swims through one of the great natural elements and the bird which flies through another? The controlling consideration is the effect upon the mutual interests of the two nations concerned. By this treaty the United States profits by the protection which is accorded such wild fowl in Canada during the nesting and feeding seasons before the migration sets in to the south. Canada gains by the same protection which is thrown about the same birds during their stay within the United States. The people of both countries, of our entire Union and of all the states, benefit by the mutual and reciprocal advantages which accrue from this arrangement. If this be so, then the subject-matter comes properly within the treaty making power. If it curtails any right which would otherwise be lodged in an individual state, it does so only through the full and untrammelled exercise of a federal power to negotiate with a foreign government. The conflict of jurisdiction, if one can be said to exist, differs in no respect from that which is experienced in the exercise of any power concededly lodged in the federal government which comes in contact with the ordinary powers of the state over the same subject matter."

See further to the same effect, U. S. v. Selkirk, (S. D. Tex. 1919) 258 Fed. 775, wherein it was said:

"While the demurrers present various forms of attack on the law, the gist of the contention is that, as the matter of the regulation of wild game is lodged in and a part of the sovereign power of the states and has not been delegated to the central government by the Constitution, the Congress is without power to legislate on the subject, and that the mere fact that the act is passed to give effect to a convention between the United States and Great Britain will not furnish Congress the power which without the treaty it clearly did not have, as I have no doubt that the cases in the federal and state courts holding the Migratory Bird Act of March 4, 1913 (37 Stat. 847, c. 145), invalid, were correctly decided.

"I cannot, however, assent to the view of counsel that the present act is likewise invalid.

"The constitutional provisions relating to the treaty power are: Article 2, § 2, cl. 2, which, among the powers granted to the President, provides that: 'He shall have power, by and with the . . . consent of the Senate, to make treaties, provided two-thirds of the Senators present concur.'

"Article 1, § 10, cl. 1, provides that: 'No state shall enter into any treaty, alliance, or confederation.'

"The Tenth Amendment to the Constitution provides: 'The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the states, are reserved to the states respectively or to the people.'

"The Constitution (article 6, cl. 2) provides:

"This Constitution and the laws of the United States which shall be made in pursuance thereof, and all treaties made, or which shall be made, under the authority of the United States, shall be the supreme law of the land.'

"It could not be for a moment contended that two sovereign states could not by treaty regulate the taking of migratory birds which pass from the one country to the other, and with the state of Texas still a sovereign republic, instead of a constituent part of the United States, there is no doubt that it could have concluded a treaty with Great Britain and enforced it, of the tenor and effect of that concluded by Congress.

"What a state itself could do, that all the states can do through their agent, the central government, and it only remains to determine whether that government has been made the agent, or mouthpiece, of the states in the matter of treaties.

"Even the most casual examination of the constitutional provisions above set out establishes: first, that the states have completely divested themselves of the power to enter into treaties; second, that without limitation or restriction they have conferred upon the President, with the consent of the Senate, the power to make treaties; and, third, that treaties made under the authority of the United States are the supreme law of the land, along with the Constitution and acts of Congress passed under the authority thereof."

Suit by state to enjoin game warden as proper method of raising constitutionality of Migratory Bird Treaty Act.—A suit by a state to enjoin a game warden of the United States from attempting to enforce the Migratory Bird Treaty Act and the regulation made by the Secretary of Agriculture in pursuance thereof on the ground that the statute is an unconstitutional interference with the reserved rights of the states, and that acts of the defendant, done and threatened under that authority, invade the sovereign rights of the state and contravene its will manifested in statutes, is a reasonable and proper means to assert the alleged quasi sovereign rights of the state. Missouri v. Holland, (1920) 252 U. S. 416, 40 S. Ct. 332, 64 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (W. D. Mo. 1919) 258 Fed. 479.

Plumage manufactured into aigrettes prior to passage of Act.—This Act does not prohibit the possession of aigrettes manufactured from the plumage of migratory birds prior to the date of its enactment. U. S. v. Fuld Store Co., (D. C. Mont. 1920) 262 Fed. 836. Regarding the application of this Act, the court said:

"The treaty (39 Stat. 1702) includes herons as migratory nongame birds, declares for a continuous close season in their behalf, and provides for legislation to execute its purposes. The act provides 'that unless and except as permitted by regulations' by it authorized to be made by the Secretary of Agriculture, 'it shall be unlawful to hunt, . . . kill, possess, offer for sale, sell, offer to purchase, purchase, . . . at any time or in any manner, any migratory bird included' in the treaty, 'or any part, nest, or egg of any such bird.' It also provides for seizure and confiscation of the things so denounced. There is no regulation purporting to apply to plumage antedating the act, and it is very doubtful if there can be.

"Pretermitted whether plumage manufactured into aigrettes is 'any part' of a bird within the intent of the act, or by merger and transformation into a new article has lost its identity as plumage or part of a bird, the act appears prospective, to protect birds in the future, to make killing them in the future a crime, and incidentally to make possession or offer of sale of any part of the birds unlawfully killed (that is, killed in the future) also a crime. To kill is made unlawful, and to possess or sell the fruits of such unlawful killing alone is also made unlawful. This is the most reasonable construction of the act, in view of associated words and the circumstances, and perhaps the only construction which will sanction the act's validity. Before the act, herons were lawfully killed and their plumage lawfully possessed and sold. Much of this plumage had been converted into aigrettes, artistic, beautiful, useful, and ornamental—harmless and valuable. They had entered into the domain of commerce, and the stock of private property; and were possessed by many persons. An intent on the part of Congress to virtually outlaw and destroy such property ought not to be assumed, unless very clear and the only reasonable construction of the act; for it is very doubtful if Congress has any such power. In harmless, useful, and valuable property there is a vested right of possession, use, enjoyment, and sale—a liberty of action, of which owners cannot be arbitrarily deprived without compensation. The 'due process' clause of the Constitution well may forbid. See Eberle v. Mich., 232 U. S. 706, 34 Sup. Ct. 330, 58 L. Ed. 803; U. S. v. Jin Fuey, 241 U. S. 401, 36 Sup. Ct. 658, 60 L. Ed. 1061, Ann. Cas. 1917D, 854; Barbour v. State, 249 U. S. 454, 39 Sup. Ct. 316, 63 L. Ed. 704, Apr. 14, 1919; Hamilton v. Distilleries & Warehouse Co., 251 U. S. —, 40 Sup. St. 106, 64 L. Ed. —, Dec. 15, 1919; Ruppert's Case, 251 U. S. —, 40 Sup. Ct. 141, 64 L. Ed. —, Jan. 5, 1920. And it would be at least interesting to learn that the department's agents are embarked on a campaign to seize these ornaments from women's hats and hair, and how they propose to accomplish it.

"Furthermore, such construction, denouncing as a crime possession and sale of this theretofore lawful private property, would expose the act to serious question as an ex post facto law within constitutional inhibition. Taking immediate effect, it would instantly convert many law-abiding citizens into criminals, change the law to their great disadvantage, and not for any act of theirs subsequent to the law, so far as possession goes, but only because they theretofore had acted and thereafter remained inactive. All this can be avoided by construction that the act relates only to birds and parts of birds killed subsequent to the act, a permissible and more reasonable construction, and in principle always to be preferred to avoid grave doubts of the validity of the law otherwise.

"True, treaties and laws to execute them may sometimes extend beyond congressional power, but, even as are acts and enactments of the war-making and all other powers, treaties and executory laws are subject to constitutional limitations. Doe v. Braden, 16 How. 657, 14 L. Ed. 1090. And the treaty is silent upon birds and parts of birds theretofore and lawfully killed and possessed. It does not require that they be regulated, and so creates in Congress no power to deal with them. See U. S. v. Jin Fuey, supra. That in game laws it is generally provided that it is unlawful to possess game in the close season, though lawfully acquired in the open season, is not analogous. There the game is acquired subject to a known condition that to retain possession into the close season is unlawful. Note, too, such laws have not been construed to include possession of stuffed game, mounted heads, ornaments, and the like."

GUANO ISLANDS

Vol. III, p. 423, sec. 5570. [First ed., vol. III, p. 159.]

Swan Islands.—The United States has never acquired sovereignty of any kind or to any extent over the Swan Islands in the Caribbean Sea by reason of the provisions of the Guano Islands Act. But the United States Government may at any time assert its sovereignty over these islands by appropriate action and no other country has any proper claim to them. The property rights of the Swan Island Commercial Co. in the Swan Islands are dependent upon the assumption of sovereignty over these islands by the United States Government, and upon such assumption there can be no doubt that the rights of the company in the lands occupied and improved by it will become at least so equitably fixed as to warrant some provision for compensation by the Government. VI. FEDERAL INTERFERENCE WITH CUSTODY OF STATE COURT

1. Rule Stated (p. 438)

Where a person is in custody, under process from a state court.—To same effect as third paragraph of original annotation, see Shapley v. Cohoon, (D. C. Mass. 1918) 258 Fed. 752, wherein it was said:

"For the welfare of the community, as well as that of the insane, and to guard against unnecessary conflicts between the federal courts and those of the state, both of which are equally bound to guard and protect rights secured by the Constitution, it is necessary that one who alleges that he has been deprived of his liberty in violation of his constitutional rights should have exhausted all his remedies in the state court before application should be made to a federal court. The exceptional cases in which a federal judge should exercise the power conferred upon him to issue a writ of habeas corpus to release one who is in custody by state authority and claims that he is deprived of liberty in violation of the Constitution are stated in Ex parte Royall, 117 U. S. 241, 251, 6 Sup. Ct. 734, 740, 29 L. Ed. 868, as follows:

"When the petitioner is in custody by state authority for an act done or omitted to be done in pursuance of a law of the United States, or of an order, process, or decree of a court or judge thereof, or where, being a subject or citizen of a foreign state, and domiciled therein, he is in custody, under like authority, for an act done or omitted under any alleged right, title, authority, privilege, protection, or exemption, claimed under the commission, or order, or sanction of any foreign state, or under color thereof, the validity, and effect whereof depend upon the law of nations, in such and like cases of urgency, involving the authority and operations of the general government, or the obligations of this country to, or its relations with, foreign nations, the courts of the United States have frequently interposed by writs of habeas corpus and discharged prisoners who were held in custody under state authority. So, also, when they are in the custody of a state officer, it may be necessary, by use of the writ, to bring them into a court of the United States to testify as witnesses."

"It is evident that the case presented by the petitioner does not fall within any of these enumerated classes. While the petitioner has presented a petition to the Supreme Judicial Court for a writ of habeas corpus, which was denied by a single justice of that court, it does not appear that upon the hearing any question of law was reserved or reported to the full court, as might have been done. King's Case, 161 Mass. 46, 36 N. E. 685. If this had been done, and the highest court of the state, competent under the state law to dispose of the matter, had finally acted, the case could have been brought to the Supreme Court of the United States upon a writ of error." To same effect, see Shapley v. Cohoon, (D. C. Mass. 1919) 258 Fed. 757.

To same effect as fourth paragraph of original annotation, see Ex p. Beach, (S. D. Cal. 1919) 259 Fed. 956, approving Ex p. Royall, (1896) 117 U. S. 241, 6 S. Ct. 734, 29 U. S. (L. ed.) 868, in original annotation.

2. Exceptional Circumstances (p. 441)

Illustrations.—In Ex p. Beach, (S. D. Cal. 1919) 259 Fed. 956, it was held that a deputy collector of the United States customs service, charged under the Constitution and laws of the United States with the duty of preventing the importation of opium into the United States, was entitled to be discharged on habeas corpus from custody under a warrant issued by a state court on a charge of felonious assault committed in the performance of that duty.

VII. RESTRAINT OF PERSONAL LIBERTY

2. Petitioner at Large on Bail (p. 443)

A person arrested in one federal district charged with the commission of an offense in another district, who, upon his own request upon advice of counsel, is admitted to bail by a United States commissioner to answer the indictment before application had been made to the court for his removal, and before there had even been an order of the commissioner that he be held to await such application, is not entitled to his discharge on habeas corpus. He was no longer under actual restraint in the district of his arrest, and all questions in controversy in the habeas corpus and removal proceedings had terminated, including the question whether his arrest and detention had originally been valid, and whether there was a right then to remove him. Stallings v. Splain, (1920) 253 U. S. 339, 40 S. Ct. 537, 64 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming 49 App. Cas. (D. C.) —.

Chinese exclusion—Allegations in petition for habeas corpus.—Allegations in the petition for habeas corpus sued out by a Chinese applicant for admission to the United States may be interpreted in the light of the immigration records filed with the petition and with respondent's return, where, with such petition, were filed all the testimony and papers pertaining to the proceedings prior to the appeal to the Secretary of Labor, and there was a prayer that when the copy of the proceedings thereafter had should become available, they might be made a part of the petition. *Kwock Jan Fat v. Advising alien of rights on preliminary examination.—The fact that a preliminary examination is had of an alien held for deportation without advising him of his right of representation by counsel, is not ground for discharging him on habeas corpus. Jung Back Sing v. Mikell, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1919) 259 Fed. 28, 170 C. C. A. 28, reversing (E. D. S. C. 1918) 253 Fed. 817 in 1919 Supplement annotation.

Vol. III, p. 572, sec. 4813. [First ed., vol. III, p. 252.]

The money benefits provided for in R. S. sec. 4756, are "pensions" within the purview of this section and the pertinent provision of the Act of June 30, 1914 (see vol. III, p. 573) and such money benefits inure to the grantees concurrently with maintenance in the Naval Home. (1918) 31 Op. Atty-Gen. 268.

Allowances under R. S. sec. 4757 are "pensions" within the meaning of this section and the Act of June 30, 1914 (see vol.

III, p. 573) and should therefore be disposed of, in cases where the beneficiaries are inmates of the Naval Home, in the manner prescribed by that Act. (1918) 31 Op. Atty-Gen. 268.

Accountant as "contract laborer."—An assistant accountant brought into this country by a foreign bank for the purpose of employment in a branch bank here is not a "laborer" within the meaning of this section. U. S. v. Union Bank, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 262 Fed. 91, 8 L. R. A. 1438.

Vol. III, p. 649, sec. 3. [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 90.]

Necessity of "entry" into United States.—In Tama Miyake v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1919) 257 Fed. 732, 169 C. C. A. 20, it was held that an alien in Hawaii who had been found receiving, sharing in, and deriving benefit from the earnings of prostitutes and who had been connected with the management of a house of prostitution, was subject to deportation under this section, regardless of the fact that she was a resident of Hawaii before the treaty of annexation. The court said:

"The second contention is that the appellant was not subject to deportation under the statute, since she was a resident of Hawaii before the treaty of annexation, and did not 'enter' the United States within the purview of the statute. That contention was made in United States v. Kimi Yamamoto, 240 Fed. 390, 153 C. C. A. 316, and United States v. Sui Joy, 240 Fed. 392, 153 C. C. A. 318, and adversely decided by this court."

In the earlier of these two cases, the court said: "The definition of the charge under which the appellee is held for deportation is limited by the words 'after such alien shall have entered the United States.' It is true that she has never technically entered the United States. While the territory of Hawaii may in a sense be said to have entered the United States by its annexation on August 12, 1898, it does not follow that its inhabitants thereby became immigrants to the United States. In ascertaining the intention of Congress in making the amendment of 1910, an important fact is that the amendment was made by striking certain words from the former act, whereby the time limitation in the former act was repealed. We think that Congress intended by the amendment to say that any alien found in the United States practicing prostitution shall be sent out of the country, and that such exclusion shall apply to all alien women, whether they came into the United States at a port of entry, or by the annexation of the land in which they lived, or became aliens by marriage to an alien, or were born alien within the United States, as not being 'subject to the jurisdiction thereof,' and that the words 'after such alien shall have entered the United States' should be construed as if they read 'while such alien is in the United States.' It should be assumed that Congress intended to make no discrimination between these classes of aliens. The consideration which induced the amendment was that the objectionable aliens were in the United States, not the manner in which they got there."

Dismissal of other proceedings against alien.—The fact that proceedings against an alien for keeping and maintaining a house of ill fame are dismissed at the time deportation proceedings are begun against her under this section, does not deprive her of her constitutional right to trial by jury, since the dismissal of the proceedings was not necessary to give the immigration officials the right to proceed. Tama Miyake v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1919) 257 Fed. 732, 169 C. C. A. 20.

Fair trial.—A decision of the Secretary of Labor denying the admission into the United States of a Chinaman claiming American citizenship was rendered without the fair hearing which due process of law demands, where the only form in which the recognition of the Chinese applicant by three white witnesses called by him and examined in his presence by the government inspector was placed before the Secretary was a letter which the acting commissioner of immigration, who did not himself render the decision, sent to applicant's counsel and placed with the record, and where apparently there was no record of such recognition before the immigration commissioner when he decided the case. Kwock Jan Fat v. White, (1920) 253 U. S. 454, 40 S. Ct. 566, 64 U. S. (L. ed.) —, reversing (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1919) 255 Fed. 323, 166 C. C. A. 493.

Review by court of proceedings for admission.—The denial of a fair hearing to a Chinese applicant who was refused admission into the United States requires that a judgment of the federal Circuit Court of Appeals which affirmed a judgment of the District Court, sustaining a demurrer to the petition of such Chinaman for habeas corpus, be reversed and the cause remanded to the District Court for trial of the merits. Kwock Jan Fat v. White, (1920) 253 U. S. 454, 40 S. Ct. 566, 64 U. S. (L. ed.) —, reversing (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1919) 255 Fed. 323, 166 C. C. A. 493.

IV. Habeas corpus.

III. FINALITY OF DECISIONS OF IMMIGRATION OFFICERS (p. 687)

Rule stated.—To same effect as original annotation, see Jeung Bock Hong v. White, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1919) 258 Fed. 23, 169 C. C. A. 161, wherein it was held that if the executive officers of the Department of Labor found that the evidence in support of the petitioners' right to land and enter the United States was so impaired by discrepancies as to render it unsatisfactory, the court was not authorized to reverse the conclusion.

IV. HABEAS CORPUS (p. 690)

Waiver to right to hearing before board of special inquiry.—Where no claim for a hearing before a board of special inquiry is made at any time in proceedings before immigration officials to determine the right of an applicant to enter the United States as the minor son of a Chinese merchant lawfully domiciled here, the right to such hearing will be regarded as having been waived and cannot be demanded for the first time in habeas corpus proceedings. Lim Chan v. White, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1920) 262 Fed. 762.

1918 Supp., p. 214, sec. 3.

"Teacher" as "laborer."—An alien who seeks admission into this country for the purpose of teaching the Japanese language is not a "laborer" within the meaning of this section and may not be excluded as such. Tatsukichi Kuwabara v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1919) 260 Fed. 104, 171 C. C. A. 140. In defining the terms, the court said:

"In the case of Scharrenberg v. Dollar S. S. Co. et al., 229 Fed. 970, 144 C. C. A. 252, Ann. Cas. 1917C, 258, this court held that it was not a violation of the Immigration Act of February 20, 1907 (34 Stat. 900, c. 1134), making it a misdemeanor to prepay the transportation or assist in the importation of contract laborers into the United States, for the operators of a merchant vessel flying the American flag to bring aliens from China, which decision was affirmed by the Supreme Court in 245 U. S. 122, 38 Sup. Ct. 28, 62 L. Ed. 189, where the court, after referring to the claim there made that the seaman described in each count of the complaint was an alien contract laborer, and that the steamship was a part of the territory of the United States, and that therefore the contracting to bring such alien to San Francisco and to there employ him upon such a vessel, was to knowingly assist and encourage the migration of an alien contract laborer into the United States for the purpose of having him perform labor therein in violation of the fourth and fifth sections of the Act of 1907, said:

"The validity of this claim, and of the argument in support of it, calls for the construction of three short provisions of two statutes.

"Section 2 of the Act of 1907, as amended in 1910 (36 Stat. 263), furnishes this definition of "contract laborers," which must be read into sections 4 and 5 of the Act of 1907: "Persons . . . who have been induced or solicited to migrate to this country by offers or promises of employment or in consequence of agreements, oral, written or printed, express or implied, to perform labor in this country of any kind, skilled or unskilled."

"Section 4 makes it a misdemeanor for any corporation to "in any way assist or encourage the importation or migration of any contract laborer or contract laborers into the United States."

"Section 5 imposes severe penalties for every violation of the act "by knowingly assisting, encouraging, or soliciting the migration or importation of any contract laborer into the United States."

"Thus a contract laborer is one who under the conditions described in the first of these statutes comes "to perform labor in this country," and the penalties denounced by the sections of the other act are against persons who knowingly assist or induce the importation or migration of such laborer "into the United States."

"The purpose of this alien labor legislation was declared by this court almost 30 years ago, in Holy Trinity Church v. United States, 143 U. S. 457, 12 Sup. Ct. 511, 36 L. Ed. 226, to be, to arrest the bringing of an ignorant, servile class of foreign laborers into the United States, under contract to work at a low rate of wages, and thus reduce other laborers engaged in like occupations to the level of the assisted immigrant.

"Having these terms of the statutes and this history in mind, can it with reason be said that the men shipped on the Mackinaw as "seamen" were "laborers," and that when employed upon that vessel in foreign commerce they were performing labor "in this country" within the meaning of the acts?

"In familiar speech a "seaman" may be called a "sailor" or a "mariner," but he is never called a "laborer," although he doubtless performs labor when assisting in the care and management of his ship; and a "seaman" is defined in the United States statutes applicable to "merchant seamen" as being, any person (masters and apprentices excepted) who shall be employed to serve in any capacity on board a vessel. R. S. § 4612. In the shipping articles, which the United States law requires shall be signed by members of the crews of ships of American registry engaged in foreign commerce, the men are designated as "seamen" or

"mariners." Thus, neither in popular nor in technical legal language would the men employed on the Mackinaw be called or classed as "laborers," and such seamen are not brought "into this country" to enter into competition with the labor of its inhabitants, but they come to our shores only to sail away again in foreign commerce on the ship which brings them or on another, as soon as employment can be obtained."

"We are of the opinion that in view of the purpose of the legislation here in question as declared by the Supreme Court in the cases that have been cited it cannot be held to apply to an alien who seeks to enter this country for the purpose of teaching 'the Japanese language, history, geography, and arithmetic,' first, because the doing so is not to perform labor in this country within the meaning of the Act of February 5, 1917; and, secondly, because a teacher of the Japanese language, history, geography, and arithmetic may be properly regarded as belonging to a 'recognized learned profession.'"

Employee of foreign steamship company temporarily in country as contract laborer.—To same effect as 1919 Supplement annotation, see U. S. v. Union Bank, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 262 Fed. 91, 8 A. L. R. 1438, affirming (S. D. N. Y. 1918) 250 Fed. 913.

Literacy test—Exemption.—In Mototaro Eguchi v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1919) 260 Fed. 144, 171 C. C. A. 180, it was held that the fact that an alien who had been lawfully admitted to the United States and who had resided in this country continuously for five years, was unable to procure passage on ships returning to the United States within the prescribed six months from the time of his departure therefrom, did not extend the prescribed period so as to exempt him from the literacy test imposed by this section.

Evidence.—In Mototaro Eguchi v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1919) 260 Fed. 144, 171 C. C. A. 180, the evidence was held sufficient to sustain the finding of the lower court that an immigrant had failed to pass the literacy test prescribed by this section.

Proof necessary for reversal of deportation order.—Successfully to attack an order issued by the Secretary of Labor for the deportation of an alien under this section, it must be shown that the proceedings upon which the order is based were unfair, or that the relator has been denied a fair hearing, or that there has been an abuse of discretion on the part of the executive officers of the United States. Lopez v. Howe, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 259 Fed. 401, 179 C. C. A. 377.

1918 Supp., p. 228, sec. 17.

Applicable only to aliens.—In U. S. v. Low Hong, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1919) 261 Fed. 73, a petition for habeas corpus alleged that the petitioner was a natural-born citizen of the United States and held in custody under a warrant issued by the Secretary of Labor for hearing to determine whether or not he should be deported in conformity with law. The return to the petition averred that the arrest and detention were in pursuance of a warrant of the Secretary of Labor duly and lawfully issued under section 19 of this Act. By demurrer to the petition and orally the citizenship of the petitioner was admitted. As the provisions of this section 17 and other provisions of the Act are in express terms made applicable only to aliens, it was held that the petitioner was entitled to discharge immediately and without waiting for a hearing under the provisions of this section, the admission as to citizenship amounting to a concession that the Secretary of Labor was without power or jurisdiction to have the petitioner kept in custody under the warrant issued.

Appeal to Secretary of Labor as condition precedent to habeas corpus proceedings.—Where a person is ordered to be deported by a board of special inquiry, an appeal from its decision to the Secretary of Labor must be made in accordance with the provisions of this section before the District Court will entertain an application for a writ of habeas corpus. U. S. v. Uhl, (S. D. N. Y. 1919) 262 Fed. 532.

The five-year limitation contained in the first clause of this section should not be read into the clause providing for the deportation of aliens found advocating or teaching the unlawful destruction of property, since the latter clause expressly provides for the deportation of any alien who at "any time after entry" shall be found advocating such practices. Guiney v. Bonham, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1919) 261 Fed. 582.

In Lopez v. Howe, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 259 Fed. 401, 170 C. C. A. 377, the relator obtained a writ of habeas corpus claiming that an order of the Secretary of Labor directing his deportation as an anarchist was invalid because he was a philosophical anarchist and opposed the overthrow of government by force or violence, that he was not within the provisions of this section, except in the five-year class, and that, as he had been in this country for fifteen years, he could not be deported. Answering this contention, the court said:

"The relator was taken into custody under a warrant which charged him with being in the United States in violation of the Immigration Act of February 5, 1917, c. 29, 39 Stat. 874. Section 3 of that act provides that certain enumerated classes of aliens shall be excluded from admission into the United States. Among the classes so excluded are anarchists. And section 19 of the Act provides for the arrest and deportation within 5 years after entry of any alien who at the time of entry was a member of one or more of the classes excluded by law. It then provides for the deportation of classes of aliens therein mentioned, irrespective of the time of their entry into the United States, and among those so specified is the following:

"Any alien who at any time after entry shall be found advocating or teaching the unlawful destruction of property, or advocating or teaching anarchy, or the overthrow by force or violence of the government of the United States or of all forms of law or the assassination of public officials." . . . From what has been said in an earlier part of this opinion, it appears that the relator's understanding of the statute differs from the understanding of this court. That section deals with a number of different classes of aliens, and provides that certain classes may be deported at any time within 5 years after entry, but does not so limit the time of deportation as respects certain other classes, as to whom it is declared they may be deported irrespective of the time of their entry into the United States. An alien at the time of his entry may not be an anarchist, and therefore may be entitled to enter. But if, at any time after his entry, he is found 'advocating or teaching anarchy,' he may be deported. The relator's testimony, only a portion of which has been quoted, shows conclusively that he is an advocate and a teacher of anarchy, making speeches in its favor, organizing anarchist groups, and distributing anarchist literature. As he reads and writes Spanish, Italian, Portuguese, and English, he is a man of ability, who naturally has influence with his associates. That he is liable under the law to deportation admits of no doubt."

Exclusion of Chinese aliens.—A Chinese laborer, who, after the passage of this Act, re-enters this country by using a fraudulent merchant's certificate, may be deported under the provisions of this section. Ng Leong v. White, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1919) 260 Fed. 749, 171 C. C. A. 487, wherein the court said:

"The majority of the Circuit Court of Appeals of the Fifth Circuit, in the case of Mayo, Immigration Commissioner, et al. v. United States, 251 Fed. 275, 163 C. C. A. 431, held that section 19 of the Immigration Act of February 5, 1917 (39 Stat. 874, c. 29), does not apply to a Chinese person against whom deportation proceedings were pending at the time of its taking effect, unless some offense was thereafter committed which changed his status.

"In the present case, however, the appellant, who is admittedly a Chinaman, entered this country at the port of San Francisco subsequent to the passage of that act, so that if he was thereafter found to be illegally in the United States, we think there can be no doubt of the application to him of section 19 of the Act of February 5, 1917, since section 38 thereof declares that it 'shall not be construed to repeal, alter, or amend existing laws relating to the immigration or exclusion of Chinese persons, . . . except as provided in section 19 hereof'; and since the said section 19 provides for the taking into custody upon the warrant of the Secretary of Labor, and the deportation of 'any alien who shall have entered or who shall be found in the United States in violation of this act, or in violation of any other law of the United States.'"

Allegations in warrant of arrest.—A warrant of arrest for deportation of an alien issued under the provisions of this section, is sufficient if it give him adequate information of the acts relied upon to bring him within the excluded classes, and to enable him to offer testimony to refute the same at the hearing. It need not have the formality and particularity of an indictment. Guiney v. Bonham, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1919) 261 Fed. 582, 8 A. L. R. 1282.

Hearing—Necessity of alien being represented by counsel.—A hearing before an immigration inspector regarding the deportation of an alien is not unfair because the alien is not represented by counsel until most of the testimony has been taken. Guiney v. Bonham, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1919) 261 Fed. 582, 8 A. L. R. 1282.

1918 Supp., p. 232, sec. 20.

Proceeding held unfair.—In Ex p. Jackson, (D. C. Mont. 1920) 263 Fed. 110, an order deporting a member of the I. W. W. was set aside in habeas corpus as unfair and denying due process because (1) an unlawful search was made and papers of the alien illegally seized and (2) because of refusal to produce a government witness for cross-examination.

1918 Supp., p. 239, sec. 35.

Seaman detained for treatment—deduction from wages.—Where a seaman contracts a venereal disease and is detained for treatment under this section, the amount paid by the ship's agents for the treatment may be deducted from his wages. The Alector, (E. D. Va. 1920) 263 Fed. 1007.

1919 Supp., p. 72, sec. 2.

Application of section.—Where the provisions of this Act were in force prior to the institution of deportation proceedings against an alien, the fact that the warrants of arrest and deportation are in terms based upon section 19 of the Act of Feb. 5, 1917, ch. 29 (1918 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. 230), does not render this section inapplicable to the case. Accordingly the provisions of this section apply to the deportation of an alien for teaching the unlawful destruction of property, and he may be deported therefor regardless of the time of his entry. Guiney v. Bonham, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1919) 261 Fed. 582, 8 A. L. R. 1282.

IMPORTS AND EXPORTS

Smuggling smoking opium into United States.—The provisions of this section apply only to opium which may be lawfully imported into the United States, and not to smoking opium, the importation of which is prohibited by section 1 of the Act of Feb. 9, 1909, ch. 100 (3 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 723). U. S. v. Sischo, (W. D. Wash. 1919) 262 Fed. 1001.

INDIANS

Sheep.—Sheep must be regarded as cattle within the meaning of this section. Ash Sheep Co. v. U. S., (1920) 252 U. S. 159, 40 S. Ct. 241, 64 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1918) 250 Fed. 591, 162 C. C. A. 607; (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1918) 254 Fed. 59, 165 C. C. A. 469.

"Indian lands."—Lands within that part of the Crow Indian Reservation in Montana as to which the Indians released their possessory right to the United States by an agreement ratified and amended by the Act of April 27, 1904, which contains many provisions intended to secure to the Indians the fullest possible value for what are referred to in the grant as "their lands," and to make use of the proceeds for their benefit, are Indian lands within the meaning of this section. Ash Sheep Co. v. U. S., (1920) 252 U. S. 159, 40 S. Ct. 241, 64 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1918) 250 Fed. 591, 162 C. C. A. 607; (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1918) 254 Fed. 59, 165 C. C. A. 469.

Recovery of nominal damages for trespass as affecting claim for penalty.—The recovery of nominal damages in an equity suit to restrain a trespass does not bar the recovery at law of the statutory penalty for the same trespass, the claim for such penalty having been rejected in the equity suit because pursued in an action in which it could not be entertained. Ash Sheep Co. v. U. S., (1920) 252 U. S. 159, 40 S. Ct. 241, 64 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1918) 250 Fed. 591, 162 C. C. A. 607; (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1918) 254 Fed. 59, 165 C. C. A. 469.

Vol. III, p. 825, sec. 5. [First ed., vol. III, p. 494.]

Title derived through "trust patents" as marketable title.—A marketable title to land is one that is fair of record and free from reasonable doubt. And where the title depends for its validity on matters of fact dehors the record, the determination whereof requires a judicial decree, it is not marketable, and the vendee in an executory contract of sale is not bound to accept it. The rule applies to "trust patents" issued by the federal government to certain Indians of the White Earth Indian Reservation under the "general Indian Allotment Act" of Feb. 8, 1887, and acts supplementary thereto, which on their face do not convey the fee title. The fact that the Clapp Amendment to the acts referred to, approved June 21, 1906, declares that such patents shall operate as a transfer of the fee title as to mixed-blood Indians, does not clear the title until the character of the particular Indian as a mixed blood is established as a matter of record. With that fact unsettled and undetermined, a title derived through a trust patent so issued is not marketable within the rule stated. Geray v. Mahnomen Land Co., (1919) 143 Minn. 383, 173 N. W. 871.

Descent in case of death pending allotment.—If a Creek citizen dies before receiving his allotment, at the time of his death he is not seized of an inheritable estate in lands afterward allotted to him or to his heirs, and the descent of such allotment is cast at the time the certificate of allotment is issued, and the law in effect at that particular time governs in the devolution of said allotted lands. Hamilton v. Bahnsen, (1919) 75 Okla. 216, 183 Pac. 413.

Rights of heirs of allottee dying before allotment.—John Nestel, a white man, by the provisions of the Kiowa, Comanche and Apache Agreement (31 Stat. 676, c. 813) was awarded all the benefits of land and money conferred by the agreement the same as members by blood of one of said tribes. Under the agreement, after an allotment was selected and approved by the Secretary of the Interior, the title thereto was to be held in trust for the allottee for a period of twenty-five years in the time and manner provided by Act Feb. 8, 1887, c. 119, 24 Stat. L. 388, and the act amendatory thereof approved Feb. 28, 1891 (26 Stat. L. 794, c. 383), and at the expiration of said period the title was to be conveyed in fee simple to the allottee, or his heirs, free from all incumbrances. The said John Nestel died in August, 1902, prior to the issuance of the final patent, but subsequent to the issuance of the trust patent. The Indian Appropriation Act approved

March 3, 1903 (32 Stat. L. 1008, c. 994), authorized and directed the Secretary of the Interior to issue a patent in fee to several designated persons, including the said John Nestell, and further provided that "all restrictions as to the sale, incumbrance, or taxation of said lands are hereby removed." On June 17, 1903, the Secretary of the Interior issued a patent to the heirs of John Nestell without naming them. It was held that said heirs took the estate by inheritance, and not by direct grant from the United States. Gray v. McKnight, (1919) 75 Okla. 268, 183 Pac. 469.

Vol. III, p. 830, sec. 6. [First ed., vol. III, p. 496.]

What passes by transfer—Right to damages for prior taking.—The transferee under this section of the rights of an allottee under the Flathead Indian Allotment Act of March 2, 1889, does not acquire the right of the Indian to compensation for a previous taking of part of the land for railroad purposes. Smith v. Northern Pac. R. Co., (Mont. 1919) 186 Pac. 684.

Vol. III, p. 839, sec. 5. [First ed., vol. III, p. 501.]

Child of white man and Indian woman.—Under the provisions of this section, the illegitimate child of an allottee by an Indian woman, whether born as the result of cohabitation in accordance with Indian customs or not, is entitled to inherit rights in his father's allotment as his heir. Gray v. McKnight, (1919) 75 Okla. 268, 183 Pac. 469.

Vol. III, p. 841, sec. 1. [Jurisdiction of actions for allotments, etc.] [First ed., vol. III, p. 492.]

Persons bound by decree.—Where a suit, brought by certain Indians for the purpose of having themselves adjudged to be the sole heirs of a deceased Indian allottee, is defended by an attorney for the United States, who consents to the entry of a decree adjudging the plaintiffs the sole heirs of the deceased allottee and entitled to possession of the decedent's allotment, such decree is not binding on a claimant who did not appear in the proceedings because he had no notice thereof. Ya-Koot-Sa v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1920) 262 Fed. 398. The court said:

"The appellants contend that the decree of the court below of March 10, 1910, was a final adjudication of the title to the property in controversy, and was binding upon all persons, irrespective of whether they appeared in that proceeding or not, and that such is the effect of the acts of Congress of October 15, 1894 (28 Stat. 305), and February 6, 1901 (31 Stat. 760), authorizing such proceedings to be brought against the United States. The appellee, on the other hand, contends that James Peters, not having appeared in the court in that proceeding, was not bound by the decree. Unquestionably the decree therein is not binding as to James Peters, unless by the provisions of Act Feb. 6, 1901, 31 Stat. 760, the United States as party to that suit is to be held to have represented the interests of all unknown and unnamed heirs. We do not think that such is the meaning of the statute. It provides that all persons who are or claim to be entitled to an allotment—"it may commence and prosecute or defend any action, suit or proceeding in relation to their right thereto in the proper Circuit Court of the United States."

"It is true that the act further provides that in said suit the parties thereto shall be the claimant as plaintiff and the United States as party defendant, and that the judgment or decree in favor of any claimant to an allotment shall have the same effect when properly certified to the Secretary of the Interior as if such allotment had been allowed and approved by him. But it makes it the duty of the district attorney to appear and represent 'the interests of the government in the suit.' Taking the whole statute together, with its provision that any person claiming an allotment may 'defend' any action or suit in relation thereto, and the provision making it the duty of the district attorney to defend only 'the interests of the government in the suit,' we think it is not to be inferred that the intention of the statute was to adjudicate in such a proceeding the interest of a claimant who was not advised of the proceeding and whose claim was unknown to the District Attorney. Such seems to have been the view of the courts in United States v. Fairbanks, 171 Fed. 337, 96 C. C. A. 229, and Oakes v. United States, 172 Fed. 305, 97 C. C. A. 139."

Vol. III, p. 846, sec. 7. [First ed., vol. III, p. 505.]

Effect on water rights.—After a patent has been granted under this section the rights of the allottee are the same as those of any other owner and the Secretary of the Interior cannot prescribe rules and regulations as to the distribution of water flowing through the allotted lands. Hough v. Taylor, (Wash. 1920) 188 Pac. 458.

Vol. III, p. 847, sec. 1. [Restrictions on alienation of lands removed.]

Applicable only to persons not of Indian blood.—"Act Cong. April 21, 1904, c. 1402, 35 Stat. 189-204, which provides that all restrictions upon the alienation of lands of all the allottees of the Five Civilized Tribes who are not of Indian blood, except minors, are, except as to the homesteads, hereby removed, has no application to Creek Indians of more than half blood adopted by the Seminoles before the allotment, but is limited in its application to the adopted citizens not of any degree of Indian blood; and held, further, that where a person of any degree of Indian blood was enrolled by the Dawes Commission as 'adopted,' parol evidence may be received to show that such person is an Indian or possesses a quantum of Indian blood and thereby entitled to all protection and benefits thereof, notwithstanding such enrollment." Munnah v. Gates, (1919) 76 Okla. 167, 184 Pac. 127.

Vol. III, p. 853, sec. 1. [Indian trust allotments, etc.] [First ed., 1912 Supp., p. 96.]

Power and jurisdiction of Secretary of Interior.—This section applies only to cases where allotments have been made and the titles withheld in trust, to be followed by the issuance of a fee-simple patent at the end of the trust period. Accordingly, the Secretary of the Interior has no authority under this section to make a finding as to who are the heirs of a deceased Indian if a fee-simple patent has been issued to the decedent, although it is subject to restrictions on alienation therein contained. U. S. v. Bowling, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 261 Fed. 657. Regarding the Secretary's authority to make such a finding, the court said:

"The statute, by its terms as quoted and as appears from its context, applied only to cases where allotments were made and the titles were withheld in trust, to be followed by the issuance of a fee-simple patent at the end of the trust period. In other clauses of the same section, the Secretary was given discretion to issue a patent in fee to the heirs of the allottee, if he decided them competent to manage their own affairs, or to issue patents in fee upon partition of the lands between the heirs, and by the language of the following section an allottee was given the right to dispose of the allotment by will, prior to the expiration of the trust period, and prior to the issue of a fee-simple patent.

"The claim is also made that the Secretary of the Interior had the sole authority to determine who were the heirs of William Wea, regardless of this statute, because the United States has retained the general control of controversies over the title and possession of allotments. Hy-yu-tse-mil-kin v. Smith, 194 U. S. 401, 24 Sup. Ct. 676, 48 L. Ed. 1039; McKay v. Kalyton, 204 U. S. 458, 27 Sup. Ct. 346, 51 L. Ed. 566. It must be conceded that the Secretary has the power to ascertain the heirs of a deceased Indian, when such action is essential to an execution of his powers, such as the issuance of a final patent to the heirs, or the approval of a conveyance by the heirs, as required by statute. Egan v. McDonald, 246 U. S. 227, 38 Sup. Ct. 223, 62 L. Ed. 680; Hallowell v. Commons, 239 U. S. 506, 36 Sup. Ct. 202, 60 L. Ed. 409; Tiger v. Western Investment Co., 221 U. S. 286, 31 Sup. Ct. 578, 55 L. Ed. 738; Oregon v. Hitchcock, 202 U. S. 60, 26 Sup. Ct. 568, 50 L. Ed. 935. But in this case the land had been patented to William Wea, and under the provisions of section 5 of the Act of February 8, 1887, the laws of the state of Kansas regulating the descent and partition of land were made applicable. Wea had died in 1894, and the descent of these lands had been fixed at that time. The title of the heirs was not dependent upon any action of the Secretary of the Interior, because Congress had released its control over the descent or partition of the lands. The ordinary judicial processes of declaring the heirs or of partitioning the land amongst them thereafter applied. Beam v. United States, 162 Fed. 260, 89 C. C. A. 240; United States v. Park Land Co., (C. C.) 188 Fed. 383. See also Finley v. Albner, 129 Fed. 734, 64 C. C. A. 262."

Jurisdiction of federal courts.—This Act does not operate to deprive a federal court of jurisdiction of a suit brought solely to set aside a former decree, which stands as a cloud upon a title to an allotment which has been finally determined by the Secretary of the Interior. Ya-Koot-Sa v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1920) 262 Fed. 398. Regarding the jurisdiction of federal courts in such cases, the court said:

"Act June 25, 1910, 36 Stat. 855, withdrew the jurisdiction which Congress had given to the federal courts to determine claims to allotments and questions of heirship and descent as affecting allotted lands during the trust period, and conferred exclusive jurisdiction thereover upon the Secretary of the Interior. Hallowell v. Commons, 239 U. S. 506, 36 Sup. Ct. 202, 60 L. Ed. 409; Parr v. Colfax, 197 Fed. 302, 117 C. C. A. 48. The power of the courts to deal with those questions was thus abruptly terminated. But that does not meet the question here involved. The suit here is not brought to adjudicate the title of an heir to allotted land. It is brought solely to set aside a former decree, which stands as a cloud upon a title which has been finally determined, by the Secretary of the Interior. The transfer of jurisdiction to the Secretary of the Interior had not the effect to deprive the court below of jurisdiction to set aside its former erroneous decree. In so doing, and in entering the decree which is here appealed from, the court below was not exercising jurisdiction which had been conferred upon the Secretary of the Interior. It was simply setting aside its own decree, which stood as a cloud upon title, and had given rise to adverse claims on the part of the appellants herein, who had harassed the owner of the allotment with several suits."

Vol. III, p. 855, sec. 2. [First ed., 1914 Supp., p. 170.]

State laws of descent superseded as to wills executed under this section.—In Blau-set v. Cardin, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 261 Fed. 309, holding that under this act and the regulations made thereunder by the Secretary of the Interior, a married Quapaw Indian may make a will in Oklahoma, whereby more than two-thirds of the allotted lands, held under a patent from the United States, containing restrictions on alienation, are devised to persons other than the spouse of the testator, notwithstanding Rev. Laws Oklahoma, (1910) § 8341, the court said:

"Before the enactment by Congress this testatrix could not have made a will conveying this land because of the prohibition in the last proviso of this section 8341 of the Oklahoma Laws. The grant of the right to dispose of this property by will is clear and comprehensive; it contains no limitation as to portions of property to be devised nor as to the devisees to be selected, nor other restraint upon the exercise of the power, except that the disposal must be in accord with the regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary of the Interior and that the will must be approved by him. . . . It is conceded that Congress has the right to pass legislation in the interest of the Indians as a dependent people, and that it may control the disposition of the allotments during the period of restriction of alienation. Tiger v. Western Investment Co., 221 U. S. 286, 31 Sup. Ct. 578, 55 L. Ed. 738; Heckman v. United States, 224 U. S. 413, 32 Sup. Ct. 424, 56 L. Ed. 820. The conclusion is that it was the intention of Congress that this class of Indians should have the right to dispose of property by will under this act of Congress, free from restrictions on the part of the state as to the portions to be conveyed or as to the objects of the testator's bounty, provided such wills are in accordance with the regulations and meet the approval of the Secretary of the Interior. We understand this conclusion is in accord with the views of the Supreme Court of Oklahoma. See Brock v. Keifer, 157 Pac. 88."

Vol. III, p. 861, sec. 1. [First ed., 1909 Supp., p. 190.]

Osage Indians.—The United States did not exhaust its power as the protector and guardian of the Osage Indians, by the enactment of the provisions of the Act of June 28, 1906, for the division of the Indian property, so as no longer to have as to them any mission or authority, and notwithstanding the subjection to state taxation of the surplus lands of the noncompetent Osage Indians which was effected by that Act, authority exists in the officers of the United States to invoke judicial relief against the enforcement of state tax assessments against such lands which are asserted to be based upon systematic, arbitrary, grossly excessive, discriminatory, and unfair valuations which amount to a perversion of the state laws, committed in order to defeat the property rights conferred by the federal statute. U. S. v. Osage County, (1919) 251 U. S. 128, 40 S. Ct. 100, 64 U. S. (L. ed.) —, reversing (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1918) 254 Fed. 570, 166 C. C. A. 128.

Effect of act—State administration of estate of deceased Indian.—"Under the Act of Congress approved April 26, 1906, and the decisions of this court subsequently rendered, it is held, that the appointment of an administrator over the estate of a deceased minor Choctaw Indian of one-sixteenth blood, who died intestate, and the allowance of claims against the estate of the deceased by such administrator, and the approval thereof by the county court having jurisdiction over said estate, are proceedings within the grant of power conferred by said Act of Congress on said courts." In re Hibdon, (1920) 78 Okla. 28, 188 Pac. 97.

Construction of Act of April 18, 1912.—In construing the second proviso of section 7 of the Act of Congress of April 18, 1912, c. 83, 37 Stat. pt. 1, p. 86, the same must be construed tantamount to an independent enactment, and has the effect of removing the exemption from taxation on the homestead allotment of an Osage Indian, at the death of the allottee. Hudson v. Hopkins, (1919) 75 Okla. 260, 183 Pac. 507.

Contract in violation of restriction.—"Where, under the Osage Allotment Act (Act of April 18, 1912, ch. 83), a restricted Indian was incapable of alienating his restricted lands, or disposing either of his lands or his Osage trust funds by will, without the approval of the Secretary of the Interior, a court of equity will not enforce a contract to make a will to such property, entered into by such Indian during his lifetime, against his widow and heir, who was not a member of the Osage Tribe of Indians." Wah-hrah-lum-pah v. To-wah-e-he, (1920) 77 Okla. 295, 188 Pac. 106.

Vol. III, p. 862, sec. 2. [First ed., 1909 Supp., p. 191.]

Mandamus to compel Secretary of Interior to place names on rolls.—The Secretary of the Interior cannot be compelled by mandamus to place upon the rolls of the Creek Nation the names of certain persons who, on the last day fixed by statute for the final completion of the rolls, he decided, reversing his prior decision without notice to the Indians, should be excluded from the rolls, with a direction that if they were already on the rolls, which was not the case, they should be stricken off. U. S. v. Payne, (1920) 253 U. S. 209, 40 S. Ct. 513, 64 U. S. (L. ed.) —, affirming (1918) 48 App. Cas. (D. C.) 169.

Vol. III, p. 863, sec. 3. [First ed., 1909 Supp., p. 192.]

Conclusiveness of roll.—"The enrollment record giving the age of an enrolled citizen of the Creek Tribe of Indians as four years of age in September, 1898, is conclusive that he had arrived at that age at some period of time within a year preceding that date, but is not conclusive as to the date of birth." Harris v. Allen, (1920) 78 Okla. 66, 188 Pac. 878.

Vol. III, p. 872, sec. 19. [First ed., 1909 Supp., p. 199.]

"Restrictions."—The term "restrictions" as used in this section and section 5 of the Act of May 27, 1908 (3 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 887) refers to prohibitions against alienation. Barnett v. Kunkel, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 259 Fed. 394, 170 C. C. A. 370.

Conveyance of right to mineral rents.—Under this section and section 20 of this Act, and section 2 of the Act of May 27, 1908, ch. 199 (3 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) p. 883), and the regulations of the Secretary of the Interior promulgated July 7, 1906, June 11, 1907, and April 20, 1908, the exclusive custody and control of mineral rents and profits derived from restricted lands of full-blood tribal Indian citizens of the Five Civilized Tribes is vested in the Secretary of the Interior, subject only to such rules and regulations as he may prescribe, as an independent trust fund, separate and distinct from the trust estate in the land itself, and the rules and regulations referred to show that the Secretary has elected to administer this trust and to retain the custody and control of such funds "until such time or times as the payment thereof is considered best for the benefit of said lessor, or his or her heirs." Hence, a conveyance by an allottee of land together with the rents therefrom is ineffectual to vest the right to mineral rents in the grantee. U. S. v. Hinkle, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 261 Fed. 518.

Power to lease.—"An oral agricultural lease upon the lands of a full-blood Cherokee may be made during the existence of a valid and unexpired lease, for the ensuing year, but only for a fair rental, and near the expiration of a valid lease, that the tenant may know what he has to depend on for the ensuing year, but in no case can the oral lease be for more than one year." Carden v. Humble, (1919) 76 Okla. 165, 184 Pac. 104.

Purpose and effect of Act.—This Act is a revising act, and is intended as a substitute for all former acts relating to the subject of such restrictions, and operated to repeal the provisions of Act Cong. April 26, 1906 (34 Stat. at L. 137, c. 1876), and previous congressional enactments in conflict therewith on the same subject. Grayson v. Thompson, (1920) 77 Okla. 77, 186 Pac. 236.

Mandamus to compel Secretary of Interior to deliver deed.—In U. S. v. Lane, (App. Cas. D. C. 1919) 258 Fed. 520, it was held that where the Secretary of the Interior under this section had removed the restrictions as to the sale of an allottee's land, and a bid for such land had been accepted by the superintendent of the Five Civilized Tribes and the deed executed by the allottee, mandamus would not lie to compel the Secretary of the Interior to deliver the deed to the purchaser on his refusal to do so because of the discovery of oil on nearby land and because of his belief that it would not be to the best interests of the allottee to sell the land.

Vol. III, p. 883, sec. 2. [First ed., 1909 Supp., p. 233.]

Appointment of guardian—Conclusiveness of judgment.—Assuming that section 4, Original Creek Agreement (31 Stat. 863, c. 676), providing that "all guardians or curators appointed for minors and incompetents shall be citizens," was not superseded by the provisions of this Act, still, when the county court appointed L. as guardian of G., a Creek minor, and the records of the county court being silent as to the citizenship of L., it will be presumed the court, in the proper discharge of its duty, upon inquiry, adjudged that L. possessed the requisite qualifications, and such judgment is not subject to collateral attack. Tucker v. Leonard, (1919) 76 Okla. 16, 183 Pac. 907.

Vol. III, p. 884, sec. 3. [First ed., 1909 Supp., p. 233.]

The enrollment records are conclusive as to the age of an Indian and no other evidence on the question is admissible. Langford v. Newsom, (Tex. 1920) 220 S. W. 544, holding further that the records cannot be proved by an unidentified copy.

Vol. III, p. 887, sec. 4. [First ed., 1909 Supp., p. 233.]

Recovery back of amount of taxes paid under protest.—Indian allottees who, through pending suits and otherwise, were objecting and protesting that the collection of certain sums from them by a county as taxes on their allotments was forbidden by a law of Congress, cannot be said to have paid such taxes voluntarily so as to defeat their right to compel restitution, where, notwithstanding such protest, the county demanded payment of the taxes, and by threatening to sell the lands and by actually selling other lands similarly situated made it appear to such allottees that they must choose between paying the taxes and losing their land, with the result that, to prevent a sale and to avoid the imposition of a penalty of 18 per cent, they yielded to the county's demand and paid the taxes, protesting and objecting at the time that the same were illegal. Ward v.

Lowe County, (1920) 253 U. S. 17, 40 S. Ct. 419, 64 U. S. (L. ed.) —, reversing (1918) 68 Okla. —, 173 Pac. 1050, followed in Broadwell v. Carter County, (1920) 253 U. S. 25, 40 S. Ct. 422, 64 U. S. (L. ed.) —, reversing (1918) 71 Okla. —, 175 Pac. 828.

Tax exemption under Creek Supplemental Agreement.—"A purchaser from an Indian cannot claim the benefit of the tax exemption given by the Creek Supplemental Agreement of June 30, 1902 (32 Stat. 500, c. 1323), § 16, requiring each Creek citizen to select a homestead allotment, which shall be non-taxable and inalienable for a specific period, and recognized by the provisions of the Oklahoma Enabling Act and Constitution, which preserved the rights of person and property of the Indians so long as such rights should remain unextinguished, and provided that nothing in the Constitution shall be construed to limit or affect the authority of the United States respecting the Indians or their lands, property, or rights, and exempted from taxation such property as might be exempt by reason of treaty stipulations existing between the Indians and the United States, or by federal laws during the force and effect of such treaties and laws, since, under the act of May 27, 1908 (35 Stat. 312, c. 199), which removed the existing restrictions on the alienation of the homestead allotments, thereby enabling the allottee to sell the land, 'all land from which restrictions have been or shall be removed shall be subject to taxation and all other civil burdens as though it were the property of other persons than allottee.'" Creek County v. Bartlett, (1920) 77 Okla. 282, 188 Pac. 655.

Repeal of previous acts.—This section repeals section 16 of the Supplemental Creek Agreement (Act June 30, 1902, 32 Stat. 500, c. 1323), imposing restrictions on the alienation of homesteads allotted to Creek Indians. Grayson v. Thompson, (1920) 77 Okla. 77, 186 Pac. 236.

Time when section took effect.—This section fixes the restrictions on alienation of allotted land of the Five Civilized Tribes, after the death of the allottee, and there being no expression or inference in the section or act that it was the intent of Congress to postpone the time when said section should take effect, therefore said section became effective May 27, 1908. Seiffert v. Jones, (1919) 77 Okla. 204, 186 Pac. 472, 187 Pac. 223.

Effect and application of section.—This section is prospective rather than retrospective in effect. It applies to conveyances and leases made after its passage and not to those made before. Hence, the Secretary of the Interior has authority to approve and validate a lease of an Indian after her death, where such lease was executed prior to the enactment of this section. Anchor Oil Co. v.

Gray, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 257 Fed. 277, 168 C. C. A. 361. The court said:

"Counsel insist, however, that the Secretary's power to approve the lease ceased because under section 9 of the act of 1908 the death of the lessor removed all restrictions upon alienation of the land. But that removal did not change the status of Jennie Samuels' lease, did not remove the restriction upon the alienation by her, for those restrictions persisted until she died, and she could not alienate her land after her death. She had leased her land, subject only to the approval of the Secretary, and her heirs, so far as her lease was concerned, stepped into her shoes upon her death. The lease estopped them, as it did her, from revoking it or conveying the land free from it, unless the Secretary, in the exercise of his judicial discretion, refused to approve it, and, when he approved it, the estoppel became absolute upon all of them alike."

Power of Congress.—"As to restricted lands, Congress has plenary power thereover as long as the tribal relations exist, until by some act the title thereto is vested by purchase in some party other than the allottee." In re Jessie, (E. D. Okla. 1919) 259 Fed. 694.

Effect of lease prior to enactment of section.—Where an Indian leases land prior to the enactment of this section, the only restrictions on the alienation removed by her death are the restrictions on the alienation of the rights in the land which descended to her heirs upon her death, and those rights are inferior and subject to the rights of the lessees, if the lease is subsequently approved by the Secretary of the Interior under section 20 of the Act of April 26, 1906 (3 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 873). Anchor Oil Co. v. Gray, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 257 Fed. 277, 168 C. C. A. 361, wherein it was said:

"There was nothing in her lease, or in the conduct of the parties to it, to indicate any bad faith or any attempt to evade the restrictions on alienation imposed by the act of Congress, and her lease was neither void nor voidable because the parties made and delivered it subject to the approval of the Secretary before the term of the lease commenced to run. Subject to that approval the parties to this lease, by the execution and delivery thereof, estopped themselves, and those claiming under them with notice of the lease, from denying, revoking, or avoiding it, when approved by the Secretary, except for fraud or mistake; and, when it was approved by the Secretary, as against the parties to it and those claiming under them with notice, it related back to and took effect as of the date of its execution by the parties named therein."

Execution of deed prior to issuance of patent.—An allottee may convey the equitable title under a certificate of allotment, before patent, if the lands are not otherwise subject to restraint against alienation. Thus, the fact that an allottee's heir executes a deed for the allotted land two days before the patent is issued for it, does not render the deed void, where the selection of the allotment has been legally made and approved sometime before. Barnett v. Kunkel, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 259 Fed. 394, 170 C. C. A. 370.

Royalties from mineral lease.—If an Indian allottee dies leaving issue and there is an outstanding mineral lease on his homestead, his issue "are entitled to the use of the interest or income which may be obtained by properly investing the same during their lives, until April 26, 1931, leaving the principal to go to the heirs in general on the termination of their special right; their guardian, appointed in the state probate court, not being entitled to the custody of such royalties without the consent of the Secretary of the Interior." Rogers v. Rogers, (E. D. Okla. 1919) 263 Fed. 160.

State champerty law is not applicable to a transfer of Indian lands authorized by this Act. Canfield v. Jack, (1920) 78 Okla. 127, 188 Pac. 1040.

Jurisdiction to approve deed—Residence of allottee.—Where an enrolled Creek Indian of the full blood was adjudged an incompetent by the county court of Okfuskee county, which appointed a guardian of his person and estate, his attempted change of residence to Seminole county, without the guardian's knowledge or consent, did not change his residence, and at his death in Seminole county he was a resident of Okfuskee county, and in view of this section the county court thereof was the only one authorized to approve a deed from his heirs. Laughlin v. Williams, (1919) 76 Okla. 246, 185 Pac. 104.

Sale to Indian used as decoy.—In U. S. v. Amo, (W. D. Wis. 1919) 261 Fed. 106, it was held that the defendant was lawfully convicted of selling liquor to an Indian, although it was proved that the Indian was hired by a government agent to buy the liquor but without any element of deceit inducing the sale.

Ownership of automobile.—See infra this title, following page.

Amendment.—To same effect as 1918 Supplement annotation, see U. S. v. One Ford Five-Passenger Automobile, (E. D. Okla. 1919) 259 Fed. 645, wherein it was said:

"As to the contention that whilst in the Eastern district, but without what was formerly the Indian Territory, the car was seized in the possession of the respondent, with which he was 'attempting to' or 'about to introduce,' transport and convey from without the state of Oklahoma into that part of the Eastern district of Oklahoma which was formerly the Indian Territory, spirituous, vinous, fermented, and intoxicating liquor, in violation of section 8 of the act of Congress of March 1, 1895 (28 Stat. 697, c. 145), and other acts of Congress in such cases made and provided, and it was, therefore, not within the power of such officer to make such seizure. Section 2140, supra, as amended and supplemented by the various acts hereinbefore referred to, in effect provides that, if any duly authorized officer 'has reason to suspect or is informed that any . . . person . . . is 'about to introduce,' or 'attempting to introduce,' or 'has introduced any spirituous liquor or wine into Indian country or where the introduction is prohibited by treaty or federal statute, whether used by the owner thereof or other person, such automobile shall be seized and delivered to the proper officer and be proceeded against by libel. . . .' Under this record it is to be taken as admitted that such intoxicating liquors were 'about to be introduced,' or that respondent was by means of said automobile 'attempting to introduce' such liquors, into what was formerly the Indian Territory, 'where the introduction is prohibited by treaty or federal statute.' Under this condition the said Brents, a special enforcement officer for the Indian Bureau, was authorized to make the seizure."

Effect of Oklahoma Enabling Act.—In so far as this Act pertains to the introduction of liquors from a point without the state of Oklahoma into that part of Oklahoma which was formerly Indian Territory, it was not impliedly repealed by the Enabling Act of June 16, 1906, and is still in force and effect. Commercial Invest. Trust v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 261 Fed. 330.

Vol. III, p. 919, sec. 1. [First ed., vol. III, p. 384.]

Section not repealed.—To same effect as original annotation, see U. S. v. Luther, (E. D. Okla. 1919) 260 Fed. 579.

1918 Supp., p. 251, sec. 1. [Intoxicating liquors, etc.]

Possession of liquor in the state of Oklahoma is not prima facie evidence under this section of its unlawful introduction. Goff v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 257 Fed. 294, 168 C. C. A. 378.

1918 Supp., p. 260, sec. 1.

"Where the introduction is prohibited," etc.—This phrase applies to and includes that portion of Oklahoma formerly Indian Territory and adopts the prohibition contained in the Act of March 1, 1895, c. 145, § 8 (3 Fed. Stat. Ann. (2d ed.) 917).

Commercial Invest. Trust v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 261 Fed. 330.

Ownership of automobile.—Automobiles or other vehicles or conveyances used in introducing liquor into Indian country in violation of this section, are subject to forfeiture regardless of ownership or of the rights of an innocent mortgagee therein. U. S. v. One Seven-Passenger Paige Car, (E. D. Okla. 1919) 259 Fed. 641. The court said:

"Libelant contends that this is a proceeding in rem, and that the guilty thing is the offender, and that this is to be forfeited irrespective of intervening lienholders. The mortgage stipulates that the mortgagor shall not remove or permit the removal of said property from the county of Oklahoma, and that said mortgagor shall not secretly run off, remove, or conceal, nor attempt to run off, remove or conceal, any of said property, nor permit such an act to be done, and in case said mortgagor shall violate or commit a breach of any of said conditions the mortgagee may declare the mortgage debt due and immediately take possession. It will here be taken as true that the automobile was taken out of Oklahoma county and into the Eastern district of Oklahoma without the consent or connivance of the mortgagee. However, this is no barrier to forfeiture if the statute imposes it. The statute being highly penal, and not in aid of the revenues, it must be strictly construed, and doubts resolved in favor of those against whom it is invoked. No person or case will be held within its terms unless clearly within its letter and legislative intent. A search of the Congressional Record discloses that said provision of the Indian Appropriation Act of March 2, 1917, was offered after the bill had passed the House and was being considered by the Senate in committee of the whole. On page 2052, volume 54, of the Congressional Record, it appears that the fifth amendment thereto was to insert on page 4, line 13, after '$150,000,' the following:

"Provided, that automobiles or any other vehicles or conveyances used in introducing intoxicants into the Indian country in violation of law, whether used by the owner thereof or other person, shall be subject to the seizure, libel, and forfeiture provided in section 2140 of the Revised Statutes of the United States."

"The bill as thus amended went to conference (pages 2931 and 2970, volume 54), and the first report provided that, in lieu of Senate Amendment No. 5 (which was the amendment quoted above), the following amendment be inserted:

"Provided, that automobiles or any other vehicles or conveyances used in introducing, or attempting to introduce, intoxicants into the Indian country, where the introduction is prohibited by treaty or federal statute, whether used by the owner thereof or other person, shall be subject to the seizure, libel, and forfeiture provided in section 2140 of the Revised Statutes of the United States."

"This report was again referred for conference. In the second conference report (pages 3808 and 3811, volume 54) it was provided that in lieu of Senate Amendment No. 5, which has heretofore been set out, the following amendment be substituted:

"Provided, that automobiles or any other vehicles or conveyances used in introducing, or attempting to introduce, intoxicants into the Indian country, or where the introduction is prohibited by treaty or federal statute, whether used by the owner thereof or other person, shall be subject to the seizure, libel, and forfeiture provided in section 2140 of the Revised Statutes of the United States."

"The development of this legislation indicates that this provision was enacted with especial reference to conditions existing in Eastern Oklahoma. The introduction of intoxicating liquors from without the state into that part which was formerly Indian Territory being prohibited by act of Congress, and the manufacture, sale, and transportation of such liquors between points within the state being also prohibited by provision of the state constitution, the rapid growth of cities and industrial and mining centers and general increase in population in said part of the state necessitated the utmost vigilance, fidelity, and efficiency among law enforcers. When section 2140 was first enacted in 1864, the usual mode of travel through the Indian country, frontier settlements, and remote regions was by means of stagecoach, freight wagon, steamboat, and sled. The carrying in such conveyance of intoxicating liquors by a passenger without the consent of its owner then did not work a forfeiture of the conveyance. With the coming of the automobile and its full development different conditions arose. Transportation by express or railroad being practically closed by law and the vigilance of the officers, the introducer and the illicit handler of intoxicants resorted to the automobile as an easy facility for carrying on such prohibited introduction and illicit traffic. If such law violators may encumber such automobiles so as to minimize the actual investment of such introducer the financial hazard of the business is thus reduced. Hence the reason for the terms of the act to include not only automobiles but also to exclude the innocent lienholder from any protection in such forfeiture."

The question whether the text paragraph "extends to the property of an innocent person; that is, a person not connected with the act of unlawful introduction," was decided in the affirmative in Commercial Invest Trust v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 261 Fed. 330, where judgment subjecting to forfeiture an automobile as against a claimant holding a lien on the same, who was innocent of its wrongful use, was affirmed, the court saying: "Under old section 2140 of the Revised Statutes only the interest of the offending person was subject to forfeiture. This was manifest by the plain terms of the action itself. "Paragraph 4 of the Act of March 2, 1917, under which this proceeding is brought, contains the following provision: 'Whether used by the owner thereof or other person.' It is very evident that it was the intent of Congress to extend the power of seizure, libel, and forfeiture beyond the terms of the old section of the statute. This act of Congress authorizes a proceeding against the property so used itself. The offense attaches to the property; the property being the offender, in that it is the means of violating the law. Statutes such as this, and this one in particular, are directed at the means and methods used in the accomplishing of the violation of the statute, and are within the well-recognized jurisdiction and authority of the Congress of the United States."

Exclusive jurisdiction of federal court.—Where an automobile is seized under the provisions of this section, the federal court acquires exclusive jurisdiction thereby, and a subsequent seizure of the automobile under process from a state court is void. Ford v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 260 Fed. 657, 171 C. C. A. 421.

Allegations in libel.—A libel for the forfeiture of an automobile under this section need not show that the intoxicating liquor was being introduced into the Indian country. Ford v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1919) 260 Fed. 657, 171 C. C. A. 421.

1918 Supp., p. 264, sec. 1.

Indictment — Sufficiency.—An indictment for a violation of this section need not allege the particular location in the Indian country where the defendant is charged to have had possession of intoxicating liquors. U. S. v. Luther, (E. D. Okla. 1919) 260 Fed. 579.

1918 Supp., p. 267, sec. 1.

Validity of Act.—"The Act of Congress of June 14, 1918 (40 Stat. 606, c. 101), entitled "An act to provide for a determination of heirship in cases of deceased members of the Cherokee, Choctaw, Chickasaw, Creek, and Seminole Tribes of Indians in Oklahoma, conferring jurisdiction upon district courts to partition lands belonging to full-blood heirs of allottees of the Five Civilized Tribes, and for other purposes," is not unconstitutional and void, nor in contravention of sections 1 and 2, art. 3, of the Constitution of the United States, but is a proper and lawful exercise of the political and administrative power and duty of Congress to legislate for restricted Indians of the Five Civilized Tribes concerning their property during the continuance of the national guardianship over such restricted Indians." State v. Huser, (1919) 76 Okla. 130, 184 Pac. 113. The court further said: "The plenary authority of Congress to legislate for full-blood members of the Five Civilized Tribes concerning their restricted lands cannot be limited or impaired by the Constitution or laws of the state, and section 12, art. 7, of the state constitution, does not prohibit the county courts from exercising the authority conferred on said courts by the Act of Congress of June 14, 1918."

County courts as federal agency.—In In re Jessie, (E. D. Okla. 1919) 259 Fed. 694, regarding the powers of the County Court under this act, the court said: "The act of June 14, 1918, applying only to restricted lands and to full-blood members of such existing tribes, was a valid exercise of legislative power by Congress. In conferring this authority upon the county courts of the state, it is presumed that Congress considered the provisions of the state constitution. The county court in such capacity is, in effect, a federal agency, acting with the same result as if it was done by the Superintendent of the Five Civilized Tribes, the Commissioner of the Land Office, or the Secretary of the Interior."

Nature of power of county court.—"The power and authority conferred on the county courts by said act, though it involves the exercise by said courts of judicial or quasi judicial power, is not strictly judicial, but is administrative and ministerial, and in determining, pursuant to said act, as a question of fact who are the heirs of any deceased citizen allottee of the Five Civilized Tribes, the court merely finds the facts and fixes the status, which finding, when material to the question at issue, is conclusive and binding upon the state courts and upon the administrative officers of the national government in determining questions arising under acts of Congress to which it is applicable. The act, however, does not deprive the district courts of this state of jurisdiction of suits involving lands allotted to an Indian of the Five Civilized Tribes who may die or may have heretofore died leaving restricted heirs, where such suit necessarily includes the determination of the title, and, incidentally, the question of fact as to who are the heirs of said deceased allottee." State v. Huser, (1919) 76 Okla. 130, 184 Pac. 113.

Determination of heirship.—The county or probate courts of Oklahoma may determine heirship except where such determination would contravene the state constitution. In re Jessie, (E. D. Okla. 1919) 259 Fed. 694. Regarding the jurisdiction of such courts, it was said:

"At common law an administrator had nothing to do with the lands of his intestate. Under the statutes of this state the only power an administrator has to control the lands of the intestate is for the purpose of collecting the rents and profits, and under order of court to sell the realty, for the purpose of paying debts; the personal estate and lands and profits being insufficient."

"The county or probate court having jurisdiction of an estate for the purpose of administration may as an incident, when necessary, exercise such probate jurisdiction to determine the heirs of the intestate. So may the district or superior courts of the state, in exercising jurisdiction for the recovery of the possession of real estate in order to adjudicate the title, as an incident thereto, determine heirship."

But the court further said:

"When a conveyance from a full-blood member of the Five Civilized Tribes, approved by the county court without the determination of heirship, vests rights in allotted lands of such tribes in the grantees, no letters testamentary or administration having been granted and the time limited by the laws of this state for the institution of proceedings therefor having elapsed without such application having been begun, as well as in cases where there exists no lawful ground for the institution of such proceedings in such court, the county court [in view of art. 7, sec. 12 of the state constitution] then has not the power to determine heirship in so far as it affects such title theretofore vested in such grantee or his assigns."

1918 Supp., p. 268, sec. 2.

Jurisdiction of state courts—Partition proceedings.—Under this section the courts of a state have jurisdiction of partition proceedings between Indian heirs of less than full blood. Salmon v. Johnson, (1920) 78 Okla. 182, 189 Pac. 537.

INTERNAL REVENUE

Vol. III, p. 1028, sec. 3220. [First ed., vol. III, p. 597.]

Application for abatement of tax assessed as tantamount to appeal to commissioner.—An application for an abatement of the tax assessed, made before payment, and its denial, is not tantamount to an appeal to the commissioner as required by this section, because an appeal for a refund cannot be made until the tax is paid, and an action does not accrue until payment and rejection of the application for refund. Rock Island, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (1918) 54 Ct. Cl. 22.

Vol. III, p. 1034, sec. 3226. [First ed., vol. III, p. 601.]

Appeal as condition precedent.—An application to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue for the refund of an excise tax alleged to have been erroneously and illegally assessed and collected is a condition precedent to maintenance of a suit against the United States. Rock Island, etc., R. Co. v. U. S., (1918) 54 Ct. Cl. 22.

Vol. III, p. 1037, sec. 3227. [First ed., vol. III, p. 603.]

Effect of Act of July 27, 1912.—The Act of July 27, 1912, 37 Stat. 240 (see vol. IV, p. 236) providing for the refunding of any internal revenue tax erroneously assessed and collected under the Act of June 13, 1898, 30 Stat. 448, is a remedial statute for the relief of a certain class of persons, and is in no way affected by the internal revenue law or the statute of limitations contained in this section. It is in no sense an extension of the remedy under the internal revenue law to recover for taxes illegally collected. Union Trust Co. v. U. S., (1919) 54 Ct. Cl. 43.

Vol. III, p. 1038, sec. 3229. [First ed., vol. III, p. 604.]

Delinquencies under income tax laws.—The Commissioner of Internal Revenue, with the advice and consent of the Secretary of the Treasury, is authorized to compromise claims for penalties imposed and interest charged against taxpayers for delinquencies under the income tax laws in all cases where, in his judgment, such compromises are for the interest of the United States. (1919) 31 Op. Atty-Gen. 459, wherein it was said: "Opinions of my predecessors touching the nature and extent of the power of the commissioner to make compromises are more or less conflicting and it will not, I think, serve any useful purpose to review and attempt to reconcile them. I have given them, as well as all decisions of the courts bearing in any way on the question, careful consideration and will content myself with stating my conclusions."

"Your request does not relate to compromises of taxes, but only to penalties and interest imposed on account of delinquencies of the taxpayer. I shall accordingly confine my opinion to penalties and interest."

"It seems clear that Congress has left it to the judgment and discretion of the commissioner to determine when it is to the interest of the United States to compromise such claims instead of commencing or prosecuting suits therefor, and that the only limitation placed upon the exercise of this judgment and discretion is that his action shall be with the advice and consent of the cabinet officers mentioned in the statute. And I am of opinion that, subject to this limitation, he has the power to compromise the penalties and interest mentioned in the request for his opinion whenever, in his judgment, such compromises are for the interest of the United States. Congress has not said that such compromises may be made only when in the judgment of the commissioner more money can thereby be realized than can be realized by commencing and prosecuting a suit. It cannot be said, therefore, as a matter of law, that the power to compromise is limited to cases in which either the liability for the penalty or the collectibility of the claim is doubtful. In these matters I think the judgment of the commissioner as to what is for the interest of the United States is made conclusive. What considerations shall control are fixed by no rule of law, but depend upon his own discretion and sound judgment exercised in good faith. It may be that with respect to the amount of tax to be collected, or the amount of penalty resulting from wilful fraud, the commissioner may never find a case in which he will feel justified in accepting less than can be legally collected, whereas in cases of penalties resulting from accident, negligence, or technical omission, he may honestly believe that the interests of the United States will be best served by accepting less than the full penalty. In such cases, I am of opinion that he has the right to compromise upon any ground which, in his judgment, renders the compromise for the interest of the United States."

Effect on criminal proceeding.—If an offer of compromise for failure to file an income tax return in accordance with section 1004 of the Act of Oct. 3, 1917 (1918 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. 384), is made and accepted by the internal revenue authorities, under this section, no criminal proceedings can thereafter be successfully prosecuted for failure to pay the tax. Rau v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1919) 260 Fed. 131, 171 C. C. A. 167. The court said:

"The defendant endeavored to establish that he offered to compromise and that he paid his check for the tax found to be due, together with the penalty, and that this was accepted in compromise of the criminal responsibility. He was entitled to urge this as a defense. We are of the opinion that the district judge disregarded this right which the defendant had as a defense of the criminal prosecution. The district judge evidently was of the opinion that the defendant could not defend upon the theory that he had compromised the criminal prosecution, for he stated: 'It makes no difference as to whether he has paid the tax or not.' This and similar remarks occur frequently in the record. For example, the court said: 'I will instruct this jury that it makes no difference whether the amount of the tax which had been agreed upon here was paid or not, so far as the criminal liability of the defendant is concerned.' And again: 'And so it is here—that if this man had committed a violation of the law at the time he made his offer in compromise or settlement, if you find that he willfully failed to file his income tax return under all the evidence of the case beyond a reasonable doubt,

I instruct you that such tender of payment would not affect such criminal liability.'

"This position was taken by the court in reference to other efforts made by the defendant to offer his defense of a compromise of the criminal prosecution. It is presented by offers of evidence and questions asked of witnesses, to which objections were sustained, tending to show that a compromise was in fact made. Much of this evidence was erroneously excluded by the trial judge.

"The defendant testified that —

"At the time of the presentation of the check, Mr. Bowden told me that there would be no further proceedings of any kind or character, that the offer of $324.62, the receipt of the government for that, the offer of $250 in compromise, that in consideration of that there would be no proceedings, no indictment; nothing would be done whatever.'

"He was then asked if it was on that condition that he paid the money, and his answer thereto, 'I did,' was stricken out upon objection by the United States attorney. Defendant then attempted to trace the money to the Treasury Department, and endeavored to show that it was never returned; by this making an effort to establish it was received by the United States Treasury after approving the compromise, and this was excluded.
